HOW THE 44,000 SEATS ARE ARRANGED

HE Pageant and Masque of St. Louis, in every way the greatest stage production ever attempted in America, will have its presentation Thursday, beginning at 6:30 . and continuing until 10, in the open air hitheater formed by Art Hill, in western st Park. It will be repeated Friday, Satur- and next Sunday at the same hours.

he stage, more than an acre and a half in , is the largest ever built anywhere. The hitheater, which contains seats for 44,000 ctators, and sitting or standing room for near- as many more, is the largest and, it is be- ed, the best adapted for such a purpose, which city possesses. The producing company—ap- ximately 7500 actors, singers and musicians— he largest ever organized in this country. The t of the production is $125,000.

Not only in numbers and dimensions, but in toric interest and artistic merit, the St. Louis oduction will be notable. The Pageant, pro- ced by daylight, is a reproduction of the chief ents in the history of St. Louis, from the days the Mound Builders to the Civil War.

The Masque, produced after dark, presents in etic symbolism, and with splendid scenic ef- cts, the past achievements and the destiny of Louis and of the American nation.

Thomas Wood Stevens, head of the School of ama in the Carnegie Institute, Pittsburg, wrote e Pageant, and Percy MacKaye, distinguished et and dramatist, who outlined the plan of the ole production, and its division into Pageant Masque, wrote the book of the Masque. The geant is in blank verse and dramatic prose, Masque in blank verse, with occasional ymed poetry.

hat the Pageant Celebrates.

THE Pageant will be a celebration of the 150th anniversary of the founding of St. Louis. Its purpose is to show in striking m the city's history, its ideals and aspirations, d to unite residents of all parts of St. Louis, rsons of varying occupations, interests and ans, in "playing" together, that they may work gether for the city's advancement.

That was the chief idea of the men who took the plan of the Pageant and Masque, which ew out of an eirlier and less comprehensive an for a civic drama last year. John H. Gund- ch, chairman of the Executive Committee, uther Ely Smith, secretary, and William W. Beaume, chairman of the Productions Commit- e, have been tireless unsalaried workers, for onths past, for the success of the Pageant, and energetic body of business and professional en and women has given time and energy to e various details of finance, cast, publicity, en- rtainment and other necessary committee work.

But while the Pageant and Masque were lanned primarily for the people of St. Louis, is certain that many thousands of visitors from utside the city will come here to see the great ivic drama. Heads of wholesale houses, who ave salesmen in the St. Louis trade territory, d railroad ticket agents report that the great- st crowd of visitors since the World's Fair of 0 years ago, is to be expected.

For the comfort and convenience of these isitors, bureaus of information will be main- ained in Union Station and in Washington av- nue McKinley depots. Policemen and street ar conductors have had special instruction in he main facts as to the Pageant—how to get e being the chief point.

Official Guests Coming.

the visitors will be 200 or more l guests. These consist of envoys other American cities and from n countries to the Masque, who are to the Conference of Cities, begin- morning, and the Mayors and heads l organizations of Missouri cities and have been invited to occupy special e Pageant and Masque.

(not including the Masque) is di- periods, or movements. The first time of the Mound Builders, or prehistoric Indians. The arrival of buffalo, and the transformation of the agricultural Indians into a race of nomad hunters, is shown. Then the Indians of a later period appear, and later De Soto and his men, Joliet, Pere Marquette and La Salle.

At the end of the first movement, a prophet appears at the right of the stage, and utters a prophecy, in blank verse, of the downfall of the red men and the coming of the white man to rule the land.

The Fighting Mme. Rigouche.

THE second movement begins with the coming of Pierre Laclede and his stepson, Auguste Chouteau, the founders of St. Louis. The settlers follow, and the Spanish and French periods of the city's history are shown. The chief scene in this movement is the defense of the town by the Spaniards against the British and Indians in 1780, with the French school mistress, Mme. Rigouche, fighting beside the men. Another striking scene is the singing of French revolutionary songs in the streets by "Sansculettes," local sympathizers of the French insurgents. The second movement ends with the "day of the three flags," when the Spanish and American flags, within a short period, floated over St. Louis, the American flag going up to stay as the Louisiana Purchase is proclaimed.

A watchman, on the stockade at the left of the stage, then utters a poetic vision of the drama of immigration and nation building which is to come, through the influx of the pioneers into the West.

The third movement will be timed to begin as daylight is fading. In the twilight glow, the procession of pioneers will be seen passing westward —Lewis and Clark, Boone and his family, people; boats, wagons horses and oxen. The General Pike, the first steamboat, steams up to the wharf. The visit of Gen. Lafayette, the dedication of the Old Cathedral, the return of Battery A from the Mexican War and last, a torchlight procession in the bitter campaign of 1860, are represented. The period of war is represented by a musical passage depicting strife, and the Pageant closes with the news of peace.

At the conclusion of the Pageant, the audience will have received a clear idea of the history of St. Louis. The Masque, which will be produced by artificial light, will treat in symbolic and poetic fashion of the matters which the Pageant has treated in historic detail, and will go on to portray the spirit and tendencies of the present and the future.

In the Pageant, each actor represents some definite character. In the Masque, the chief actors represent tribes, peoples, spirits and forces of nature. The chief actor will be Saint Louis, clad in the armor of a crusader knight, and other principal figures will be Gold, the Mississippi River, Cahokia, representing the ancient Indian civilization, the Pioneers, the World Adventures, the continents of the world and the cities of America, including Canada and Latin-American states. Music will have an important part in this symbolic interpretation.

Old Chief Cahokia Mourns.

THE Masque begins with the figure of Cahokia, lamenting the downfall of the Mound Builders' civilization, dreaming of the future and awaiting the coming of better things. The wild nature forces defy him, and Heat and Cold threaten to destroy him. But, in answer to his petition, the spirits of the stars and of the Milky Way bid him to hope. Then comes the Mississippi, bearing a star-child with a sword in his hand.

The wild nature forces seek to overcome the child, but are held back in wonder by his glittering sword. Then, as the approach of the discoverers is heard, the wild nature forces retreat, and the nations enter. The star-child is christened Saint Louis, and his mission of civilization is revealed.

The second part of the Masque opens with the coming of the Pioneers, who call on Saint Louis, now grown to manhood, to lead them against the earth forces, led by Gold. A pioneer, selected by Saint Louis as a champion, wrestles with Gold, and is first overcome, but when the star is fixed upon his brow, he overcomes Gold. Gold withdraws, threatening to return and he does return after the arrival of the World Adventurers. With him he brings the War Demon, who engages in a mounted tournament, with lance and sword, with one of the World Adventurers. The demon is finally overcome, but Gold whirls him away.

The wail of Poverty is next heard, and the forms of Shame, Vice, Plague, Dumbness, Despair and Rebellion appear. A hooded figure is pointed out as their father, and St. Louis unmasks this figure, showing him to be Gold. The despairing figures call on Saint Louis to save them, and he calls upon the cities of America to aid him. The cities, represented by their envoys, then appear and join Saint Louis. Imagination points the way to victory, which is to come through Love, represented by a child. Through the unifying influence of Love, Gold is conquered, and the League of American Cities is declared triumphant.

You Should Read the Book.

THE utmost effort will be made to make all the audience hear all the words. If wind conditions are favorable, the management believes this can be done, for the Art Hill amphitheater is a natural sounding board. But if a part of the audience fails to hear the words, or all the audience fails to hear a part of them, the pantomime will be so vivid that, it is believed, everyone will understand it. Author Stevens says it will be easier to follow than the ordinary motion picture scenario.

A preliminary reading of the book of the Pageant and Masque, now on sale at 25 cents a copy, is the best preparation for seeing the drama.

The music of the Pageant was composed by Noel Poepping, except the March of the Pioneers, which is E. R. Kroeger's composition. Frederick S. Converse composed all the Masque music. The Masque music includes the ancient Latin hymn, "Veni, Creator," (Come, O Creator).

The figure of Cahokia and the menacing figures of Heat and Cold in the Masque, will be gigantic dummies, whose lines will be spoken by men behind or inside.

The problem of meals on Pageant evenings is one which St. Louisans and visitors will have to solve in their own way. Some St. Louisans plan to take lunches and eat them between the Pageant and the Masque. Sandwiches and coffee will be on sale near the seating inclosure. Those holding reserved seats can leave them for lunch without fearing the loss of them. Those in the free seats who leave them for any purpose will be likely to lose their Important Things to Remember About the Pageant.

PRONOUNCE it "Padgent," with the "a" sounded as in "badge."

The Pageant will begin at 6:30 each evening, Thursday, Friday, Saturday and next Sunday, and will continue until dark. After a short interlude, the Masque will be produced by artificial light, continuing until about 10.

EACH PERFORMANCE IS COMPLETE AND EVERY NIGHT'S PERFORMANCE WILL BE THE SAME.

One-half the 44,000 seats will be free to the first comers. The other half has been reserved, and these reserved seats are being sold at the Pageant ticket office, 816 Olive street, and a number of branch offices. Prices, 25 cents to $1.50 for single seats for one night. Boxes (seat 6), $15 a performance. The seats take up hardly more than one-half the hillside space, and the rest will be free standing or sitting room.

On Pageant days, take University-Olive, Delmar-Olive or Union cars to De Balliviere (east) entrance, near Jefferson Memorial; Page and Hamilton cars to Skinker road (west) entrance; Market street cars to Tamm avenue (south) entrance.

AUTOMOBILES WILL NOT BE PERMITTED IN WESTERN PART OF PARK OR ON LINDELL AND BERLIN AVENUE, WEST OF UNION AVENUE.

Persons walking from car lines will be in no danger from automobiles. Automobiles in eastern part of park must obey traffic rules, running only one direction on any driveway.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

Tyranny in Army and Navy.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

Our dead have come back from Vera Cruz and the nation has risen to do them reverence.

No less a person than the President of the United States has spoken their funeral oration. Yet we read that they were privates or ordinary seamen. If the dead bodies of "privates" and "common seamen" are worth all this honor—and nobody doubts that they are—what about the living privates and ordinary seamen? Shall we still keep on treating them like dogs and vermin, as is at present the custom?

Our army posts and our navy are where American snobbery has reached its hideous flowering. I was at San Antonio when the troops were there three years ago, and the tales that I heard there about the treatment of enlisted men made my blood boil. During the present administration, which is putting up a brave fight for the rights of common men, I believe orders have been given for the younger officers to moderate their superciliousness, and let us hope that this public demonstration of respect for the dead common soldier may better the condition of his comrades left alive.

While we are fussing over our navy and our war machinery, wouldn't it be well to remember that men fight best who have something to fight for, and that snobbishness has never been a characteristics of successful Generals? England's men were a disagreeable surprise to her in the Boer War, and if we were to have a conflict with one of the great Powers we might find that we needed men and not troops converted into menials by long ill-treatment.

Hurrah for the rights of common men and for their best defender, President Wilson!

A WOMAN READER.

The Law and the Dog.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

There has been so much biting in St. Louis, the following Wisconsin Supreme Court decision is interesting:

"Where a complaint alleges that a dog attacked and wounded a person who at the time was where he might lawfully be and in the exercise of ordinary care it is unnecessary to go further and allege that the dog was vicious or mischievous. Such a dog is necessarily vicious, and a separate allegation to that effect is unnecessary. The law no longer 'allows a dog his first bite,' as was said to be the case before the passage of the law abolishing proof of scienter."

This, surely, is protective law, but I am still advising metallic leggings for mail carriers and delivery men.

ALTRUIST.

False Weights and Measures.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

In re above, you voice a lack of knowledge which but repeats what I have heard many times before from other sources.

The inspectors of the Weights and Measures Department number six, divided into three squads, who must cover this great city twice a year and inspect each and every scale, measure, penny slot weigh machine, street scales and so forth, in every grocery, beanery, drug store, cigar and candy shop, large manufactory, feed store, etc. Did you ever stop to consider how many there are of these? And think of the princely salary and emoluments of their office!

Rockefeller would jump at one of these "easy" political grafts. Two men are paid $50, two draw $75 and two at $83.33 per month, all doing the same class of work. Why the distinction? Because an antiquated ordinance or charter adopted a lifetime ago provides this. They should all be on the same basis and get what they are worth—at least $90 or $100—together with an increase in force.

IAMNOT J. W. G.

Mr. Delbridge Ready to Explain.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

The operation of street cars for private profit upon the streets of St. Louis has brought about conditions that will not longer be tolerated. The system has "been tried and found wanting" in every possible and conceivable way. The city of St. Louis is going to operate the car service for the benefit of the people, as it now operates the fire department, the water works, the public schools. This can be done at a cost of one cent per passenger or less.

There are no serious financial, legal or other obstacles in the way. All that is necessary is a seriously and determinedly expressed desire by the people and the work can be put under way within 48 hours. Furthermore, this method will almost wholly eliminate the injuring and killing of people on public streets by street cars.

If you will assure audience of not less than 50 people—men, women and children—and make your application to M. Sheridan Webster, Room 611, at 810 Olive street, it will be a pleasure to fully explain every feature of the question. I will need about an hour to make the address.

113 Market street. C. L. DELBRIDGE.

FORWARD OR BACKWARD—WHICH?

The speeches at the City Club in appreciation of the work of the Board of Freeholders were suggestive of the duty of St. Louis voters who want the city to go forward.

Park Commissioner Davis called attention to the laws made by Boston and Cleveland, which are closely pressing St. Louis, under progressive charters. The whole country, he said, is watching the action of St. Louis on the new charter.

Frank P. Crunden said that commercial St. Louis has outstripped municipal St. Louis which needs the efficient government provided in the new charter.

Col. Fred Gardner used an apt illustration when he referred to the man who had searched far and wide for diamonds and found them on his own place. We have only to develop our own resources in order to enjoy prosperity.

The country is watching St. Louis. Knowledge of the handicaps under which the city suffers is widespread. The judgment of the country as to the future of St. Louis and as to its advantages as a business city and a place of residence will be determined largely by the actions of the voters on the charter and the free bridge. If we do not go forward we will fall back.

CONSUL SILLIMAN'S ESCAPE.

It has been a difficult situation because so many of the elements have been without our control and our territory. We were forced to sit and watch and wait such developments as might be. I have known for months that some such thing could happen and my prayer has been that it might not be a calamity.—President Wilson.

Injury either by accident or design to Vice-Consul J. R. Silliman of Saltillo would have been such a calamity in the present delicacy of Mexican relations. His fortunate escape through many perils relieves anxiety and removes one possible cause of increased tension at a moment when such tension would be deplorable.

BECKER'S SECOND CONVICTION.

We may be glad that the carnival of perjury on both sides in the Becker case is ended. That the defense were unprepared for the verdict is shown by their whole conduct of the case. Their fatuous self-deception as to the strength of the prosecution was as great as during the first trial.

Unsatisfactory as many of the people's witnesses were, they helped in establishing a set of facts which the defense could not controvert, especially by other witnesses of about the same character. An audacious directing head with an impelling motive became a necessity to account for these incontestible facts. The best defense would have been found in testimony pointing with equal clearness to direction and motive on the part of another. This being impossible and there being no doubt that Rosenthal was killed, certainty as to Becker's guilt became inescapable in the minds of the jurymen.

The verdict will assist powerfully in the cleanup of the New York police. Murder and other forms of lawlessness will cease to be merely "conventional crimes" when committed by members of the police force.

A MID-VICTORIAN ACCOMPLISHMENT.

Perhaps a good many of us could spell 700 different words, if we were permitted to pick the 700 ourselves, but Wesley Dickson, boss speller of Fayetteville and the surrounding regions of St. Clair County, Illinois, was not permitted to do his own picking. The 700 he spelled correctly were picked for him and picked with special reference to testing his orthographic skill—every word a representative of dozens of less difficult words of which his orthographic mastery was conceded.

Wesley's aspiration to excel in a branch of learning now deemed archaic and even pedantic is the more meritorious because the incentives to excel in it are so few. We venture the opinion, hopelessly mid-Victorian as it must appear, that he will derive quite as much mental discipline from it as he could from showier branches assigned a much more important place in the public school curriculum. In addition, he is gaining an accomplishment that will be of considerable practical use to him in after life, which is more than can be said of some of those other more showy branches.

If we should pronounce a criticism it would be that in acquiring confidence as to 700 hard words, each one representing a numerous class of easier words, he is rather carrying the thing to extreme. Observation justifies the statement that the total vocabulary over which the average citizen is successful in maintaining a confident orthographic mastery is considerably less than 700 words.

THE NEW FREEDOM.

At last it has come. Our hope had never grown faint. We were sure in the faith that some day there would arise a woman strong enough, sweet enough, honest enough to ask the question. Our faith has been justified; our weary waiting ends. In the Mothers' Magazine for June—month of brides and, presumably, bridegrooms, of blowing blooms and wedding marches—Darra More asks: "Are You Treating Your Husband Fairly?"

We hope Darra has one; but his existence or nonexistence shall not compel us to tack a title to her name. She shall ever be just plain Darra to us—or rather beautiful, lovely and adorable Darra. We feel like writing sonnets and love letters to celebrate her appearance in our consciousness. In reading the title of her article we recognize a soul affinity.

We have not read the article—that is a matter between Darra and her sisters; we do not feel equal to entering the sewing room of their conference, or listening at the keyhole. It is enough for us that Darra is bringing home to the wives the vital question. Far be it from us to assert, insinuate, or, by inuendo, suggest that wives do not treat their husbands fairly. Our gratification arises from an entirely different cause.

Years ago, in the early dawn of the matriarchial age, which is now in the flush of sunrise, Woman's Pages and Woman's Magazines called upon us to consider our duty as husbands, advised how we might make wives' days happier by cheer at the breakfast table and a hearty kiss of farewell at the door, by gifts of flowers and the remembering of anniversaries, by continuing into matrimony the attentions and ardor of courtship, by continuing to chase the street car after we had caught it. It was borne in upon us that we were as a sex graceless, unmannerly toward our wives, grouchy and afflicted with tightwaditis.

Today the humiliation under which this left us is lifted. We read Darra More's wonderful title and in our mind's eye see her shaking a finger of admonition at the other sex, demanding—as we long ago lost the power to demand—"Are you treating your husband fairly?" And she does it in the printed page, which is wise, for not until she is finished may her sisters who are our wives talk back.

DIFFERENT TRADE COMMISSIONS.

A Post-Dispatch reader accuses us of inconsistency because in one editorial we condemn the plan of trust regulation through a trade commission suggested by Dr. Van Hise, and in another we urge the adoption of the administration's trust bills, one of which provides for a trade commission.

The trade commission advocated by Dr. Van Hise and President Wilson are similar only in name. Dr. Van Hise would empower a trade commission to regulate interstate business, while President Wilson's commission has no regulative power. Its function would be to obtain information about interstate business and corporations and to act in an advisory capacity. It would be a bureau of information for the President and the Congress and also for business men. It would be charged with the duty of recommending legislation or action affecting interstate business.

An informatory and advisory commission of the Wilson kind is a different body from the Roosevelt and Van Hise regulatory commission, which would legalize trade monopolies and put them in partnership with the Government at Washington. One is democratic and the other is plutocratic.

HUERTA'S STATECRAFT OF MURDER.

Glimpses behind the scenes at Mexico City are afforded us with the appearance of Dr. Aureliano Urrutia at Vera Cruz as a fugitive.

He was the Huerta Secretary of the Interior whose duty it was for seven months to sign the death warrants of those whose removal by murder was decreed. He admits that Senator Dominguez, who led the opposition to Huerta in the Congress afterward jailed as a body, was killed. He admits that Senator Rendon, Madero's loyal supporter, and others whose only crime was following political ideals higher than those exemplified by Huerta were killed. The numbers of those whose innocent blood stained the usurper's hands were so great the doctor was unable to keep a count.

One charge is that Dr. Urrutia's sanitarium on the outskirts of the capital was converted from an agency of health to an agency of speedy, certain death. Leaders suspected by Huerta were sent there for the "rest cure." Many of them never emerged alive. These are details that recall the sinister statecraft of Venice, of other medieval Italian republics.

The view that our Government blundered in not recognizing Huerta is singularly persistent.

American refugees from Mexico emphasize it. It is encountered occasionally even among intelligent persons in this country. Instances are triumphantly cited in which we have been less circumspect about recognizing Latin-American Presidents who have risen by revolution.

None will be left who admit this view when the full history of the regime that began with Madero's murder and was perpetuated by assassination is known. The victims of quick death were dealt with more mercifully than those thrown into filthy prisons. The Americans liberated 350 of them from San Juan de Ulloa when Vera Cruz was captured.

The grim old usurper has some qualities we must admire. But the detestation in which the tool Urrutia is held evidences the detestation in which the ruthless principal must be held by right-thinking people. Somber as is the fate that seems to be in store for him, we must be prepared to admit, when his downfall comes, that it is not unjust and undeserved.

MR. MELLEN'S BOSSES.

No one man could control (the New Haven). I had more bosses when I was president of the New Haven at $60,000 a year than when I was a clerk at $50 a month.—Mr. Mellen.

But his own testimony consists largely of repetitions of the idea that he had only one boss who really bossed.

THRIFTY WASTERS.

The Society for Thrift—one of those numberless organizations created to provide means for living without real work—is asking Congress for $50,000 of the people's money to spend in railroad fares and hotel bills for its members to enable them to hold an International Talk-fest at San Francisco next year.

This society has for some months been sending costly circulars and phamplets to the newspapers on the subject supposed to be dear to its heart. The newspaper man who receives them, being of a thrifty turn of mind, hates to see so much labor, time and money expended on a futility. Knowing that those who want to be thrifty will be, and that those who don't want to or cannot practice thrift can't be preached into doing so, he consigns the Thrift literature to the waste basket and turns to something more practical.

The Thrift literature does not preach thrift to railway magnates, who sadly need it. Of course it refrains from suggesting thrift to those who, by practicing thrift at other people's expense have accummulated "tainted" millions. Its message is to the masses who can, as things go, barely make ends meet. Why should the taxpayers give it $50,000 to gallivant to San Francisco and repeat this lecture?

THEY say that Summer from her hiding looks,
And pretty flowers bloom beside the brooks.
I did not know; it may be as they say—
I know no more than books and still more books.

ABOUT the season and its sweet perfumes,
I cannot say, nor if the bittern booms
Its morning greeting as it used to do—
But this I do know, that the novel blooms.

THAT hardy grower which is never lost
Survives the season and the tardy frost,
And lo! the fruit is laid upon the plate
Of criticism at whatever cost.

THE red, red novel falls about like rain—
That early product of the hothouse brain
That having traversed one had rather die
Than tempt the desert of its plot again.

OF such sad stuff has this my Spring become,
That dreamed of daffodils, the flowered plum,
The dogwood gleaming, and the trumpet vine
Waving its banners where the flickers drum.

O WOE is me, and this my bitter gall—
That reading twenty, what does one recall?
Nothing, perhaps; or at the best but this—
The couple did get married, after all.

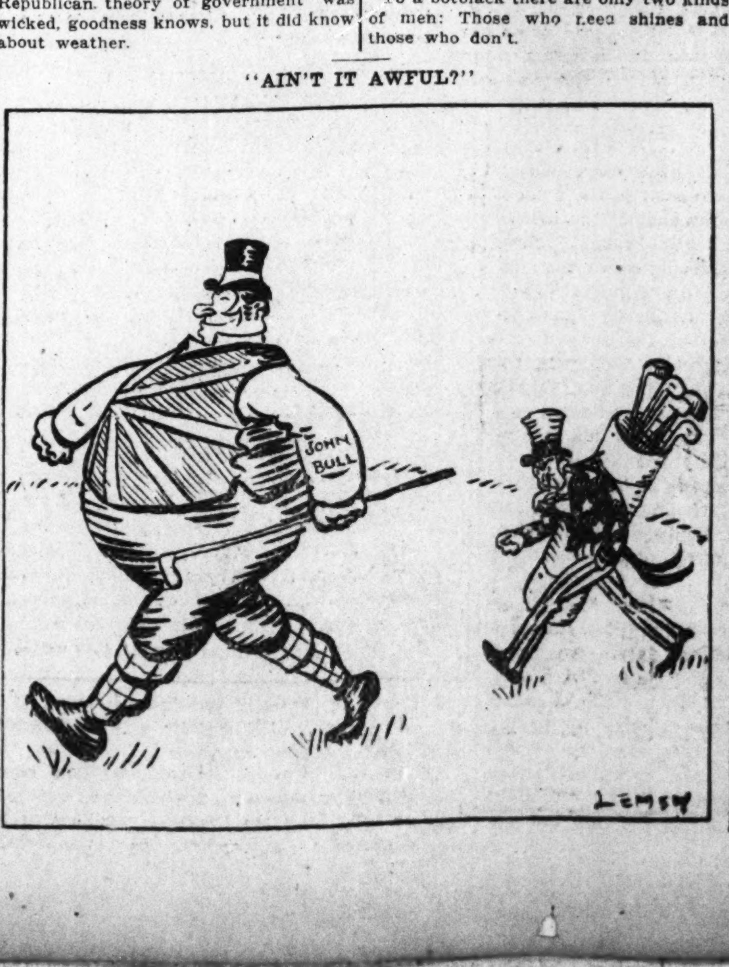
"AIN'T IT AWFUL?"



SOME OF VILLA'S GENERALS.

From Harper's Weekly.

The very size of the central army has made it necessary for Villa to associate with himself several other officers, all acknowledging their allegiance to Carranza as the chief of the revolution.

First among these is Gen. Felipe Angeles, the noted artillery commander. He was for many years superintendent of the military school at Chapultepec, is the idol of the officers of the army, and beloved by the people, who point to the fact that he is a poor man, though for so long an army officer, in proof that he is honest. He was educated in Europe and is well known in the United States among military and civil officials who have been stationed at Mexico City. During the bombardment of the capital in the uprising against Madero, Angeles realized that Huerta was not making the proper effort to take the citadel, held by Felix Diaz, and offered to take it himself, if Madero would furnish him the soldiers and cannon. But Madero was unable or unwilling to distrust Huerta.

After the assassination of Madero, Gen. Angeles went to Europe, where he left his family, and, returning to America, offered his services to Carranza. It will be well to bear his name in mind. Some observers who doubt the ability of Carranza to rule Mexico consider Gen. Angeles the strong man of the revolution. It was doubtless through his influence as Villa's chief of staff and artillery commander at Torreon that the rules of civilized warfare were regarded in the assault upon that city. Another of Villa's officers at Torreon was Gen. Maclovio Herrar, one of the natural born soldiers developed by the revolution. He was formerly a quiet business man of Chihuahua City, who espoused the cause of the revolution under Madero.

Another is Gen. Torribio Ortega, also of Chihuahua, who won a captainship during the Madero revolution. Still another is Gen. Aguirre Benavides, born in Coahuila, of an aristocratic family, and well known throughout Mexico. He played the leading part in the battle of San Pedro and in the pursuit and rout of Velasco's army. Then there is Gen. Thomas Urbina, the well-known military expert, enlisting during the Madero revolution. Villa, though Commander-Chief of the Central Army, must divide his fame with these, in his recent victories.

THE OHIO SENATORSHIP.

From the Springfield Republican.

The refusal of Ambassador Herrick to run for the Republican nomination for the Ohio Senatorship has made the Ohio Progressives jubilant. They figure that former Senator Foraker now has an almost sure thing for the nomination, and that in consequence there will be Republican desertions by the wholesale. This is plausible as far as it goes, and Foraker's nomination would be a Republican calamity; but the Democrats will have a look-in, too.

Consular Jobs in Mexico.

From the Indianapolis News.

On further reflection, it may occur to some of the loyal that it is probably just as well that they didn't get those jobs as consul in Mexico which they have been after for the last year or so.

Welcome to Roosevelt

WELCOME HOME.

New York Independent: For seven months he has been in South America. He has been having a corking time. That goes without saying. For the stuff out of which are made the corking times that he is perennially enjoying is within him.

He has preached to the South Americans—preached peace and friendship and international solidarity, as every good Nobel prizeman should; he has explored the wilds—he has found a river—closet geographers and envious explorers to the contrary notwithstanding; he has looked into the bright face of danger; he has added to his Admirable Crichton store of knowledge of fauna and flora and men and things. Of course, he has had a corking time.

It is true that he has been ill. But he is ever one to "welcome each rebuff that turns earth's smoothness rough."

May he come back a giant refreshed. He will continue to irritate some of us, to delight many of us, but to fail to interest none of us. He would be a churlish fellow indeed who would not bid him, Welcome home.

DELIGHTED TO SEE HIM.

New York World: The country has been getting along very well during the Colonel's absence, but it is just as delighted to have him home as if he were a public necessity. Besides, he has been away on a good errand. We shall all have a better understanding of South America now that the Colonel has been there, and probably South America will have a better understanding of us. This is well worth while, and whatever the Colonel has succeeded in adding to the knowledge of a great continent is a permanent contribution to civilization. We know that the Colonel has had a perfectly corking time, and we trust that he still feels like a bull moose. The rest, as Elihu Root is wont to remark, is on the knees of the gods.

HIS USEFUL JOURNEY.

Chicago Tribune: Col. Roosevelt's South American journey has been marked not only by achievements for science but by a high public service in the field of our international relations. His addresses in the great South American capitals have benefited our relation with Latin-America. Speaking, as usual, with courageous candor, and, for an unofficial speaker, with a unique authority, he has made clear our attitude toward our neighbors as no one else could do, and at a time when we are suffering from a deplorable, unjust, and growing hostility. His addresses and the reception given them in Brazil, Argentina and Chile—save for one minor incident in the last named country—have been the most fortunate events of American international history since the noteworthy trip of Mr. Root during Col. Roosevelt's presidency.

ROOSEVELT'S OPPORTUNITY.

Philadelphia Public Ledger: His party is disrupted, it is true, and the mere skeleton of an army is left. It was no army at all in 1911. Party history or purpose has no meaning for him. His campaigns are Napoleonic in their disregard of established rules. The rumor that he will enter the Republican primaries and rape the nomination is not so ridiculous as might be supposed. He all but did it two years ago. What more likely than that he assume the role of champion, summons to the ranks all the discontented, urge that Americanism itself has become the only issue, discard his "isms" and be as vigorous in reconstruction as he was in destruction two years ago? The administration may as well make ready for a recrudescence of Rooseveltism. The way has been easy enough up to this time. A real politician in the opposition is going to make it mighty hard.

Colorado's Future

COLORADO MUST KEEP ORDER.

Philadelphia Record: If Federal troops shall be withdrawn from Colorado, Gov. Ammons will replace them with militia, and the strikers threaten to attack them on sight. Evidently they haven't given up all their weapons. But has Colorado got to be garrisoned by a Federal army, or turned over to armed strikers to do with it whatever they please? Judge Lindsey and a lot of women are on their way to Washington to convince the President that he should keep the troops there to avert civil war. Washington understands that the troops will not be immediately withdrawn. The State troops cannot be put in the field without money and, while the Legislature has authorized a loan, it takes a little time to negotiate it. Colorado has got to maintain its own peace and order. It cannot depend permanently on the Federal Government, and it can't surrender its functions to the armed strikers.

ARBITRATION MUST COME.

Washington Herald: Gov. Ammons in his reply to the President called attention to the fact that a committee on mediation of the strike had been provided for and appointed. The committee is all very well, but suppose the corporations refuse to mediate? The Legislature refused to adopt a resolution asking President Wilson to intervene and appoint mediators, and the situation as it stands today was very clearly revealed by Gov. Ammons, who, on being asked if he thought the militia could handle the situation if the Federal troops were withdrawn, replied: "I hope it will not be necessary to use the militia again. I hope that before the Federal soldiers are withdrawn the Federal Government will help us to procure an adjustment of the strike controversy." He is still depending on the Federal Government, and he will not depend in vain, for in spite of the and he will not depend in vain. A way to arbitration must be devised.

CONSTRUCTIVE REFORM.

Rocky Mountain News: After quoting the legislation proposed by the attorneys for the United Mine Workers, the Rocky Mountain News says: To some these proposals may appear radical. They have all been tried out, however, in various civilized countries, and the inevitability of them has been emphasized by the strife of the past few months. Colorado and the United States can never be better than the citizens. If we want free government to continue on the face of the earth, we must make rules which will make it possible to breed free men and women. There is no other solution. Patriotism calls us. Our fathers created a nation which may yet have liberty. They fought for every advance, and they fought bitterly. When the Declaration of Independence was drafted Tories were fearful lest the excited gentlemen in Philadelphia might act hastily. When the suffrage was gained in England the men who were demanding it were very angry, and, we regret to admit it, very violent. When the emancipation proclamation was issued by Lincoln the entire nation was embroiled in the fiercest war of modern times. Doubtless it is a matter of regret that human nature is of the stuff that it is. Still, we must make the best of our limitations. If it is necessary to become angry before we have the energy for action, we might as well bow to nature and do what we can when we can.

AN OLD STRUGGLE.

John A. Fitch in The Survey: Three times in 30 years Mr. Rockefeller's principle has been vindicated. Individual, as opposed to collective, bargaining has been maintained. And three times the miners upon whom the principle has been imposed have emerged again from pit mouth and shaft and have faced hunger, cold, deportation and death in opposition to the Rockefeller ideal. It is a liberty that has made for recurring war. And so in 1914 the struggle came on again, and men, women and children have been killed. There has been quibbling discussion about who fired the first shot, as if the half of Colorado could be thrown into open war by a single rifle ball! The employers who have disobeyed the laws, the State which has not enforced them; the employers who hired mine guards to assault and intimidate, the State which took those mine guards in company pay into its militia, made some of them officers and then turned them on the strikers; the employers who had machine guns shipped in from West Virginia, the State which took those machine guns and turned them on the tented camps where dwelt the families of the strikers—what answer have they to the question of responsibility for war? Peace will not come to Colorado with disarmament. It will not come if Mr. Rockefeller spends his fortune in defense of the thing that he thinks is personal liberty. It will not come if the strikers are starved into submission. For with 188[illegible], 1894 and 1904 in retrospect; with Ludlow and Forbes crying to high heaven in 1914, all precedents point to war again in 1924. It is no peace that merely chokes the issue down.

Solving the Mexican Problem

ABOLISH LAND MONOPOLY.

Washington Times: Mexico is a land of magnificent opportunity, if only the people can be placed in possession of the opportunity and taught to use it rightly. President Wilson will serve Mexico, and this country as well, if he can take the lead in devising a project for the substantial amelioration of the conditions that land monopoly has imposed.

ELIMINATE ZAPATA.

Cleveland Leader: What hope of enduring peace has Mexico while an outlaw who has neither foreign apologists nor law-abiding defenders at home, can run the course Zapata has followed under three administrations? After Huerta there will be many promises of reform and better conditions, but the world can hardly take them seriously until Zapata shall have been sent to the death he has long deserved.

VILLA A "HARD NUT."

Washington Post: Huerta has been a hard nut for the United States to crack. What will Villa be? That fellow is sure to be a thorn in our side, whether he should become dictator or whether he should take the field again to oust his old leader, Carranza. He will do one or the other. There will be no peace in Mexico so long as the United States insists that the Mexicans themselves shall organize a stable government, and at the same time refuses to recognize any leader strong enough to compel peace. It will be the story of Madero over again.

LET CARRANZA TAKE PART.

New York Times: Unless President Wilson is willing that Mexicans should suspect that our purpose is national territorial extension and other material advantage, he cannot dictate to them the laws they shall pass or name a candidate for the presidency. From the first the administration at Washington has shown faith in the patriotic purpose and wisdom of the Constitutionalist leader. If that faith is well placed, it seems that Gen. Carranza cannot longer refuse to take part in the mediation conference at Niagara Falls, so that this unhappy business may be terminated as speedily as possible, and in the best interests of the whole Mexican people. Unless this is done, it seems that the Mexican problem, so far as it concerns the United States, will become more difficult of solution.

"OUR HOPE IS IN VILLA."

Washington Post: The hope of the United States seems to be in the success of Villa and Carranza. These noble allies are spurred onward by the prospect of acquiring control of Mexico, with great stores of plunder. They are handicapped for ammunition, and must wait for these supplies, but it is safe to predict that they will be on the march before the Niagara Falls conference is concluded. So long as the United States parleys at Niagara Falls, Huerta has only the rebels to face. He can easily stand off the United States by diplomatic tricks, in which he has steadily outwitted the American administration. Therefore it appears that the United States has placed itself in the position of being dependent upon Pancho Villa in the task of enforcing respect for the American flag and vindicating the honor of this republic.

VILLA AND CARRANZA.

Philadelphia Public Ledger: Mediation will be futile unless the Mexican delegates are empowered to make such concessions that this Government will be compelled to accept them. If Huerta eliminates himself, for instance, what reason will the Constitutionalists have for keeping in the field? Successful mediation with Huerta, in other words, will be a blow to Carranza and Villa. There can be no settlement of the Mexican situation in which they do not acquiesce. They are the Frankenstein of the problem. Of course, if they capture the capital while the mediators are still in conference, mediation immediately fails, because the Mexican envoys will be without credentials. In fact, the conference at Niagara Falls would seem ridiculous were it not that diplomatic precedents have been abandoned and there is no way to gauge the scope or purpose of our plans.

MEXICAN CHARACTER IN THE WAY.

New oYrk Sun: Divide the great estates and public lands into small holdings. Wipe out the debts that keep the peons ascript to the glebe. Good. But who is to liberate them from the habits of generations, to insure them posession, to free them from pulque and the natural as well as the Indian desire not to do any more work than they have to, to substitute prudence for age-long improvidence, to repress gambling? Who is to give them, if they are to have a hand in the Government, a Government more enlightened than its illiterate source?

ABOLISH PEONAGE.

Philadelphia Evening Times: In Mexico nine-tenths of the land is owned by a fraction of 1 per cent of the people. The condition of the Mexican peon is rather worse than that of the negro slave of 60 years ago. For years he has been the pawn of the ruling classes, attached to the soil and disposed of with it, as best suited the interest or the whim of his masters. He was always without hope of reward, and, as oppression sank deeper and his misery became more sullen as well as more poignant, he has lost the fear of punishment.

On the one hand, enormous wealth and feudal power; on the other, unrelieved poverty, ignorance and suffering; that is Mexico. Given these conditions and leaders sufficiently patriotic or desperate and revolt is as inevitable as death. If these conditions are to continue, it would make no difference who directed the Government. This is the problem that the United States faces.

PEONS ARE SERFS.

Philadelphia Record: The President sees clearly that the cause of Mexican revolutions is economic. A very large proportion of the population is not only landless, but without hope or possibility of getting land. Vast tracts of land are the property of a small number of enormously rich men, and the peons are very generally treated as though they were only a little above the grade of slaves. They are serfs, virtually attached to the ground. The author of "The Mystery of the Barranca," who has lived in Mexico, represents the great landlords as flogging or shooting peons without process of law, and in obedience to their own ideas of justice and public policy. The welfare of Mexico, the honor of civilization and peace along our southern frontier alike demand that permanent peace be assured by breaking up the feudal land system which has found its last refuge in the country whose aboriginal population was conquered by Cortez, but has not to this day been emancipated by the Spanish ruling caste.

A PESSIMISTIC VIEW.

New York Sun: The American people cannot understand even now why the flag saluting incident at Tampico provoked Mr. Wilson to send the fleet to Vera Cruz and seize the custom house when outrages upon American citizens in Mexico were borne with diplomatic philosophy. That the occupation of any part of Vera Cruz was an act of war Americans generally believe, and they do not doubt that a salute of the flag at Tampico could have been obtained from Gen. Huerta. And finally they do not see how a war of great sacrifices can be escaped now, although they have some faint hope of the success of mediation, to which Mr. Wilson turned as a last resort.

For these reasons the American people feel no enthusiasm for another war with Mexico, and there is no "soul-stirring" issue in it for them.

The Balkan Inferno

INSECURE PEACE.

Philadelphia Telegram: The investigators appear justified in their fear that peace founded upon such a basis of ruin and hate as came when the Balkan fighters ceased slaughter at the point of exhaustion cannot endure. Centuries of religious bigotry and suspicion, during which each side painted its foes as devils beyond the pale of human consideration, served to breed in the Balkans a race of men ideally fitted for the work of sickening blood lust that was lately done there. Such passionate disregard for human life made it easy for the allies literally to devour one another when no Moslem victims remained.

CHRISTIANS ALSO.

Philadelphia Public Ledger: From time immemorial Christendom has been invited to contemplate with horror the doings of the unspeakable Turk in Macedonia and in Armenia. But the atrocious reprisals of the Balkan allies upon the Moslems equaled the sanguinary fury under the Crescent at its blackest and its worst. Nor was their vindictive attitude toward each other in the struggle over the spoils any less reprehensible. Said an English censor of their conduct: "Their hatred for the Turk is nothing as compared with their hatred for each other. The present territorial greed is hideous, all sentiments of fair play and chivalry have given place to brutality.

WORSE THAN SHERMAN KNEW.

Baltimore Sun: The report of the Balkan Commission of Inquiry of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, reads like a description of a section of hades. The commission was appointed to investigate the atrocities committed in the war of the Balkan allies against Turkey and the subsequent warfare between Bulgaria, Greece and Servia. Gen. Sherman said that war was hell, from his experience in this country, but if he had been in the Balkans language would have failed him. Such horrors as the commission reports might make us despair of human nature, did we not know that they are now the exception in civilized war almost everywhere, save in a territory where the devil seems in supreme command in time of hostilities.

"SUM OF ALL ABOMINATIONS."

Chicago Record-Herald: The new Bulgarian atrocities are and are not the Bulgarian atrocities of Mr. Gladstone's Midlothian campaign. If emphasis be placed on the one word "humanity" there is very little difference. If the question is one of nationalities, Mr. Gladstone took the unspeakable Turk for his awful example, while the Balkan Commission finds examples in sickening abundance among all the principalities and powers that were swept along in the carnage. Under the name atrocity it is simply war that is described, the sum of all abominations. Whether it is necessary or not there can be no doubt as to the passions it lets loose. Nor is it a thing that suggests fine distinctions. Every civilized and humane nation should resolve to keep out of it unless there is indubitable proof that its awful price must be paid as a sacrifice on the altar of peace and of the true honor that saves from shame.

HOW DOES HE DO IT?
—MAHONY IN THE WASHINGTON TIMES

The Mellen Expose

TYRANTS IN BUSINESS.

Memphis Commercial Appeal: There are times in the affairs of men when one man must take the initiative, must drive and drive, must not allow himself to swerve either to the right or to the left. When these times come men recognize that they are in a crisis and are willing to trust everything to the unquestioned leadership of one who has been selected to lead. Mr. Morgan was a tyrant in his busines and misfortune has overtaken several of his enterprises. His subordinates remained with him. Mr. Mellen was a victim of that spirit of subserviency that the East gives to big money and the men who control big money.

A STORY OF COWARDICE.

Indianapolis News: Mellen swore that the total cost to the New Haven of the Westchester property was $35,000,000. Much of the stock was held by members of the Tammany gang. Thus it is clear that thought this road had a president and Board of Directors, it was absolutely controlled by Morgan, its banker. Mellen, speaking of Morgan's dictatorship, says that he can "recall no case in which he (Morgan) did not have his way." It is a disgusting story of cowardice and mismanagement. Men who should have been the servants of the stockholders were the slaves of Morgan, and they all stood in "awe" of him. They did not even to dare to ask him humbly for information, which they were not only entitled to, but which they were in duty bound to acquire. It is this sort of control from which the people of the land are determined to free the railroads.

DEALING WITH THE DEVIL.

Minneapolis Journal: Charles S. Mellen is tired of being made the goat. He is ready to rip the New Haven piracy up the back. He will tell a sensational story to the Interstate Commerce Commission. But it is doubtful if any of it will catch the public attention so sharply as his introductory epigram. The echoes of Vanderbilt's "public be damned" have survived his memory. Baer's "divine right" of the monarchs of coal sticks in the public memory more tenaciously than the wisest act of his railroad reign. Mellen's "dealing with the devil" completes the trio of epigrams. Tim Byrnes, in the climax of his press agent service, could not have invented a phrase better calculated to stimulate the deepest interest in Mellen's coming story than this: "I would deal with the devil or anybody else to get what I wanted." The time when he was trying to trade New Haven stock, then worth a hundred and fifty, for Westchester stock, which he says was worth "about 10 cents a pound."

AMEND CORPORATION LAW.

New York Globe and Commercial Advertiser: Reasonable and practicable proposals whose adoption would prevent New Haven lootings have been before Congress and legislatures for years. The fraud arises from the facility with which directors can issue the stock of their company in exchange for other property. Thus Mellen swapped New Haven stock for Westchester stock, not worth, he says, 10 cents a pound. Such transactions can be prevented by an amendment to the corporation law providing, when stock is issued for other property, that the directors shall be personally responsible should it appear that they made gross mistakes in estimates of value and paid more for the acquired property than it was fairly worth. As it now is it is necessary to show deliberate and intentional fraud—something, usually impossible. If directors were made civilly responsible for their acts there would not be much trouble about interlocking directorates, and directors would direct. A man would not dare to be on the board of a company whose business he did not understand.

BRUNSWICK BABY IS A REAL PEACEMAKER

At His Christening German Crown Prince and His Proud Sister Forget the Differences Which Caused Duchess to Threaten to Leave Germany.

BRUNSWICK, Germany, May 23.—Holding in contempt the pretentions of the professional nurses and ignoring their advices, the Duchess of Brunswick has taken practically the whole care of her infant son, who was 9 weeks old last Wednesday. At times the nurses have appealed to the attending physician, who merely remarks that allowances must be made in the case of the first baby. All her waking hours the Duchess passes in sight of her treasure, who some day may be seated as King on the restored throne of Hanover, who has been named in honor of most of the royalties of Europe, his complete name being Ernest Augustus George William Christian Ludwig Francis Joseph Nicholas.

The christening of the infant heir to the throne of Brunswick on May 9 was the occasion of a grand reconciliation between Prince Ernest, Duke of Brunswick, and the German Crown Prince, who quarreled over the Duke's accession.

The Duchess of Brunswick, the daughter of Emperor William, took the part of her husband against her own brother in the dispute which arose when the Crown Prince insited that Prince Ernest August of Cumberland should renounce formally all claim to the throne of Hanover before he ascended the throne of Brunswick.

The Duke replied simply that he had already declared that he would not countenance any aggressive policy against Prussia and this he considered enough.

The Duchess then went to interview her father. She told the Emperor that if her brother, the Crown Prince, had his way and humiliated the Duke, her husband, she and the Duke would leave Germany together and never return as she considered it beneath the Duke's dignity to make any more pledges.

Crown Prince Learns His Lesson.

The Emperor supported his favorite child. The Crown Prince was invited to call upon the Imperial Chancellor to whom he had written protesting letters against Prince Ernest's accession and Von Bethmann-Hollwig will deliver what is called "an impressive lecture" on the duties of Crown Princes in relation to State affairs.

The German public adores the former Princess Victoria of Prussia, and the Crown Prince's course made him very unpopular. It was largely owing to the discovery of his unpopularity, but partly to his desire to make up his quarrel with his sister, to whom he is greatly attached, that the Crown Prince announced his intention of accepting the invitation to the christening of her firstborn.

There was a grand family gathering at luncheon in the ancient Romanesque castle of Henry the Lion and the ceremony was attended by most of the royal Princes and Princesses, besides half a dozen of the regular sovereigns of the German Federation.

All Europe's Royal Houses Represented.

All the royal houses of Europe were represented and a vast gathering of the nobility of many nations passed through the picturesque, medaeval streets of Brunswick.

The sponsors for the infant were the Emperor and Empress, parents of the Duchess of Brunswick; the Duke and Duchess of Cumberland, parents of the Duke; Emperor Francis Joseph of Austria-Hungary; Czar Nicholas II of Russia; the Kings of England and Bavaria and five other members of royal families.

This is probably the last important function of this year. The Emperor will spend festival week in Wiesbaden as usual, but it is considered doubtful whether he will be in Berlin during "Foreigners' Week" in the middle of June.

YALE'S PRESIDENT IS LECTURING AT OXFORD

LONDON, May 23.—President Hadley of Yale University has been delivering at Oxford, as the 1914 lecturer in American history, a series of three lectures upon "Property and Democracy in the United States." He has been listened to by large audiences of undergraduates and dons.

Yale probably has the largest representation among the Oxford undergraduates of any American university. A delegation of Dr. Hadley's former students and many American Rhodes scholars were noticeable among those who welcomed the distinguished educator to Oxford.

In his opening lecture Dr. Hadley treated the historical aspects of his subject, confining himself to tracing the gradual development of American democracy. In other lectures he discussed "The Constitutional Position of the Property Owner" and "Recent Tendencies in Economics and Legislation."

Dr. Hadley is a guest of Sir William Osler.

LOVE, NOT FEES, MUST FIND ARMY BRIDES, KAISER SAYS

BERLIN, May 23.—German army officers will no longer be allowed to find brides through matrimonial agencies, according to a recent ruling by the Kaiser. In the past when a German officer became financially embarrassed he employed a matrimonial agent to find a wealthy bride for him, and then paid the agent a handsome fee out of the bride's dowry.

The Kaiser has announced that any naval or military oficer who is found to have employed one of these agents to get him a bride will be dismissed from the service.

VIRGINIA WOMAN BECOMES POPULAR LONDON HOSTESS

LONDON, May 23.—Mrs. Arthur Graham Glasgow of Richmond, Va., (Miss Margaret Elizabeth Branch), whose house at 36 Berkeley square, is a center of brilliant and entertaining, is one of the most admired of the Anglo-American contingent in London. She is a Virginian by birth and has all the fascination for which the women of that State are famous.

Her husband was president of the American Society two years ago. They were married in Richmond, Oct. 1, 1901.

QUEEN MARY'S ACCEPTANCE SPEECH PLEASES PARISIANS

PARIS, May 23.—Members of the Paris Council are still telling about the pretty remark that the Queen of England made when presented with a silver mirror bearing the royal crown, by the president of the municipality.

"I hope it will always reflect a happy face," he said. The Queen replied:

"As long as I am in Paris, M. le President, it could not reflect anything but smiles and happiness." This is the kind of a compliment that Paris people enjoy.

HOGS ROUT MOSLEMS WHO DEFIED BALKAN ADVANCE

LONDON, May 23.—It is said that the Moslem population of Macedonia is leaving the country in large number because their religious temperaments are offended by the presence of large numbers of hogs brought in by their conquerors. In the past the few hogs in the country were kept in seclusion by their owners as they were generally killed if allowed to run at large. But since the entrance of the allied troops the hogs have run where they pleased.

COSSACK WOMAN IS EXPLORING ASIA ON HORSEBACK.

Mrs. Kudasheva Is Riding Arabian Mount Presented to Her by Czar After She Has Given a Horse to Czarevitch.

ST. PETERSBURG, May 23.—Mrs. Kudasheva, a Cossack, is qualifying as the most intrepid, indomitable horsewoman in history.

About three years ago she rode from Vladivostok across Manchuria, Siberia and European Russia to St. Petersburg. She was presented to the Czar and she gave her horse, Mongolik, to the Czarevitch. In return the Czar sent her the Arabian horse, which she named Krit and on which she is making an even more adventurous solitary journey.

In March of last year she left the Korean frontier of Russia and made her way across China and Mongolia into Turkestan. She has reached the Syr-Daria steppes and in the town Aulieata had a public reception at which she gave an interesting account of how she keeps her horse in condition.

Her principle is that if it takes eight pounds of food to keep it fit, she would begin by giving it say 16, half in the morning, half at night. Next day it would have 15 pounds, then 14 pounds and so on until it had only one pound. Then she would raise the diet one pound a day until it got back to 16 pounds. Her experience with horses is that they age more rapidly on a diet of oats and that they sweat under less exertion. She prefers to use hay with some barley mixed in it. Occasionally she feeds vegetables, melons and even cheese or jam.

She always sleeps beside her horse, even in the same shed when they are in inhabited places. She so far has not encountered any serious danger, but has had trouble at times owing to the greed of people she wished to help her. They would ask as much as $5 to show her where there was a ford over a river.

Mrs. Kudeshava is to come up from Turkestan to Astrakhan through South and Central Russia to St. Petersburg, which she hopes to reach in September.

BOY OF SIX SUCCESSFULLY DIRECTS LONDON SYMPHONY

LONDON, May 23.—Willy Ferrero, the child orchestra director, from Italy who has been termed the "eighth wonder of the world," is in London and has directed the London Symphony Orchestra in several concerts. He is just past 6 years old, yet mounted on a raised platform he directs the orchestra like a veteran musician. In St. Petersburg he appeared before he Czar as conductor fot the Imperial Orchestra.

MISSOURI GIRL IS 'KIDNAPED' FROM PARIS CHAPERON

Miss Traverse, Who Was Missing All the Fun, Making Up for Lost Time Under Care of Mrs. Monahan of New York.

Copyright, 1914, by Press Pub. Co. (New York World)

PARIS, May 23.—The story of the alleged kidnaping of a young American girl and her rescue from the clutches of a professional chaperon is causing much amusement among the Americans here. The heroine of the adventure is Miss Zanoni Traverse of St. Joseph, Mo., and the "kidnaper" is Mrs. Frederick M. Monahan of New York.

According to gossip, Miss Traverse's mother, Mrs. Bartlett, left the girl in charge of her chaperon and sailed for New York. No sooner had she arrived in America than letters began to arrive saying that her daughter wanted to go to Mrs. Blank's dance, "but such things are not done in France and I knew you would wish me to refuse." This was followed by terrifying recitals of the dangers, according to French morality, of letting young girls out accompanied only by young folk.

After two or three such letters, Mrs. Bartlett cabled the chaperon full authority to regulate her daughter's life as she thought best. So Miss Travers, full of fun and fond of dancing, found herself forbidden to go to any but the tamest and dullest parties and had to refuse to receive young men, even those who were friends of her mother, when they called because it is considered the proper thing in France.

Finally Mrs. Monahan, hearing Miss Traverse's piteous story, took Zanoni for a drive. They did not return and the young woman is making up for lost time until she sails for New York next Wednesday.

A grand luncheon to celebrate the "kidnaping" was held at Mrs. Monohan's residence last Tuesday to which everyone was invited who had been deprived of the sight of the young woman during the last few weeks.

AMERICAN SURGEON WILL EXAMINE THE CZAREVITCH

ST. PETERSBURG, May 23.—Prof. Mayo, the surgeon of Rochester, Minn., has arrived ostensibly to study the surgical institutions of Russia, but according to absolutely trustworthy report, Dr. Mayo has come to Russia in compliance with a wish of the Czar to examine the Czarevitch, whose foot is still in a bad condition. Prof. Mayo will shortly leave for Livadia, where the Imperial family is at present.

FEW WEALTHY AMERICANS AT EUROPEAN HOTELS

LONDON, May 23.—Managers of the leading hotels in London complain that the number of wealthy American guests is decidedly below the average. A like complaint comes from the hotel keepers elsewhere. All lay this falling off to Mexico.

CALMETTE'S FATHER-IN-LAW BECOMES HEAD OF FIGARO

PARIS, May 23.—Following a meeting of the stockholders of the Figaro, the paper of which M. Calmette, who was killed by Mme. Caillaux was editor, it was announced that the slain man's father-in-law, Georges Prestate, will become manager of the paper. Alfred Capus will be political editor.

KAISER'S GERMAN EXCITES PATRIOTIC GRAMMARIANS

BERLIN, May 23.—The Kaiser's bad German, used in a letter to Prince Wedel, the retiring Viceroy of Alsace-Lorraine, has aroused the anger of both the radical patriots and the grammar reformers.

The patriots say the expression "vohlaffektionierter," meaning very affectionate, is a mixture of French and German and therefore should not have been used. The grammarians object to the use of the phrase "und verbleibe ich," meaning I remain, which they term "obsolete and very detestable business language.

POET WHO SOLD OLIVES WITH VERSE, DIES AT 81

PARIS, May 23.—Jean Sarrasin, 81 years old, known as the "La Poete Aux Olives" of Lyons, is dead. Jean Sarrasin learned early in life that poetry as a means of making a living is uncertain and during his entire career he peddled not only verses, but olives. He published during his life 20 complete volumes and lived to see a statue of himself in the public square of his native village, Prapic. His son, Jean, who died several years ago, also was a poet. He came to Paris and finding it impossible to sell his poems followed his father's example and began peddling olives, which he wrapped in rejected sonnets.

BEAUTIFUL ITALIAN WINS YOUTHS OF MANY NATIONS

Newest Vaudeville Star Has Remarkable Voice and Is Raising the Music Hall Stage in Fine Arts Level, Critics Declare.

SHE WILL COME TO THIS COUNTRY FROM RUSSIA

Copyright, 1914, by Press Pub. Co. (New York World)

ROME, May 23.—Pierette Butterfly, a vaudeville star of the first magnitude, Italian by birth and cosmopolitan by character and training, has finished a triumphal tour of Italy and gone to St. Petersburg, where she is turning the heads of the gilded youth in the Russian capital.

After touring the chief cities of Russia, Pierette will go to New York and after a season in the metropolis will visit the leading cities of the United States.

Belonging to no operatic school, with a soprano voice neither lyrical nor dramatic, nor of any other definite character known to science of voice culture, she sings like a nightingale in any capacity on the variety stage, either as child or adult of either sex. Her voice is of the most wonderful timbre, which seems to change according to the character she represents.

Endowed with a subtle charm of personality and a distinction of manner belonging only to the woman whose "distinction" is inborn and not acquired, she has brought the music hall profession to the level of a fine art just as Yvette Guilbert and a few others have done before her. But she stands alone in one respect—her beauty is of that delicate kind which the artist seeks as a model for a Madonna or a St. Agnes rather than that of the voluptuous women of the variety stage. And it is chiefly to this fact that her success in different European capitals has been due. It 's a novelty to the public to see such a face and figure on the boards of a music hall.

A friend in Rome has just received a letter dated St. Petersburg from Miss Butterfly (as she is generally called in Italy) from which the following is an extract:

"My third appearance last night was a grand success. I was recalled five times at the close of my second turn. Just as I was driving home a note tumbled into my brougham. Inside was a superb diamond pendant from an unknown admirer—an American or an Englishman, I should judge by his style, with the usual request to be allowed to call. I just kept the pendant and referred my visitor to my lady's maid. She is just 50, spectacled and very experienced in the ways of the world. I hope he will have a kind reception from her."

That is Miss Butterfly's way of dealing with advances of the kind.

EXPEDITION TO DISCOVER AMERICA COST ONLY $6400

MADRID, May 23.—By the entries in an old account book, recently unearthed in Palos, it appears that the fleet in which Christopher Columbus sailed when he discovered America cost $3000. Stores cost $400 and the guns and ammunition $3000. The men were paid $1.50 per day, out of which they had to pay for their rations.

RAINBOW WIGS SOON GIVE WAY TO PURE WHITE ONES

PARIS, May 23.—The colored wigs did not last long in Paris. They are no longer seen, even in the windows of the hair dressers. The latest wigs are white and the stylish women wear white hair piled up on an egg-shaped wavy cone.

PAGEANT AND MASQUE OF SAINT LOUIS BEGINNING THURSDAY

terest for Week Centers Upon Pageant and Social Calendar Is Practically Blank; Rose Carnival on Mrs. Byron Nugent's Lawn Proves Success; Racing Car, as Attraction, Vies With Dancing.

By Frances Cabanne Scovel.

HIS is the week of the big Pageant and Masque of Saint Louis to be given in Forest Park, and the universal interest in it has left the social calendar almost a blank.

But that there will be much entertaining in a small way is certain, ause there will be so many people from out of town who will arrive ut the middle of the week.

Almost everyone is either in or interested in the Pageant and those have seen some of the later rehearsals say it will be great.

WESTMORELAND place was aroused out of its usual summer calm Thursday night by the strains of music from piano, drums, rattles and tom-toms that floated up from behind Mrs. Byron gent's mansion, filling the air for a block around, while the dance s going on in the garage at the Rose Carnival for St George's rectory.

The grounds were lighted in the usual way with strings of colored hts in the trees and lots of bright-colored pennants everywhere.

Supper was served from a long buffet, set in the shrubbery, there were oths of things for sale and everything was much the same as at any wn fete, but it was different, and the difference was made by the piano aced in the open, just outside the door of the garage, drawing the ncers as a light does moths.

A low, rangy yellow roadster on e lawn was attracting so much atntion that someone asked "What is at motor car doing there; is it to raffled?" Someone replied, "I do ot know."

Then a voice said: "Beg pardon, adam, but that is the car that won e race."

"Yes, madam, it made 80 miles an our. It was there out of the way f the dancers and it is being used or the cigars and cigarettes."

"Oh, that is Julian Nugent's yellow eril. It won that race out Catlin rack a week ago last Sunday morng just after daylight."

"You don't say. When are they gog to have another?"

"Can't say, Miss. On account of e police regulations, you see."

Well, to go back to the carnival. was a great success besides being beautiful sight with all the matrons nd maids in summer frocks and garn hats.

WHEN more than 200 children present such a finished production as was "Yesterday nd Today" at the Victoria Theater riday evening, it is almost impossile to say which was the most harming or best in his or her part.

It was a play in two acts, written y Mrs. Rosalind Mahler-Pufeles and taged under the direction of her ather, Jacob Mahler—who is now eaching a third generation of St. ouisans to dance—and included all he dances from a minuet to the lame duck."

Two cousins, Master Edmond Grayon and Elizabeth Grayson, took the art of the old-fashioned children and were charming.

William C. Brown Jr. and Willard Bartlett Jr. were the Donkey and were as funny as could be. Later Master Brown and Emily Milliken did an interpretative dance, "The Serpent and the Bird," that was really beautiful, and Master Bartlett's Mephisto dance was one of the best on the program.

Of course Misses Marjorie Wolff, Marjorie Livingston, Anita Gaebler and Anita Churcher danced delightfully as always. They seem to develop more into artists each year, but the hit of the evening was the Kewpie ballet of four tots about two feet high who were dressed to represent those funny little Kewpie creatures, and from time to time during their dance they would stop suddenly and pose with their eyes rolled sideways and looked so much like the originals that each time "the house came down." They were Katherine Arnold, Amy Leisner, Jean McLeod and Jane Steinberg.

A cabaret ended the performance and in it were no end of attractive solos by so many of the children that lack of space prevents mentioning the names of all. Each one was better than the other, and all their dances were artistic and finished.

Little Dorothy Pufeles, Mr. Mahler's granddaughter and the fourth generation of the family in St. Louis, danced exquisitely and will doubtless fulfill the family traditions.

Simplicity in Furnishings Now in Vogue

INSIST ON THE ORIGINAL AND GENUINE
LOOK FOR THIS NAME ON EDGE OF INSIDE BINDING

Each year the national taste in house furnishing advances. Clumsy furniture, useless trinkets and dusty carpets are disappearing.

The effort is toward those simple, beautiful interiors that reflect culture and good taste. Intelligent women now select practical furnishings that are easily cared for.

In buying floor coverings, the ease with which they may be kept clean and sanitary is the first consideration.

No other floor covering approaches CREX in this particular, which is the reason CREX has become the most popular inexpensive, floor covering in this or any other country.

Then, too, the splendid material, artistic weaves and beautiful color effects, the cheerfulness and wonderful durability of CREX recommend it to every housekeeper.

CREX is found on the floors of the most sumptuous as well as in modest homes. It is in keeping everywhere because of its artistic merit and perfect usefulness.

If the salesman hesitates to supply you with CREX, it's an indication he wants to substitute an imitation on which the profit is greater. Insist on the original genuine CREX and you will not be disappointed.

The Doctor's Advice

by Dr. Lewis Baker

The questions answered below are general in character; the symptoms or diseases are given and the answers should apply to any case of similar nature.

Those wishing further advice free, may address Dr. Lewis Baker, College Building, College-Elwood streets, Dayton, O., inclosing self-addressed stamped envelope for reply. Full name and address must be given, but only initials or fictitious name will be used in my answers. The prescriptions can be filled at any well-stocked drug store. Any druggist can order of wholesaler.

Elizabeth says: "I am troubled with a constant headache, which also affects my eyes. My breath is awful, as I have a severe case of catarrh in the head and throat."

Answer: I receive daily hundreds of letters from people who have suffered as you do and who have been relieved with the following prescription: Make a wash by mixing one-half teaspoonful of Vilane powder, which you can purchase from any druggist in 2-oz. packages, and add to this one pint of warm water; use this in the nostrils daily to thoroughly cleanse them. A catarrh balm should be used with this. This is made by mixing one teaspoonful of Vilane powder with one ounce of lard or vaseline and apply well up into the nostrils twice a day. If this is used daily your catarrh should soon vanish. It should, however, be used occasionally to prevent a return of the disease.

"C. G." writes: "If you know of anything that will cure dandruff, itching scalp and premature baldness, please let me know what it is?"

Answer: For several years I have prescribed plain yellow minyol as superior to anything known for the treatment of diseased scalp. Get it in four-ounce jars, with full directions. It quickly overcomes all diseases of hair and scalp and gives new vigor and intense natural color to the hair. Try it fairly and you will advocate its use for your friends.

"Mildred" writes: "I am constantly embarrassed because of the fact of my extreme thinness. I have absolutely no color in my face and lips and I am dull and lifeless most of the time. Please advise me what to do."

Answer: If you are so thin and pale and your lips and cheeks are colorless, it is because your blood is deficient in red corpuscles. This can be easily overcome by the use of three-grain hypo-nuclane tablets, which can be had from any druggist in sealed cartons with full directions for taking. When the blood is enriched by the use of these tablets your weight will increase, the color will come back into your face and lips and it will improve your general system so that you will become strong and healthy.

"Edna" writes: "I suffer with rheumatism all the time and I shall be very glad if you can tell me something to relieve me."

Answer: I can give you a prescription which will not only relieve, but should obliterate your rheumatism. This is my favorite remedy and from the number of letters received from people who have used it proves its value in rheumatism. The following is made by mixing well, taking a teaspoonful at meal times and again before retiring: Comp. essence cardiol, 1 oz.; comp. fluid balmwort, 1 oz.; syrup sarsaparilla comp., 5 ozs., iodide of potassium, 2 drams; wine of colchicum, one-half ounce; sodium salicylate, 4 drams.

"Morris" asks: "I have suffered with a chronic cough for almost a year, and catch a fresh cold every few weeks. Nothing the doctor gives me helps, so I write to you."

Answer: You need a thorough laxative cough syrup, one that not only relieves but surely drives it from the system. The following, regularly used, will oust any curable cough or cold promptly: Obtain a 2½-oz. bottle of essence mentho-laxene, mix it with a home-made sugar syrup or honey as per directions on bottle.

"Anxious B." writes: "I have in recent years been threatened with appendicitis, but would never consent to an operation. Indigestion, constipation and sedentary habits cause me much suffering. Kindly prescribe for dyspepsia something which you think will cure me and prevent appendicitis."

Answer: The most scientific and satisfying treatment for your trouble is tablets triopeptine, packed in pink, white and blue in sealed cartons with full directions. Most stomach disorders can be conquered by regular treatment.

"Nervous M." writes: "Loss of sleep, nervousness, loss of appetite and overwork have made almost a complete wreck of me. I have to work, but can scarcely drag one foot after the other. Please advise."

Answer: The condition you describe is prevalent, especially with brain workers. Use the following: Compound syrup hypophosphites, 5 ozs.; tincture cadomene, 1 oz. Mix, shake well and take a teaspoonful before meals.

Farmer's Wife asks: "Will you please tell me how to overcome obesity?"

Answer: Obesity is burdensome. Excessive fat on the human body is unnatural and frequently results seriously. The best and safest method to reduce is to take regularly five-grain arbolone tablets. They are put up in sealed tubes with directions for home use, and any well-stocked druggist can supply them.

"Sara C." writes: "I am constipated and have a greasy skin. Suffer from headache, indigestion and some kidney trouble. I wish you to recommend a remedy."

Answer: The best remedy to relieve and master chronic constipation is called three-grain sulpherb tablets made from sulphur, cream of tartar and herb medicines. Taken regularly the blood is purified, the bowels and liver stimulated and health established. They are packed in sealed tubes with full directions. These tablets are splendid for children, as they do not gripe or sicken.

"Mamma:" I know of nothing better than 1 dram of tincture cubebs, 2 drams of tincture rhus aromatic and 1 oz. comp. fluid balmwort. Mix. The dose is 10 to 15 drops in water one hour before meals.

"Mrs. G." writes: "I have many symptoms upon which you prescribe 'three-grain cadomene tablets.' May I, a woman, expect to find relief by taking these tablets?"

Answer: Yes, three-grain cadomene tablets are suited to any case of extreme nervousness, where the strength seems to be ebbing away. They are tonic in action to a high degree, and no ill person can take them without the greatest benefit following.

"Anxious" writes: "My symptoms are great thirst. My skin is dry and I have chills, loss of appetite, headache and fever in my eyes. Also pains in back and limbs like rheumatism."

Answer: I am quite confident that if you will take balmwort tablets regularly for several weeks that your trouble will vanish. These tablets are a fine tonic for the kidneys and bladder. They stimulate and restore a natural condition better than anything I know of. Obtain in sealed tubes with full directions.—ADVERTISEMENT.

SCHOOL UNVEILS TABLET TO WIRELESS OPERATOR

Alumni Honors Youth Who Gave Life Belt to Woman on Steamer Monroe.

NEW YORK, May 23.—A tablet to the memory of Ferdinand J. Kuehn, the youthful wireless operator of the Old Dominion steamship Monroe, was unveiling in Public School No. 40 on the East Side yesterday.

The tablet is a gift from the alumni association of the school of which young Kuehn was a member.

Kuehn gave up his life belt to a woman passenger of the Monroe in the collision with the steamship Nantucket on Jan. 30 and so lost his life.

MISSOURI WOMAN, 100, WASHES, BAKE SEWS FOR 2 GIRLS

Mrs. Manora Johnson "Took In" Two Motherless Children Four Years Ago.

WEIGHS 307; ENJOYS WORK

Nurse in Cholera Epidemic and Civil War and Reared Family by Her Own Work.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CARTHAGE, Mo., May 23.—Mrs. Manora Johnson, weight 307, height 6 feet 3 inches, age 100, washes once each week, bakes twice a week, cares for a seven-room house, sews for two little girls she "took in" four years ago because she was lonesome, cooks for their father who boards with her and walks each Saturday to the Seventh Day Adventist Church.

That sounds like a pretty busy program for the average woman of many less years, but Mrs. Johnson says it is nothing and to prove it shows her garden and chickens, which she cares for herself. Her hair is thick and white, her flesh firm, she has 16 perfectly sound teeth, she never has been in a dentist's chair and she can read large type and her own writing without glasses.

Her present busy days follow a life that has had as much more of excitement than that of the average woman as her years are greater. She was born in Scotland, May 3, 1814, the daughter of a sea captain. She traveled with her father during her girlhood and was preparing to learn the tailor trade in Aberdeen when she became ill of smallpox. In those days persons who recovered from smallpox and were known to be immune were drafted for nurses and she spent six years at an infirmary, completing her training for caring for the sick. She was allowed one year because of her services during the smallpox epidemic, following her recovery.

Volunteer Cholera Nurse.

In 1836 she was married to a young civil engineer and devoted her life to her home and the sick until 1855, when she volunteered to come to America for service in the cholera epidemic. She was one of a party of 40 nurses sent from Scotland and she went to Cincinnati, where she served nine months. On her return to Scotland she persuaded her husband to come to this country and they lived at Marietta, O., whence she volunteered as a Union nurse when the Civil War began and was assigned to Sigel's division.

When she was discharged from the Army, she was assigned to accompany 12 Southeast Missouri soldiers to their homes and the families of the men made her so welcome that she sent for her husband to join her.

Johnson then was sent to Indian Territory on United States work, and in 1869 was killed by frontier robbers, as he was returning to his home with pay for long service. A band of cattlemen driving steers to market found his body, buried it and sent word to Mrs. Johnson.

She was left practically penniless with a large family of children, and she says that in the next few years she worked "with head and hand combined" to support and educate her children. She nursed, farmed, worked by the day, sewed and did everything that promised an honest penny. Since her children left home, she has traveled a bit and in 1874 she went to Scotland and she hopes to go again. In 1904 she chaperoned a party of 10 Joplin girls to the St. Louis World's Fair. She was in St. Louis three weeks, and she says of her trip, "a better time I never had."

Lonely With 58 Grandchildren.

Mrs. Johnson has 58 grandchildren, but none lives near her, and she became lonely. So in 1910 she became foster mother for two motherless girls and she cares for them and makes all of their clothes. They are as loyal to her as if she was their real mother. They says she enjoys doing for them and that it is no trouble to care for two girls for a woman who can have her "washing on the line at 5:30 and her bread out of the oven at the same time, making a double beat on her neighbors every week."

Mrs. Johnson does not ascribe her many years to her mode of life, but to her family. Her father, she says, lived to be 127 and her mother was a very active young woman when killed in an accident at 58. In Scotland, she says, it formerly was not uncommon to find 100 persons 100 years old in one village. Americans, she thinks, are killing themselves with their food. She believes they eat too much grease.

She walked four miles to ride the first time in an automobile, but she thinks such machines make life too easy. Wireless telegraphy she considers very wonderful, but an airship she thinks is a mere toy. This opinion was passed after watching a flight.

CAPTAIN, SIX PATROLMEN OUSTED IN BURLINGTON

Men Refused to Go on Beats Unless Officer, Who Was Reduced, Was Reinstated.

BURLINGTON, Io., May 23.—Capt. Jacob Rupp and six patrolmen of the Burlington Police Department were dismissed from service by the Police and Fire Commission today. The men were found guilty of insubordination, in refusing to go out on their beats on the evening of May 5 unless Capt. Rupp, who had been reduced to the ranks, was reinstated.

Chief of Police Willard discharged the men and a majority of the board sustained the action after a prolonged hearing in which police affairs were given a thorough airing and many discrepancies in the conduct of the night force revealed.

OMAHA VOTES FOR LOWER CAR FARE, BUT STILL PAYS 5C

Initiative Ordinance, After Passage, Is Tangled Up in Legal Complications.

LONG FIGHT IS EXPECTED

City Has Been Trying Six Years for Reduction, but Seems Far From the Goal.

OMAHA, Neb., May 23.—Omaha's struggle for a reduction in the 5-cent street railway fare has reached a climax in a decision by a District Court, recognizing the right of the city to regulate rates, but, at the same time, an injunction was issued restraining the city from placing in effect a seven-fares-for-a-quarter ordinance, which was passed recently, through the State initiative and referendum law, until the municipality is able to show that the lower rate is not confiscatory.

The decision so complicates the case that the fight probably will be strung out for years. In fact, there are two court decisions diametrically opposite in effect, two claims by the street railway which are likewise of opposing nature; two or three injunctions by different courts, stipulations of agreement, orders for physical valuation and various other complications which tend to keep the case from a final decision either for the city or for the street car company.

And, pending the final decision, the fare will remain at 5 cents without any reduction except for school children. Omaha has waged a long, hard fight for lower street car fares, but seems no nearer the goal than when the struggle began.

The fight started six years ago, when City Treasurer Ure and General Manager Howell of the municipal water plant petitioned the State Railway Commission to order a physical valuation of the Omaha street railway property. The street railway went to court, denying the right of the commission to regulate it in any way, and saying that the city of Omaha alone had this right.

But the street railway lawyers, in the plea which they made before the District Court two weeks ago, in the case in which they sought to prevent the city from putting into effect the seven-tickets-for-a-quarter ordinance, denied the right of the city to regulate the street railway, saying that the State Railway Commission alone had this power.

The seven-for-a-quarter ordinance is one of the steps in the fight for a lower fare. The last Legislature enacted a home rule law and also an initiative and referendum statute. So a petition was circulated asking for a vote on the question of forcing the company to issue seven street car fares for 25 cents. The necessary signatures were obtained and the vote was taken. The seven-for-a-quarter proposition passed. But before it could be put into effect the street car company went into the District Court and asked a temporary injunction restraining the city from enforcing the lower rate.

At the same time the bondholders of the property in New York went into Federal Court in Omaha and asked a similar restraining order. The State Court granted a temporary order and last week this was made permanent until the city could show, by means of a physical valuation, that this rate would not be confiscatory. The Federal injunction case is being held in abeyance until the State case is settled.

But on the question of a physical valuation there is trouble. Whether this shall be made by the State Railway Commission or by the City of Omaha is being debated by the City Council as well as by the street car attorneys, and also by the commission itself. In case there is a deadlock as to which body shall make the valuation, the rate will remain as at present. Members of the City Council have not decided whether they want to make the physical valuation.

Mayor Dahlman is opposed to the city's taking any step whatever and does not favor a lowering of the present fare—straight five cents. Councilmen Kugel and Withnell are in favor of securing the valuation immediately. Other members are indifferent. The Mayor says the city has no money to spend on the work, and the city legal department insists that the valuation be made at once.

Before the seven-for-a-quarter vote was taken, J. A. Davis, a citizen, appealed to the State Railway Commission to order the street railway to sell six fares for a quarter. This case has not yet been disposed of by the commission. No action probably will be taken on the Davis petition until after the physical valuation is completed.

A still further complication was added to the Omaha case last week when the Supreme Court declared, in a case from Lincoln, that the State Railway Commission had exclusive control over the railways of that city. This decision was exactly contrary to the holding in the Omaha case.

Several decisions affecting the Omaha case will be handed down early in June, but the matter has become so hedged about with suits, injunctions, orders and agreements, that the real question is almost lost in a maze of legal complications. In the meantime, the people continue paying 5 cents carfare straight.

YOU CAN HAVE BEAUTIFUL HAIR

It is altogether likely that UNCLE SAM will soon speak out against poisonous hair dyes, by amending the pure food and drug law so that those containing anything injurious will have to be labeled "Poison."

When that happens will you wish to continue to use the dyes, colorings or restorers that you have been applying because of ignorance as to what they're made of?

In that day the one hair coloring that will stand out preeminently is EMPRESS—IMPROVED INSTANTANEOUS HAIR COLOR RESTORER.

Why? Simply because it is the only one known and attested by prominent professor in leading COLLEGES of EUROPE and AMERICA to be absolutely free from any and every ingredient that can do the slightest harm to the hair.

EMPRESS—IMPROVED is the only hair coloring that can be LEGALLY SOLD in Germany, France and Austria.

Ten beautiful natural shades, $2.00. ONE APPLICATION REQUIRES ONLY 45 MINUTES.

Sold by Famous-Barr Co., Kiefer Drug Co., Wolff-Wilson, B. Nugent & Bro. and all first-class department stores and hairdressers. Samples and additional information on request to Empress Mfg. Co., 16 East Seventeenth street, New York.—ADV.

HOW BUST MEASURE MAY BE INCREASED

No Longer Need to Be Flat Chested and Undeveloped.

The woman without a properly developed bust is as nearly shapeless as any woman can be. A full, firm, perfectly rounded bust is her birthright and natural inheritance and quite as much for her health's sake as for mere personal appearance she should see to it that this natural right is hers. The bust can be developed by proper treatment just as safely and surely and probably more quickly than any other part of the body.

Some time ago a prominent physician discovered in experimental laboratory work a combination of stimulating ingredients possessing remarkable power in developing an undeveloped or retarded bust. "Sorose" has since been used by thousands of women with wonderful success. There are no creams, oils or massage of any kind, no mechanical pumps or appliance, nothing that can possibly injure in any way. You just take it as directed and see almost from day to day the steady growth of the shrunken, undeveloped busts to full-rounded beauty until development of from three to six inches is obtained.

Wolff-Wilson Drug Co. sell it on a positive guarantee of success and satisfaction or money back. Price for a three-weeks' treatment $1.00. Mail orders filled by Embee Toilet Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

Advice on Beauty

by Claire Ainsworth

NOTE—If the reader does not find the information wanted in the questions answered below, just address a letter to Miss Claire Ainsworth, 40 Patterson Bldg., Dayton, O., enclosing self-addressed stamped envelope, and she will gladly advise on health problems. The articles and preparations mentioned are on sale by all wholesale druggists, large retail and department stores; or any accommodating dealer can obtain them for you.

M. G. B. asks: "How can I whiten my complexion and get rid of pimples, blotches, red nose, blackheads and greasy appearance of my face?"

Answer: Your letter indicates that your blood is in bad condition. Begin taking at once something to purify the blood. For this purpose obtain one-grain tablets quinoxide. The whitening effect is marvelously beautiful.

Martha G. asks: "Will you please tell me of a good, reliable and harmless hair tonic?"

Answer: I get ¼ ounce hairwand powder and dissolve it in a pint of pure soft water. It is apparently a natural hair and scalp remedy superior in every way, because it is free from alcohol—which I deem harmful to the hair and scalp. Rub into the scalp with the fingers. To darken gray and faded hair, use a pint of sage tea, instead of water, and dissolve the hairwand powder in it. Apply it to the hair evenly twice daily.

Maude C. asks: "I am getting more fleshy day by day and have resolved to take treatment to reduce. Please tell me of a safe, harmless and effective remedy."

Answer: Get from a well-stocked pharmacy five-grain phythyrin tablets and take according to directions in sealed tube. This formula is prescribed widely by physicians and one whom I personally know says it is harmless and very effective.

D. B. C. asks: "Is there anything safe to use for removing unnatural hair growth on the face and arms?"

Answer: A friend was bothered until she discovered that ordinary fluvol powder would instantly destroy the hair, without injuring the skin. Get the powder in a sealed air-tight package.

Agnes L. asks: "I am losing my hair by the combful and my scalp is covered with scurf, while it itches terribly. What will stop the troubles?"

Answer: The use of plain yellow minyol will check and cure dandruff and itching scalp, stop the falling hair and restore a healthy condition of the scalp. Apply as per the directions on 4-oz. jars. This preparation is made for and widely used by professional hairdressers. Before beginning this treatment shampoo with gloriol liquid shampoo, a very high-grade preparation.

Miss Jean asks: "There seems to be no oil in my skin, which is dry, yellow and rough. What treatment should I use?"

Answer: Your skin needs a good pure emollient flesh builder, and for this purpose nothing on the market is so good as gloriol emollient, sold in sealed jars. Use it morning and night and soon the flesh will improve in tone and the skin will become white and pink. This emollient puts new life and color in the face, while it fills hollows and removes other complexion blemishes.

Marguerite asks: "What is the object in using vanishing or greaseless cream?"

Answer: The purpose of a good, pure, fragrant greaseless cream is to protect the skin from the severity of sun, wind and weather. Be sure to use a good and harmless cream. I use and recommend one called gloriol balm, sold in sealed tubes. It prevents chapping, burning, roughness and freckles, while it is delightfully soothing and pleasant to apply.

C. R. P. asks: "I cannot find a good toilet soap that pleases me. What one do you recommend?"

Answer: I long ago discontinued the use of ordinary toilet soaps, because I found that I could not keep my skin and complexion perfect by their use. I now recommend and use gloriol glowena, a "water massage cream," which cleanses the deepest pores, reduces large pores and softens and clears the skin beautifully. It comes in sealed tubes, very convenient and sanitary to use.

Mrs. A. R. asks: "I would give anything I possess to find something to overcome my scrawny arms, hands, neck and bust. What am I to do?"

Answer: I can only advise the same treatment which I have heretofore given in these columns. Defective circulation and nutrition are responsible for your pitiful condition. First, take a good tonic and flesh builder, and for this I know of nothing better than 3-grain hypo-nuclane tablets, sold by most pharmacists. Then the parts should daily be supplied with a nourishing skin food, and for this you should obtain in sealed tubes, medicated venosal, which is especially used by actresses and society women to develop the bust, arms and neck. Full directions are given with the article, and rapid development is certain to follow its use. Take deep-breathing exercise daily.

R. M. asks: "Can you recommend a remedy to make the hair fluffy, wavy and curling? I have to put my hair in kids every night, and sometimes the curl comes out before noon."

Answer: Have you never tried gloriol wavoline? It defies detection and makes the hair curl and wave beautifully. One application will keep the hair in curl for a week or more.

Elsie R. asks: "Is it good to use face powder after using gloriol balm?"

Answer: Yes, if you use a good, pure, refined powder that will not clog the pores. I advise the gloriol face powder, which comes in pink, white and brunette. Send two stamps for my book "Beauty Truths." It is free to all my readers.—ADVERTISEMENT.

KENTUCKY BANKER HELD UNDER BOND OF $50,500

Indebtedness of Institution Closed by State Is Estimated to Be $180,000.

PARIS, Ky., May 23.—It was unofficially estimated today by the State banking representatives that the indebtedness of the bank of George Alexander & Co., which was closed by the State banking department last Tuesday, would reach $180,000.

As a result of the closing of the bank President Alexander was arrested on three warrants, sworn out by Thomas J. Smith, State Bank Commissioner, who charged Alexander with having made false entries and with misappropriation of funds.

Alexander was released on $50,500 bond.

ECZEMA IN SCALY DRY PATCHES

On Little Boy's Face and Neck. Painful and Disfiguring. Would Crack Open, Bleed and Itch. Cuticura Soap and Ointment Cured.

Earl, Neb.—"Eczema broke out on my little boy's face and neck and was very painful at times and disfiguring. It was worse in winter. It was in scaly dry patches on his face and neck which would crack open and bleed. It itched and was very unsightly. It hurt the worst in the day time when in the open air and wind.

"I used several remedies but he got no relief until a friend told me of her little boy who was afflicted as mine and Cuticura Soap and Ointment cured him. I purchased a box of Cuticura Soap and Ointment from our druggist. I washed his face well with the Cuticura Soap then put the Cuticura Ointment on right off. In two months he was entirely cured." (Signed) Mrs. Daisy Bailey, Oct. 23, 1913.

In selecting a toilet soap why not procure one possessing delicate emollient properties sufficient to allay minor irritations, remove redness and roughness, prevent pore-clogging, soften and soothe sensitive conditions, and promote skin and scalp health generally? Such a soap combined with the purest of saponaceous ingredients and most fragrant and refreshing of flower odors, is Cuticura Soap. Cuticura Soap 25c. and Cuticura Ointment 50c. are sold by druggists and dealers everywhere. Liberal sample of each mailed free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. T, Boston."

Men who shave and shampoo with Cuticura Soap will find it best for skin and scalp.

FARMERS' UNION IN TEXAS OPPOSES PULPIT POLITICIANS

Campaign Begun to Force Ministers to Cease Activities at Polls.

AUSTIN, Tex., May 23.—The Farmers' Union of Texas, through W. D. Lewis, president, has inaugurated a fight against ministers taking an active part in politics.

"At least 75 per cent of the preachers of this State are on the payroll of the farmers," said Lewis. "The farmers of Texas have built approximately 10,000 churches, contribute towards the support of religious institutions about $5,000,000 per annum, and the church census shows that 75 of every 100 members of the various church denominations live upon the farm.

"We refer with pride to the achievements of farmers along the line of religious progress and moral development. The substantial assistance which the farmers of Texas have given the cause of religions we think authorizes the vast body of agricultural laymen who constitute the bone and sinew of the church to speak out, for certainly a layman may know as much about political theology as a preacher.

"We appeal to the laymen of Texas to demand that political preachers give their congregations more old-time religion and less political clap-trap; that they display a more earnest effort to reach the hearts of men and play less to the galleries; that they more often hold fellowship with the members and fewer caucuses with the politicians.

"Certainly the laymen cannot perform their full duty to the church by singing songs, paying church dues and voting tickets handed down from the pulpit by political evangelists. The layman should become a dominating factor in the policies of the church. Let all brethren unite in lifting fallen ministers from the sloughs of politics back into the pulpit.

"It is as important that the politicians be driven out of the pulpit as that the preachers be forced back to the pulpit. We think it sacrilegious for anyone to get his call to the pulpit from campaign managers, to get his inspiration from the cesspool of politics or to get his articles of faith from political conventions.

"Civilization has many times been compelled to drive incorrigible preachers back to the pulpit at the point of the bayonet. Many of the pages of history are wet with blood shed at the hands of political preachers who wrote laws on the statute books that committed arson upon mankind, maimed human beings with the hatchet and sent hopeless women to the torture rack, all because they disagreed with their views.

"When in control of government, the pulpit politicians invariably undertake to perform legislative miracles such as casting out witches with the flame of a torch, suborning conscience with shackles and enforcing opinions with the guillotine."

MEMORIAL DAY PROGRAM AT JEFFERSON BARRACKS

Col. Robert N. Denham Will Be Grand Marshal and Several Societies Will Assist.

The graves of 16,000 American soldiers in the National Cemetery at Jefferson Barracks will be strewn with flowers and flags on Memorial day, May 30, by St. Louis members of the G. A. R., Sons of Veterans, United Spanish War Veterans, Army and Navy Union and their women's auxiliaries.

Those participating will assemble at 2:45 p. m. on the north side of the new parade grounds at Jefferson Barracks, facing south, under the command of Col. Robert N. Denham, grand marshal of the day. The column will move forward promptly at 3 p. m., escorted by Col. John H. Beacon, U. S. Army, commander of the post, and his command. During the review and music to the cemetery minute guns will be fired. Bands will cease music upon entering the cemetery.

Charles F. Vogel, chairman of the general Committee on Arrangements, will preside during the memorial exercises. The Rev. Thomas H. Hagerty will speak the prayer and Louis C. Hesse will read G. A. R. national and State department orders. Thomas Moore will read Lincoln's Gettysburg address and William Conroy will say the benediction. Music will be furnished by the band at Jefferson Barracks. A detachment of barrack troops will fire three volleys and taps will be sounded as the graves of the soldiers are decorated with flags and flowers.

MISSOURI COPPER IN 1913 WORTH $89,312

Production in State Increasing and Big Deposit in Ozarks Is Inspected.

JEFFERSON CITY, May 23.—Missouri is dealt with as a copper producing State in a bulletin of the Bureau of Labor Statistics issued today by Commissioner John T. Fitzpatrick. Copper, like silver, is found in Southeast Missouri, the counties which have deposits being Crawford, Franklin, Madison, Ste. Genevieve and one or two others. It is more abundant than silver and is found mixed with lead, cobalt and nickle ores.

In 1913 the production of copper in Missouri amounted to 576,204 pounds, which, at a value of 15.5 cents a pound was worth $89,312. This output is an increase over that of 1912, when the production amounted to 440,135 pounds, and the value $68,812.

It is generally believed in Southeast Missouri that a huge deposit of copper will be encountered in the future, somewhere in the Ozarks. For 10 or 12 years copper has been extracted from the lead ores of Madison County. It is easily recovered and therefore pays well for the task.

Aged, Wrinkled Faces Easily Rejuvenated

An aged face is often only a mask to a comparatively youthful person. Beneath is a countenance young and fair to look upon. It's a simple matter to remove the mask. Ordinary mercolized wax, to be had at any drug store, gradually absorbs the worn-out surface skin; in a week or two the user has the loveliest pinky white complexion imaginable. An ounce of the wax usually is sufficient to complete the transformation. It is put on at night like cold cream and taken off in the morning with warm water.

This remarkable treatment is invariably effective, no matter how muddy, sallow or discolored the complexion. Freckles, moth-patches, liver spots, pimples, blackheads and other cutaneous blemishes naturally vanish with the discarded skin.

To remove wrinkles, here is a recipe that cannot be too highly recommended: Powdered saxolite, 1 oz., dissolved in ½-pint witch hazel. Use as a wash lotion. It acts instantaneously and is wonderfully effective.—ADV.

Don't Persecute your Bowels

Cut out cathartics and purgatives. They are brutal—harsh—unnecessary. Try CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS Purely vegetable. Act gently on the liver, eliminate bile, and soothe the delicate membrane of the bowel. Cure Constipation, Biliousness, Sick Headache and Indigestion, as millions know.

A Reliable Treatment For Superfluous Hairs (Beauty Culture)

A new and highly satisfactory method has recently been found for the quick and painless removal of objectionable hairy growths, and it is so simple that anyone can use it in the privacy of her own home and enjoy the pleasure of a clear, hairless skin.

To remove hair or fuzz from lip, chin or cheek, a thick paste is made by mixing some water with a little powdered delatone. This paste is then spread on the hairy surface for about two minutes and then rubbed off, after which the skin is washed to remove the remaining delatone and it will be found to be free from hair or blemish. No danger or inconvenience attends this treatment, but to avoid disappointment or failure, see that you get the delatone in a small original package. Any good drug store can supply you.—ADV.

Nemo KOPSERVICE CORSETS
Perfect Style for the Slender $5
Get the "nature" figure, beautifully idealized, without losing one bit of the hygienic support that every good corset MUST give.
Investigate Kopservice Corset No. 562—$5.00

Nemo No 562 KOPSERVICE
No. 562 For slender or medium figures. The new double construction gives all the ease of the old short corset with the free, full lines of the "corsetless" effect. Low bust; semi-elastic gores, extending inches below waist-line, promote free breathing. Very long skirt, made pliable by semi-elastic Lasticurve-Back. Suede batiste, sizes 20 to 30 $5.00

ANOTHER MODEL.
No. 561 Similiar to No. 562, but without the elastic front gores. Almost topless, and all-elastic above waist-line. Fine white suede batiste, sizes 20 to 30 $5.00

Nemo "EASY-FRONT" $5 Value at $3.00
No. 303 Very low bust, almost topless, but retaining the Nemo "bridge" construction—this corset doesn't "dig in." Wide gores of semi-elastic Lastikops Cloth cover nearly the entire gastric region, producing extreme flexibility, freedom of breathing and the "nature figure." The skirt is very long and flexible. Of fine white Steeltex batiste, lightly boned. Sizes 19 to 26 $3.00
No. 304 is same, but with bust a bit higher—$3.00.

These corsets are a revelation to slender women who imagine that all Nemos are for full figures.

BEAUTY DOCTOR

Says the New Method increases the Bust Measurement and Rounds the Arms and Neck.

(By Clara Belle M.)

(From Chicago Examiner.)

"Speaking from my own personal experience and from observation of many whom I have successfully treated in the past two years, I should say that Madame Monesaux really owed her great success as a beauty specialist to the use of a simple preparation which is used exclusively to develop the bust, arms and neck. I became acquainted with this formula and have used it ever since, much to the delight of patrons.

"If your bust lacks development or firmness you can rely on both increase and firmness from the persistent use of a rare secret compound of oils, known to pharmacists and at toilet counters as medicated venosol. The substance comes in sealed tubes with full directions for home use and is all in all delightful and harmless.

"Apply the treatment regularly for a sufficient time, as the case may require and the most exquisite firmness and rounding development is quite certain to reward any thin, undeveloped woman."—ADVERTISEMENT.

LAND FOR PEOPLE ONLY BASIS FOR PEACE IN MEXICO

Author of "The Mexican People" Says 1857 Constitution Must Be Restored.

FEDERAL TITLES NO GOOD

Aristocratic Student of Conditions Declares Present Assembly Measure a Trick.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., May 23.—In the passage of the new land reform bill by the Mexican National Assembly last Wednesday night, at the instigation of Huerta, the dictator, history is but repeating itself in the old trick by the aristocracy of promulgating false measures for the redistribution of the lands of the war-ridden republic, to save itself, according to L. Gutierrez de Lara, revolutionary leader and author of the recently published book, "The Mexican People; Their Struggle for Freedom."

De Lara talked at length today of the Mexican land question, which is the cause of all the disorder that is rending his country. Land reform is the aim of the Constitutionalists, but it must be genuine, and not of the deceptive type that is contemplated by the Huerta bill.

"The Mexican revolution," said de Lara, "will not end until the lands of Mexico are restored to the people. Intervention by the United States, even the intervention of angels, could never restore peace to Mexico, and would only prolong the struggles of the people of Mexico, unless the land question is settled.

"A great new factor has entered into the political situation of the entire American continent. It is the tendency to form a great Latin-American republic extending from the Rio Grande to the Straits of Magellan."

Writer Member of Aristocracy.

De Lara is, by birth, a member of the aristocratic, or landlord class in Mexico. He says he was first interested in the struggle of the people of Mexico as a question of political and social principle and that for years he instinctively held himself aloof from the peons. Now he believes the only hope for Mexico is to rid the country of landlords, whether native or foreign, and to restore the constitution of 1857 giving land to small land holders.

"If Mexico had been left to herself without foreign interference," said De Lara, "we should by now have been a peaceful and prosperous nation. In 1857 we adopted the Constitution giving to the people their rights in the land and taking the land from the landlords who held them under a military government. No sooner did the people attempt to avail themselves of these rights than we were thrown into the war of the French intervention.

"After fighting for their rights for several years, the constitutional forces were practically exhausted. There arose the danger of American intervention. That has always been the great weapon of the autocrats who have governed Mexico. Diaz came forward and with the backing of American corporation influence and money obtained control of the lands. Whole towns and communities were wiped out by him yet the Mexican people did not revolt. They did not want to bring on the intervention of the United States.

Huerta's Act Aided Landlords.

"The people here who clamor for intervention to restore peace in Mexico do not understand what they are seeking. They do not know why Huerta refused to salute the American flag at Vera Cruz. Would it have aided him to satisfy the United States? No. What he needed was intervention. It might wipe out Huerta as a personal factor, but it would re-establish the power of the landlords who do not want the revolution to succeed.

"There have been three great men in the United States who understood the situation on this continent, and they were Monroe, Lincoln and Wilson. President Wilson may fail in his efforts to deal justly with Mexico because he cannot resist the militarists of this country. Hearst is baying for war and exciting the people in the name of patriotism because he has thousands of acres of lands and hundreds of thousands of dollars in Mexican property which he has dispossessed the Mexican people of and which he wishes to hold.

"What would be the result of the success of the revolution in Mexico? The titles that the rich Americans have obtained from Diaz regime would not hold in a court established by the government of the people. The small American land owner, who has obtained his title honestly and who is engaged in production, would be perfectly safe.

Two Sides to Damages.

"They talk about indemnity from Mexico. If these men who have robbed the Mexican people for years claim damages I shall advocate that the Mexican Government demand from them restoration of the wages and property which they have taken from us.

"The Mexican Chamber again has passed a land reform bill. It merely shows their supreme contempt for the common people of Mexico. They have done this before and they hope to satisfy the people and settle the revolution so that they can again obtain control.

"In 1810 there was a proclamation that went far beyond the dreams of the most hopeful idealist. It gave to the people not only what they asked, but more. The small land owner was exempted from taxes and the Government was to furnish money to enable the peons to work their small patches of land. What was the result? There was not enough money in the treasury to supply them. There was no disposition to let them have these lands and they were soon in debt to the landlords and working again as peons.

"This is my idea what would happen in Mexico if the revolution were allowed to succeed without intervention and the Constitution is re-established. After the success of the Madero revolution, I went into Chihuahua and found there a community of small landholders who had laid down their guns. They came to me and asked what they should do. I told them each one to take the patch of land he had been working and consider it his own. There was no disputing among them. That was all they wanted.

Planned Private Revolution.

"Then they said that the Majordomo would not allow them to use the water. I told them to take up their guns again and go to him, saying gently, but firmly, that they must have the water. If he refused, I told them to tie him up and take charge of the water. If he fired upon them, I told them to shoot him, because it was a question between his life and their wives and children.

"The Americans who think they have rights in Mexico which must be protected by their Government must go back and find out whether they have such rights or whether they merely have titles that have been stolen from the people since the constitution was adopted.

"I do not know what will come of the sessions of the board of mediation but it has been very fortunate in preventing the immediate precipitation of a conflict which would have never restored peace to Mexico nor been of any benefit to the United States.

"I have been fighting for seven years both with my own people and here in the United States to bring to the realization of the people to bring to that progress and peace will never come to Mexico until the land is restored to the people under the terms of the Constitution for which they have fought many years but the terms and conditions of which they have never enjoyed.

"It is not a question of leaders or which leader or which faction in Mexico is working for the rights of people. It is merely a question of how soon the attempts of a military conquest will be stopped and the people allowed to lay down their arms and go back to the land under the protection of those titles established by the Constitution of 1857."

De Lara says that the manuscript of his book was sent to President Wilson, Secretary Bryan and many of the Senators and that many of the conditions and facts there set forth have formed a basis for the policies and negotiations carried out between the governments.

SUNDAY BASEBALL SCORED IN REPORT TO PRESBYTERIANS

Committee Condemns Sport on Sabbath, but Action by Assembly Is Deferred.

PRESIDENT IS PRAISED

Resolution Commending Administration on Mexican Policy Declared Out of Order.

CHICAGO, May 23.—Sunday baseball was condemned in the report of the committee on Sabbath Observance which was presented and discussed at the morning session of the general assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the United States today.

A suggestion from the floor that a sentence in the report "disapproving all secular games and sports on Sunday" be changed to read "all commercialized games and sports" was not accepted. Adjournment hour was reached before the report had been wholly considered and action on it was deferred.

The report also deprecated the opening of the Panama Pacific Exposition on Sunday.

"Sabbath desecration is the greatest problem in America today," declared the Rev. H. L. Bowldy of New York. "Commercialized sport, particularly baseball, is a moral menace."

President Is Praised.

A resolution praising President Wilson and his Cabinet for their policy in averting war with Mexico and for accepting mediation was offered by Rev. T. S. McWilliams. The resolution was declared out of order while the Sunday observance committee report was before the assembly and was not read.

Rev. James Turner of Philadelphia, secretary of the Presbyterian Historical Society asked the general assembly for $100,000, for the work of perpetuating the history of the church.

He declared that he had recently visited Ireland. "Ulster was wise," he said, "in opposing home rule and is entitled to the prayers of the church in America and material help if necessary."

Many Bibles Sent Out.

Rev. John Fox, general secretary of the American Bible Society, told the assembly that 5,250,000 Bibles had been distributed in the year by the Bible society. A special edition, he said, was printed and sold in China for one seventeenth of a cent a copy.

"The Chinese," said he, "have a great reverence for the written or printed word and when you hear of Bibles being burned in the Orient you may be sure that native Chinese didn't do it."

"When the disturbance in Mexico began," said Fox, "we wired Mrs. Francis Hamilton, our Mexico representative to come home. She replied 'too busy to leave, send more Bibles.' Dr. Judson Swift, general secretary of the American Tract Society, told of the distribution of 3,500,000 publications embracing 176 languages and dialects by the organization.

Southern Presbyterians to Have New Church Officer.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., May 23.—Several changes in church policy and church organization were recommended when the Systematic Beneficence Committee reported today to the general assembly of the Southern Presbyterian Church in the United States.

One of these provides for a new office—that of educational secretary. This officer, it is proposed, shall serve under the four executive committees of the assembly—foreign missions, home missions, education and Sunday School. Other recommendations are to give executive secretaries more latitude in their work and to increase the scope of the woman's council.

One million dollars is asked for foreign missions and one half million for home missions.

More than a 1000 bright, young ministers are needed by the church it was asserted in the report on Christian Education and Ministerial Relief. The dearth of pulpitmen is a question that is worrying most churches, it was said, and the expansion of this Presbyterian Church in the south has given that organization a serious problem in the matter of supplying ministers.

HOME OF "UNCLE REMUS" MADE PERMANENT SHRINE

Dedicatory Ceremony of Joel Chandler Harris Memorial at Atlanta Is Held.

ATLANTA, Ga., May 23.—Dedicatory exercises were held here today by which the home of Joel Chandler Harris, the author, will be opened as a permanent shrine and a memorial to the folklore writer whom the world knew as Uncle Remus.

The occasion was arranged primarily by the Uncle Remus Association, embracing admirers of the dead writer's stories.

The ceremonies were held in connection with the annual May festival at the Wren's Nest, as the Harris home is known. Hundreds of children took part in the festival.

WILSON WILL PRESENT DIPLOMAS TO NAVY CLASS

Members of House and Senate Naval Affairs Committee Will Officially Inspect.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., May 23.—Announcement was made at the Naval Academy today that President Wilson will present the diplomas to the members of the graduating class on June 5. It will be Mr. Wilson's first visit to the Academy since he became President.

This year there will be no board of visitors such as has been named in the past. Instead the members of the House and Senate Naval Affairs Committee will form the official inspecting body.

'GRANDMOTHER'S GARDEN' IS ON VIEW AT SHAW'S

Old-Fashioned Flowers, Peonies, Blue Flags and Ribbon Grass, There for 3 Weeks.

The old-fashioned flowers of our grandmothers' gardens are on view today at the Missouri Botanical Garden. They consist of peonies, blue flags—now called iris—ribbon grass, columbines, the herbs—sage, thyme, rosemary and mints—and will be shown every day from sunrise to sunset for three weeks.

The peony display is one of the largest and best in the history of the garden. It includes every known variety of the rose scented, the single and double flowers and they vary in color from white and delicate pink to deep crimson.

The "Grandmother's Garden" is considered one of the most attractive features of Shaw's Garden.

'THE JONAH' TO BE PLAYED

"The Jonah," a farce in three acts, by E. Lawrence Dudley, will be presented at Strassberger's Hall by the students of the Morse School of Expression tomorrow for the benefit of the Keystone Class of the Lafayette Park M. E. Church.

Among those in the cast are Messrs. Ralph Mooney, Roy Denby, Vivian Watkins, Edward McHenry and Julius Starks, and Misses Bessie Barrow, Esther Sudholt, Olivia Gregory and Laura Moore and Mrs. Alice Redmon.

Simple Hair Styles This Year

The "English Bun," with its accompanying dozen of simple styles, which hark back to our own sunbonnet days, is here, we trust, to spend a long time. Someway woman's hair never looks as attractive as when it is dressed in the simplest manner, providing it is one of the styles which suit the face of the wearer. However, the simple methods leave less opportunity for artifice and make greater care necessary in keeping the hair clean and lustrous. Canthrox is a shampoo which offers a quick, easy and economical way to cleanse the scalp. It will restore to the hair its soft fluff, rich gloss and natural color. You make it by dissolving a teaspoonful canthrox, which every drug store carries in stock, in a cup hot water, then pour slowly on the head as you rub briskly. This makes a thick, soothing lather that allays irritation, makes the head feel good and puts the scalp in a healthy condition, which assures beautiful heavy hair. —ADV.

Many Operations Avoided

WHILE of course there are serious cases of feminine ills that nothing but a surgical operation will remedy, the indisputable fact remains that hundreds of operations have been avoided by the wonderful medicinal virtue of

and the very best proof of this is the unsolicited and grateful letters of the recovered ones themselves. By special permission we publish here four of them out of hundreds we have:—

Logansport, Ind.—"My baby was over a year old and I bloated till I was a burden to myself. I suffered from female trouble so I could not stand on my feet and I felt like millions of needles were pricking me all over. At last my doctor told me that all that would save me was an operation, but this I refused. I told my husband to get me a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I would try it before I would submit to any operation. He did so and I improved right along. I am now doing all my work and feeling fine. I hope other suffering women will try your Compound. I will recommend it to all I know."—Mrs. Daniel D. B. Davis, 110 Franklin Street, Logansport, Ind.

Decatur, Ill.—"I was sick in bed and three of the best physicians said I would have to be taken to the hospital for an operation as I had something growing in my left side. I refused to submit to the operation and took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—and it worked a miracle in my case, and I tell other women what it has done for me."—Mrs. Laura A. Griswold, 2300 Blk. East William Street, Decatur, Ill.

Cleveland, Ohio.—"My left side pained me so for several years that I expected to have to undergo an operation, but the first bottle I took of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound relieved me of the pains in my side and I continued its use until I became free from pains. I had asked several doctors if there was anything I could take to help me and they said there was nothing that they knew of. I am thankful for such a good medicine and will always give it the highest praise."—MRS. C. H. GRIFFITH, 7305 Madison Avenue, Cleveland Ohio.

If you are ill do not drag along until an operation is necessary, but at once take Lydia E. Pinkham's medicine.

Charlotte, N.C.—"I was in bad health for two years, with pains in both sides and was very nervous. I had a growth which the doctor said was a tumor, and I never would get well unless I had an operation. A friend advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I gladly say that I am now enjoying fine health."—Mrs. Rosa Sims, 16 Winona St., Charlotte, N.C.

It would seem wise before undergoing an operation to at least give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial.

RELIABLE TESTIMONY.—All our testimonials are guaranteed to be genuine and truthful. They came to us entirely unsolicited and are sincere expressions of gratitude for actual benefits received from the medicine.—THE LYDIA E. PINKHAM MED. CO., LYNN, MASS.

Summer Opera Season Opens ~ "Movies" Invade New Field

Oliver Morosco Now Plans to Combine Spoken Drama and "Movies" in One Play

Scenes Thrown on Screen Before "Speaking" Part Begins, and Also Between the Acts, Expected to Round Out the Story and Further Develop the Characters—Does Away With Regular Stage's Scenic Handicaps and Equally May Interest Lovers of Picture-Plays and the Older Dramatic Form.

By RIPLEY D. SAUNDERS.

OLIVER MOROSCO, now one of New York's most successful play producers, yet still in control of the Pacific Coast theatrical enterprises that laid the foundation of his fortunes is actively experimenting at his Burbank Theater in Los Angeles on the presentation of a play in which moving pictures will be utilized to fill the story-spaces between the scenes of the acted drama.

His experiments are due to his recognition of the truth that, owing to the limitations of the stage and the brief time in which a dramatist is permitted to tell his story, a theatrical performance is more or less cramped. The average play can use only three or four stage settings. The moving pictures are not subject to such restraints. Wherefore Mr. Morosco announces that it is his aim to offset these handicaps, to fill in the time of interruption caused by the setting of scenes, and to reveal the further developments of the characters by utilizing the cinematograph screen. Thus, while keeping his performances intact, he will show the movements of the personages in the story outside of the limited environment of the stage settings.

For instance, explains Mr. Morosco, before the regular performance begins the characters can be introduced upon the screen, and their relative positions in the drama clearly and easily outlined. This would do away with the tedious "planting of the plot," which often impedes the earlier action of a play. During the intermissions, whatever events bear upon the following act can be shown upon the screen, and a sequence of action maintained which, under the present manner of producing plays, is impossible. The idea necessitates the development of a wordless play with the spoken drama, and the ability of the "movies" to tell a connected story has been so convincingly demonstrated that Mr. Morosco has decided to give it a practical test in connection with a play depending upon the spoken lines for its greater interest.

By means of this novel combination it is hoped to interest playgoers in both forms of entertainment at one and the same time. And, incidentally, the new plan may strengthen the "spoken drama" theaters in their competition with the moving pictures.

In the meantime, with this new project under way, comes the announcement that Gabriele d'Annunzio, the famous Italian poet-dramatist, now has devoted his talents to the writing of a scenario for a photoplay, soon to receive a distinguished production in this country, and that he will visit New York in person to supervise its premiere American production.

The D'Annunzio picture-drama is entitled "Cabiria" and it tells the story of the overthrow of Carthage by Rome in the brave days of old. According to present plans it will be presented at the Knickerbocker Theater in New York on June 1, with Harry R. Raver, director-general of the Itala Film Co. of Turin in control, and with Werba & Luescher in charge of the tour which is to follow its metropolitan engagement. It is stated that D'Annunzio will be the guest of Mr. Raver while in this country. At a private presentation of "Cabiria" in the ballroom of the Hotel Astor recently the New York motion picture experts are said to have been profoundly impressed by the pictorial beauty and dramatic power of the production. It is announced that the D'Annunzio photoplay will be booked at first-class theaters in every American city included in its itinerary and it is planned to give the tour the same distinction that is attached to those of the worthiest theatrical offerings in the regular drama field. The special music for the play's presentation was composed by Maestro Ildebrando da Parma of Italy and this score will be interpreted by an orchestra of 65 instruments that will accompany the production on tour.

I am not sure that the gain of D'Annunzio, the most morbid and decadent of modern playwrights, is so gorgeous a feather in the cap of the "movies" as all this preliminary blowing of trumpets might indicate, yet his enlistment as a writer of photoplay scenarios is strikingly significant of the drift of things theatrical. And I confess I am distinctly curious to see "Cabiria"—it may be, you know, that D'Annunzio's genius can't prove itself as unwholesome in pictures as through the medium of the spoken word.

Also on Monday evening, June 1, simultaneously with the premiere of the D'Annunzio photoplay at the Knickerbocker, as if deliberately intended to prove that the "regular" amusement purveyors refuse to forswear the "risque" productions that have driven so many thousand playgoers to the moving-picture shows, William Hammerstein will present at his Victoria Theater in New York City a startling novelty entitled "The Temptation of Adam and Eve," said to be particularly daring in its nakedness and in the sensual emphasis placed upon its story.

Simone de Beryl, the Parisian danseuse who gained so much notoriety in connection with the presentation of "Ma Cherie" last season, will be cast as Eve and M. Agoust as Adam in this new offering, which then will be seen for the first time on any stage. It is a dancing and pantomimic spectacle and its scene is laid in the Garden of Eden. Its action sets forth how Eve was tempted by Satan and how Adam was tempted by Eve to eat the forbidden fruit. A metropolitan heralding of the piece announces that "the creation of temptation and the birth of sin will be faithfully carried out in every detail," also that "Eve will wear her fig-leaf" and that "there will be an obscure chorus of 20 angelic maidens arrayed in the lack of dress for which Eden was famous." Special music has been composed by Doree and an uncommonly picturesque scenic production is promised.

"The Temptation of Adam and Eve" will have its afternoon performances in the Victoria Theater and its evening performances on the Victoria roof-garden. It is expected to score one of the biggest hits of this summer—unless, again, New York's playgoers, both permanent and transient, shall demonstrate the truth that they are tired to the bone of this sort of thing and refuse to respond profitably to its premeditated shocks.

In Boston at this same time Justin Huntley McCarthy, the distinguished Irish playwright and novelist, whose new historical drama, "Charlemagne," recently was produced by E. H. Sothern, finds occasion to tell the American playgoing public some plain truths concerning the present condition of drama on the English-speaking stage.

It is Mr. McCarthy's belief that playgoers have had a surfeit of the "triangle play," the sex play, the sociological, morbidly analytical, clinical and so-called problem plays. He does not hesitate to charge much of the unhealthy trend of the contemporaneous drama to the influence of Ibsen, the master vivisectionist of the monstrous in human nature. It is his conviction that the poetic spirit in drama has been too long suppressed, that wholesome imagination has been too greatly restricted, that playwrights have devoted themselves too exclusively to a study and presentation of the ugly aspects of life. He pleads earnestly, therefore, for a return to higher ideals, for a touch of beauty and nobility in plays, for a more satisfying recognition of the truth that humanity is not utterly decadent and degraded, for a certain encouragement of the aspiration of men and women toward good. And he feels quite sure that a just regard for these things in drama, which is a mirroring of life, will be appreciated and rewarded by the playgoing public.

It is stimulating to learn that this little address, delivered between the acts of a performance of his "Charlemagne" in Boston, was most enthusiastically applauded by Mr. McCarthy's hearers. Personally, I am of the opinion that he has taken the right stand. It is not at all unlikely that the events of next season may prove so convincing in this direction, even to the stubbornest managerial believers in the "smut" play, as to bring about that betterment of the drama for which so many constant lovers of the play are so earnestly desirous.

There is a promise of considerable import to the drama in this country contained in the announcement made during the past week that the Harvard University movement for the establishment of a Harvard Theater as an added educational feature of that great seat of learning is making fine progress.

A news announcement states that the plans for a handsome building of the Georgian type of architecture already have been drawn by Clarence H. Blackall and approved by the directing spirits of the new enterprise. The structure is to be of brick, two stories high in front of the stage and five stories high behind it. The ground-floor auditorium is to seat between 400 and 500 persons and the one gallery will accommodate about 300 persons. The stage space is large because, while it will be used only with the usual equipment of an American stage, it also will be provided with the most recent continental devices for effective lighting and the expeditious shifting of scenery. The committee appointed to raise the funds necessary to pay the cost of the new building includes Mrs. Fiske, Margaret Anglin, John Drew, John Craig, Charles Rann Kennedy, Winthrop Ames, Edward Knoblauch and Percy Mackaye.

It is quite confidently believed that the establishment of such a playhouse at Harvard University will finely stimulate a proper love of the drama and offer that encouragement to a study of the arts of playing, playwriting and play-producing which justly may come within the province of a great educational institution. The result of such an experiment may well command the interest of all concerned in the betterment of the stage as one of the prime factors for the best civilization.

JOHN E. YOUNG IN 'THE FRENCH MAID' AT PARK THEATER

Popular Comedian Heads New Company in Light Opera—Other St. Louis Playbills.

JOHN E. YOUNG in "The French Maid." Park. Opening of light opera season tomorrow evening. Popular star of "The Little Cafe" at the New Amsterdam Theater in New York, former St. Louis favorite at Delmar Garden, now will appear as leading comedian in a series of light operas to be presented by excellent company. Among others in the organization are Carl Haydn, also a former Delmar favorite, tenor star in "The Countess Coquette" last season; Maud K. Williams, prima donna, prominent in many of Henry W. Savage's big productions; Carlos Huntington, character player and singer; Clara Gibson, soubrette; Billy Kent, light comedian; Gypsy Lawrence, character woman; Bert Young, leading juvenile; Edgar Schooley; Augusta Lang, leading ingenue; Harry McCoy, Tracy Elbert and others, including a large chorus well trained under Edgar Schooley's direction.

It is promised that the productions will be well staged, with attractive scenery and costumes. Admission 15, 25 and 50 cents.

VAUDEVILLE. Cavallo's Band concerts and amusement concessions. Forest Park Highlands. Vaudeville bill headed by Fatima, the Oriental dancer, coming direct from the Berlin Winter Garden. Five other high-class acts, including the Erna Baliot Troupe of gymnasts and the Marco Twins, specially engaged to entertain the children. Cavallo's Band gives three concerts daily at the Tekko Gate.

BAND CONCERTS, cabaret performances, orchestra, roof-garden cafe and amusement concessions. Suburban Park.

Next Saturday evening Joe Howard and Mabel McCane, assisted by a company of 50, will open Suburban Theater's summer season of musical comedy with "Love and Politics" as the first offering. Many of Howard's former triumphs will be presented during the season. The theater has been greatly beautified, the lighting arrangements altered and the acoustic properties so improved that it will now regain its original station as the finest summer theater in the West.

KAHNSKY'S Hungarian Orchestra, feature films in the moving picture theater, the new Pike, the dance hall and other attractions. Delmar. The garden will be specially decorated for Pageant week and it is announced that the more "catchy" strains of the Pageant music composed by Frederick S. Converse, Noel Poepping, Ernest R. Kroeger and others will be reproduced by Kahnsky's orchestra.

LAMBS TO GAMBOL TWICE IN OLYMPIC NEXT WEDNESDAY

All-Star Entertainment Will Be Preceded by Grand Minstrel Street Parade.

The Lambs are coming to town next Wednesday. They will be headed by a brass band, led by the world's greatest bandmaster, John Philip Sousa, and before both performances will parade in good old minstrel style to the Olympic Theater, where they promise the most remarkable entertainment ever shown in this city, afternoon and evening.

There will be a minstrel first part. De Wolf Hopper is interlocutor, in black-face. Smart raillery and unctuous drollery between such men as William Collier, Frank McIntyre, Jack Mazzard, Andrew Mack, Nat M. Wills, Frank Lalor, Maclyn Arbuckle, Irvin S. Cobb, Clayton White, Charles E. Evans, Joseph M. Herber, Hap Ward, Thomas A. Wise, Harry Williams and Irving Berlin is promised.

The minstrel part will include the entire strength of the company, and while all the names need not be mentioned it will be good sport to discover whether, behind their black-face makeup you can identify such stars as Bruce McRae, William Farnum, Henry Woodruff, Digby Bell, William Elliott, George Nash, Frederick Perry, Brandon Tynan, Frank Croxton, John Hendricks, Denman Maley, Stephen Maley, W. J. Kelly, Glenn Hall, Malcolm Williams, Neal McCay, George Park, George Barnum, Scott Welsh, Effingham Pinto, Joseph Kilgour, and many others.

Many Bright Features.

The individual numbers of the minstrel first part will be an introductory overture by John Philip Sousa, with incidental solos by De Wolf Hopper and Scott Welsh; humorous ditty "John Brown," by Charles E. Evans; ballad, "Sweet Marie," by Glenn Hall; comic songs by all the end men, especially "My Tango Girl," written and sung by Andrew Mack, and "Off to Mexico," written and sung by Irving Berlin.

This will be followed by what promises to be a funny contest, between four of America's great cartoonists, Winsor McCay, R. F. Outcault, Hy Meyer and Ed Kemble, who will try to outsketch each other, all working at the same time.

The third number will be "The Rainbow Cocktail," a dazzling dance number by Hassard Short and Roy and Kenneth Webb, introducing such popular stars as Henry Woodruff and Edwin Stevens, together with several petticoated Lambs, who, as terpsichorean queens, will seek to disguise the identities of Effingham Pinto, Glenn Hall, Will Deming, Richard Tabor, William Courtleigh Jr. and Hassard Short.

John Philip Sousa will start the "thrill" after a brief intermission, with his new military number, "The Lambs' March," played by his entire band.

A Serious Playlet.

This will be followed by the one serious act on the program, a modern morality play entitled "Experience," written by George V. Hobart. This will present a notable cast, including William Elliott as Youth; Frederick Perry, as Experience; Effingham Pinto, as Passion; Digby Bell, as Wealth; W. H. Kelly, as Pleasure; Wilton Lackaye, as Crime; William Farnum, as Ambition and Stephen Maley, Richard Lalor, Glenn Hall, Will S. Deming, Charles Dow Clark, George Robert and George Barnum in other allegorical roles.

This unusual drama takes its people through the following significant scenes. "In the Land Where Dreams Begin;" "In the Street of Vacillation;" "In the Primrose Path;" "In the Street of Remorse; "In the House of Lost Souls;" "In the Street of Forgotten Days;" "In the Land Where the Dreamer Awakens." The incidental music, composed by Max Bendix, will be a feature of the presentation, with a symphony orchestra of 50.

Other Entertaining Acts.

That incomparable laugh-maker, Nat M. Wills, will follow the serious play in his bright monologue, "The Happy Tramp," after which will be disclosed one of the brightest and liveliest bits of charm and fancy, a dancing number by John L. Golden and R. H. Burnside, called "The Book of Life, or The Dancing Ages." In this DeWolf Hopper will play a jester, Frank McIntyre will play a chubby boy of 8, and Will Archie will be his 6-year-old sweetheart. Bright character bits will be played by Bruce McRae, Maclyn Arbuckle, Charles Hopper, Charles E. Evans, Frank Doane and Stephen Maley, while among the "Ravishing Beauties" in their latest Parisian gowns and millinery will be Morgan Coman, Will J. Deming, William Elliott, John Slavin, E. Ray Goetz and William Courtleigh Jr.

"The Great American Play" is the title of the afterpiece, introducing again the entire company of reveling Lambs. It is described by George V. Hobart, its author, as a "free and easy adaptation of the good old comedy, "The Critic," presented "with apologies here and there to Richard Brinsley Sheridan." The principal roles will be played by Wilton Lackaye, Edward Abeles, Malcolm Williams, Brandon Tynan, Clayton White, Thomas A. Wise, Joseph Kilgour, Richie Ling, Joseph W. Herbert, William J. "APHRODITE" NOW BIGGEST NOVELTY ON PARIS STAGE

Tells Tragic Story of Sinful Love and Receives Great Spectacular Production.

The big spectacular novelty of the present moment in Paris is the production at the Renaissance Theater of Pierre Frondaie's poetic stage version of Pierre Lonij's novel entitled "Aphrodite," which is now attracting capacity audiences because of its pictorial beauty.

The drama, which is in five acts, tells the story of the famous courtesan, Chrysis, who exacts as the condition of conferring her favors upon Demetrios, the sculptor, that he shall at her bidding commit theft, murder and sacrilege. Then, in possession of all for which she asked, when Chrysis goes to Demetrios, it is only to learn that he no longer loves her and that he, too, has a condition to impose, this being that she show herself to the populace bedecked in the jewels that have been stolen for her sake. Whereupon the story reaches its close with Chrysis drinking a fatal draught of hemlock.

The great stage paintings presented during the progress of the play, the splendid tableaux and massing of vast crowds, are said to be memorably impressive, overshadowing the dramatic appeal of the production. Mme. Cora Laparcerie has distinguished herself in the role of Chrysis, and Jean Worms, who plays the role of Demetrios, is said to reveal exceptional power at certain moments, especially in the "big scene" between Demetrios and Chrysis, precipitating the play's final tragedy.

The Panama Exposition management and the University of California have asked Sir Herbert Beerbohm Tree to accept the directorship of a series of classic productions at the Greek Theater in Berkeley during the exposition period. Tree says he is giving the offer serious consideration, but has not yet decided to accept.

LONDON NOW TO HEAR AN AUSTRALIAN OPERA

"Stella," by Prof. Marshall Hall of Melbourne, to Be Produced June 8.

At the Palladium Theater in London, on Monday evening, June 8, an opera entitled "Stella" and possessing the distinction of being the first operatic work to come from an Australian composer, will receive its premier production on any stage.

The new opera is the musical creation of Prof. Marshall Hall of Melbourne, who, although English born, has occupied the chair of music at Melbourne University for the past 25 years. Prof Hall is now in London directing the rehearsals of his score and also arranging for the production of another opera of his composing, its libretto adapted from "Romeo and Juliet," and its score being much more ambitious than that of "Stella." The latter tells a story said to be intensely dramatic, ending with a tragic note, and is set in an Australian environment.

Prof. Hall himself will conduct the premiere performance of "Stella," which is to be produced under Charles Gulliver's management.

FREE ORCHESTRAL CONCERT.

The free concert by the Young People's String Orchestra, under the direction of Victor Lichtenstein, originally announced for last Friday at the Soldan High School, will be given next Tuesday evening at the Victoria Theater. An excellent program will be presented. The soloists are Mrs. Victor Lichtenstein, mezzo-soprano; Dorothy Livingston, Saul Cohen and Isadore Greenberg, violinists, and Frances Ava Yeargain, pianist.

Cubistic productions of "Hamlet" and "A Midsummer Night's Dream" have been made in London, the former by William Post, the latter by Granville Barker. The title role in "Hamlet" is curiously minimized and the Ghost is entirely eliminated. The fairies in "Midsumer Night's Dream" are bronze-colored. Puck is garbed in glaring red and wears a grotesque wig, and stiff cardboard trees are features of the scenic production.

The libretto of Puccini's next grand opera is to be based on the story told in David Belasco's production of "The Darling of the Gods."

MANNION PARK SEASON OF DRAMA NOW OPENS

Stanley Stock Company in "The Whirlpool" Is This Week's Offering.

Mannion's Park opens its season today with the Stanley Stock Company, headed by Arthur Stanley, in the comedy-drama entitled "The Whirlpool."

The play tells an absorbingly interesting story. The scene of its first act is laid in New York, those of the later acts in Montana. It is strong in acting qualities and possesses much breezy comedy and frontier realism.

Arthur Stanley will be seen as Jack Hunter, and Miss Ella Allen as Mildred Baxter, Jack's sweetheart. The supporting company is effectively cast.

THE EASIEST WAY TO END DANDRUFF

Stop Falling Hair and Itching Scalp.

There is one sure way that never fails to remove dandruff completely and that is to dissolve it. This destroys it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning most, if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

If you want to keep your hair looking rich, do by all means get rid of dandruff, for nothing destroys the hair so quickly. It not only starves the hair and makes it fall out, but it makes it stringy, straggly, dull, dry, brittle and lifeless, and everybody notices it. You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive, and four ounces is all you will need. This simple remedy has never been known to fail.—ADV.

"'SNIPERS' SHOT WITHOUT A CHANCE TO SURRENDER"

—Private Draine

Missourian, Reported Dead but Recovering at His Home, Tells of First Day's Fight.

THEY TOOK NO PRISONERS

He Turned His Machine Gun on "Non Combatant" Who Was Shooting at Him.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., May 23.—"It is not a pleasant feeling to be shot and the afterclap is less so," said George Draine, private in the U. S. Marine Corps and one of the wounded in the fighting at Vera Cruz, today, "but I don't believe it is as bad as looking through holes one has shot through Mexicans."

Draine, who is at his home here, having come from Brooklyn, where he had been taken from Vera Cruz on the hospital ship Solace and placed in the Marine Hospital, was shot through the abdomen in the invasion of Mexico by United States forces, and so seriously wounded that he was at first reported dead. He is on sick leave and is recovering rapidly. He expects to spend a month at his parents' home and then return to duty.

"While we were fighting the snipers for several hours after landing we took no prisoners," said Draine, "and as a result every man who had been firing at the American from hiding places was killed even if he held up his hands in surrender.

"This may seem cruel, but it was justifiable in view of the fact that if they were not shot they would probably get more arms and shoot down the Red Cross corps that were removing the wounded Americans. Two priests went about the city with revolvers under their robes and shot down the Red Cross workers. They were charged and shot.

Experience With Non-Combatant."

"I had a peculiar experience soon after landing at Vera Cruz at 11 o'clock, Tuesday, April 21, that almost took my nerve away. As soon as we made the wharf, without being fired upon, the 300 marines who were first sent ashore formed in a long line and proceeded across the promenade between the bay and the public library. We proceeded a short distance and stopped.

"We were surprised to see one lone Mexican walk boldly toward us. He came up to me and said he was a reporter for the Mexican Herald and a noncombatant. He asked me to explain the workings of my machine gun. It was a Colt's automatic, firing 300 shots a minute, and it was one of the three that were landed. I explained the gun to him and he asked: 'Which part of gun would be the easiest to get out of order?'

"I thought this strange, but the Mexicans began to fire on us and the bugle signal was sounded for us to return the fire. I pointed my gun at a group of Mexicans on a street corner and began to fire, when I heard the Lieutenant yelling.

"Bored a Hole Through Him."

"I looked and he pointed at a man standing within fifteen feet of me. It was the newspaper reporter and he was emptying his revolver at me, aiming badly. I swung my gun at him and was horrified at the result. A hole big enough to put my foot through was bored through the middle of his body by the bullets springing in a steady stream from my gun, and he fell with his eyes fixed on me.

"I was so unnerved that I shouted for somebody to remove him from my sight. Then we advanced on the enemy's line.

"The Mexicans retreated every time we advanced, but kept firing from the streets, housetops and other points of vantage.

"It was notable that they would not fight in the open, notwithstanding they were equipped with guns just as modern as our own. They would throw up their hands when we approached, but we had to shoot them anyway. We rushed into a church and killed 25 of the enemy and killed 15 in the public library.

"Then the snipers began to get in their work; one of these got me, but I didn't see him. I felt a stinging pain, then keeled over unconscious and was so near dead that I was reported so in the dispatches. I knew no more until I was in the hospital tent, and soon was taken aboard the Solace.

Boy Snipers Were Killed, Too.

"We made a systematic search of the house and smelled the muzzles of all the guns we found, and if our investigation proved the guns had recently been fired, we shot down the man of the house or gave him a chance to run. In several instances boys 8 years old and younger fired at us from open windows. They were shot, as they could do about as much harm as the grown men."

Marine Draine is very proud of the efficiency of the American battleships' guns and cites instances of the excellent marksmanship and telling work.

"A group of Mexicans were firing down upon our men from the top of a tower near Vera Cruz library," he said. "We could not get a good aim at them and to have ascended the spiral stairway which led to the roof of the building would have meant a great sacrifice of men. So we signaled the ships to fire on the tower. Soon after we had moved out of range there was a boom from one of the ships and down came the tower and the Mexicans.

Fell Walking Toward Enemy.

"Later we saw Gen. Maas' army leaving the city and we fired on the enemy. As we returned through the city and repassed the library, we found another group of Mexicans on a corner. I pointed my gun at them and shouted to the leader to fill it. He was not there and it was then that I was shot. Before I fell I started to walk right toward the Mexicans who were firing on us and as a result of having become unconscious and falling, my life, no doubt, was saved."

Draine says that the Constitutionalists are so eager to obtain the services of United States gunners that the agents of Villa and Carranza, at every opportunity, are offering experienced United States navy men $25 a day in gold if they will desert and join the rebels. He said he knew of no American soldier or sailor who had accepted such an offer, however.

"I wouldn't like to have the United States engage in war with Mexico," the marine said, "but if war is to come, I hope to be ready to return to the service and do my part. I didn't see a single exhibition of cowardice upon the part of the Americans at Vera Cruz and every one of them was eager for the fray. It just seemed that the hotter the fighting the more the boys wanted to be in it."

FORBIDDEE "MOVIES" SHOWN IN A CHURCH

Murder Scenes Cut Out by Chicago Censors Shock Audience and Many Leave.

CHICAGO, May 23.—A church gathering assembled to hear a lecture here last night was horrified when the moving picture operator flashed across the screen a succession of murders, stabbings, drownings and objectionable scenes of other descriptions. The pictures followed one after another without apparent connection and with no explanation. Many of the congregation hastily departed.

Later it was learned the pictures were the "cut-outs" from various censored films. The show was given with the assistance of a member of the City Council who thought it would be educational to follow an illustrated lecture on Mexico with some samples of pictures the censors were forbidding in Chicago.

LAWYER GATHERS WASTE PAPER FOR HOSPITAL FUND

Gets 500 Pounds a Week From Courthouse and Lawyers' Offices and Priest Calls for It.

SOLD TO EASTERN MILL.

Mt. St. Rose Obtained $3942 for Refuse and Old Clothes Collected Last Year.

John B. Dempsey, an attorney, is devoting spare time from his law practice to picking up old paper for the benefit of Mount St. Rose (Consumptive) Hospital. Whenever he returns to his office in the Houser Building, he carries a bundle of papers, which he puts in an unused part of his suite. There it remains until the end of each week, when the Rev. Father John Robinson, who has charge of collections, calls for it.

The priest makes the rounds in an automobile truck driven by him. The junk is sold to an Eastern paper mill for $11 a ton and made into fresh paper again.

Father Robinson has other volunteer aids at work, but he says Dempsey is one of the best workers. For the last three or four months the lawyer has collected an average of about 500 pounds a week. Newspapers, magazines, old law books and law journals fall prey to him.

Courthouse a Fertile Field.

He told a Post-Dispatch reporter, yesterday, that he finds the Courthouse a fertile field. There the judges, employes and newspaper reporters save their papers for him and he usually gets two big bundles at that place in a day. He has lightened the task of the janitors, who do not now find so much paper scattered about. "I sure hope Mr. Dempsey does not tire out on this when the hot weather comes," one of the negro janitors remarked.

Dempsey also has his lawyer friends, the restaurant keeper whose place he patronizes and other persons in business downtown to save papers for him. Many an attorney's office has been relieved by Dempsey of old law books, law papers and other musty volumes in disuse. For many years such documents have taken up room on desks and shelves. With Dempsey at work there has been a general cleaning up of lawyers' offices.

1000 Pounds From One Home.

"I walked into Circuit Judge William T. Jones' office on business the other day," said Dempsey, "and saw a lot of old Daily Records, the official court paper, lying on top of his desk. He said he had no more use for them and that I might have them. There were 30 pounds in this lot."

Dempsey said his richest haul was last week in a lawyer's home on Belt avenue. The lawyer had given Dempsey some old law journals which had been in his office for years, and then told him to clean out the old papers at his home. Dempsey notifed Father Robinson, who went with the truck and found a large quantity of newspapers and magazines in the basement. There were 1000 pounds in the lot.

According to a report by Father Robinson for the year ending last April, $3942 was realized from the sale of old paper and old clothes collected in this way. Besides, 10,000 religious magazines were sent to penal institutions and 1500 garments were given to the poor.

The work has the approval of the St. Louis Anti-Tuberculosis Society.

METHODIST WOMEN TO FIGHT FOR LAITY RIGHTS

Circular Announcing Plans, Signed by Six Men, Is Distributed at Conference.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Ok., May 23.—Plans for a determined fight during the next four years for laity rights for women in the Methodist Episcopal Church South, were laid at the session of the General Conference of the Church here today. A circular signed by six members of the conference was distributed at the meeting and read:

"Believing the time has arrived for a general forward movement in behalf of laity rights for women, in order that at the next general conference there would be no doubt of the success of this simple measure of justice to our Methodist women, a call is hereby made for a meeting of all conference members desiring to co-operate in carrying on a systematic campaign during the next quadrennium. This proposal originates entirely with members of the conference and it should be clearly understood that no women interested in laity rights have suggested it."

GIRL'S ALLEGED ABDUCTOR TO FIGHT EXTRADITION

Man Held in Canada After Iowa Maid Returns Home Admits Identity.

DES MOINES, Io., May 23.—Franz Meyer, alleged abductor of Elizabeth Huppertz of Oelwein, Io., who is being held by the police of Winnipeg, Manitoba, at the request of Attorney-General Cosson of Iowa, has engaged attorneys and will fight extradition, it was announced this afternoon. He has admitted his identity.

The Huppertz girl, who is 15 years old, returned to her parents at Oelwein from California, last week, after an absence of nearly a year following her disappearance.

Meyer was arrested last night. George Bidwell, special agent of the Department of Justice, who is in Winnipeg, today received instructions to employ counsel and apply to Washington for extradition papers.

Shall Have the Privilege of eeting This Week Some of the ood People Who Were Already ere When the Lacledes and ther Bontons Arrived—The Caokias of Cahokia, the Uhrigs of rig's Cave, the Man Who Left is Footprints on the River Front ear the Ead's Bridge, and All hose Original Settlers Will Be Vith Us—Something About the irst Bluebook, and How Science Dug It Up in an Old Boneyard.

BY CLARK M'ADAMS

HE glory of St. Louis comes in two parts, and we are to see something of the more obscure part this week. The fact is that problem of modern metropolitanism, which many American cities are enthusiastic about, s us a little. We were a metropolis once re, and like getting married a second time, n't as exciting to strive for a million or some r popular objective again as it would be had never had the sensation of being the biggest in the country.

he late Prof. McGee thought St. Louis had opulation of about half a million at the time which Mr. Mackaye is reaching back in the sque of St. Louis. The professor went over ground at his leisure for a matter of two or ee years, and turned in a careful scientific sus report. The bulk of the city at that time over in the American Bottom opposite North Louis, and the center of it was marked by great Cahokia Mound. This side of the river, ich was subsequently found to be better suited the monopolistic purposes of the Terminal ilroad Association, was reserved for fashione suburban settlements, and the principal ony of this sort centered about Broadway and und street. It was that colony from which Louis got the name of the Mound City. The unds there were ranged along the crest of the ff in a most picturesque way, and everything sidered the district compared very favorably h our more recent Portland place. There s a big mound at Mound street which set off row much as Mr. Edward A. Faust's new me sets off Portland place, and the people who ne across from the city proper in the late ernoon to those palatial piles of another age re brought over by liveried slaves in the xury of hand-tooled canoes. That our front milies of today have anything on our front milies of that remote time is very much to be ubted. Mr. Mackaye evidently doesn't think ything of it. He has all but ignored the new ople.

THAT we got that half million the first time without having any Half-Million Club or resorting to boom devices of any sort is kely enough. As Prof. McGee pointed out, there ere no buffalo in the country then, and it was ecessary for people to work. The buffalo came ke an eruption out of the Northwest about the ime Columbus came out of the East. After it rossed the Mississippi and ranged into the Alleghenies and down to the Gulf, it was not necesary for the people to work any more, and being uman, they didn't. The Sioux, who had been iving in villages and doing a small farming usiness in the Virginias, left their homes and anged west and north with the retreating buffalo ntil they finally located in the Dakotas and ecame the most powerful of the buffalo hunting ribes. The buffalo afforded food and clothing. The Indian couldn't think of anything else he eeded, so he gave up raising tobacco and corn, nd became a follower of the chase. There was long period of time in which the buffalo abounded to such an extent that it was not necessary to ollow the chase very hard, and being human gain, he didn't do that, either. This made him azy, like the average son of a rich man, and at he time the white people won the West he was such citizen as he had been when he weeded obacco and hoed corn. The Indian was not eculiar. The same process will work out in he same way with anybody, irespective of race.

The buffalo knocked the first St. Louis higher han a kite. Everybody knew hunting at once, he city was deserted, property fell into unreir, the fire went out on top of the temple, and he chapter closed. When Coronado came up ver the plains a couple of centuries later he ound many of the Indians, especially the Comches, following the buffalo about with the olves, and, like the wolves, eating the flesh of he buffalo raw. Many of those reversions were o doubt former residents of the old St. Louis, nd had been in their day respected pillars of community which was not paralleled anywhere orth of Mexico. They had gone to the country.

MR. MACKAYE purposes reviving that era for us. He has been fascinated by the romance of the original St. Louis. A great many of us have been, but it took time to et everybody to see it. A mound to most people was for a long time a pile of dirt, just as the Railway Exchange Building will some day be a pile of dirt. Happily, that is all over. Everybody is interested now, and we will all be there n the side of Art Hill when the original front families march in and show us what they were like.

It is amazing that this should have been so long coming. Any archaeologist will tell you that there is more interest in the first St. Louis in Europe than there is in St. Louis. Almost nobody goes over from St. Louis to see the Cahokia Mound, but foreigners see it, and even come here to see it. There is no such structure anywhere else in the world. We have made our mistake in not seeing it in the light of what science has revealed. Nobody guessed until a very few years ago what made Cahokia and what destroyed it. It was not until the old bone men discovered that the buffalo had not always been here, but was comparatively a newcomer that he saw the original St. Louisan, as we see the ancient Greek, in his own image. We do not think of Pericles and that excellent reporter Thucydides when we see a Greek bootblack, nor should we associate the men who made St. Louis the Mound City in our minds with the warwhoops in the 101 Ranch Show. They were quite distinct. We should, indeed, think of those original St. Louisans with pride and affection, as we shall no doubt learn to do this week.

If we do not, we ought to live in Chicago, which began with the stockyards.

Once All War and No Fighting; Now, All Fighting and No War

WASHINGTON, May 23.

MAJ. J. J. DICKSON, former St. Louis newspaper man, has retired from war and journalism and is looking after the Government's interest in the Panama Exposition at a salary of $6000 a year.

But when the war horse neighs and the papers are full of black headlines the Major has just got to talk about the old days. When the news reached Washington that several marines had been killed at Vera Cruz and the President still insisted that the United States was at peace with all the world, the Major exclaimed:

"I was in the Spanish War. Then it was all war and no fighting. Now it is all fighting and no war."

Loss of $80 Persuades Kern to Buy Purse and a Keyring

SENATOR JOHN W. KERN has decided that experience is costly. He recently paid an $80 fee and he says that the charges are higher than those of the best tango teachers in Washington.

Senator Kern has a lock box in a vault in Indianapolis. Just when it became necessary to get an insurance policy from the box he discovered that he had lost his key. He wrote to the bankers and asked them to open the box with their key and send to him the policy, but they absolutely refused to open it unless he was present. There was nothing else to do and so he went to Indianapolis. The trip cost him $60.

Kern has a habit of carrying bills in his coat pocket and a few days later he lost $20, bringing his contribution to experience up to $80. Then he bought a keyring and a pocketbook.

Hoosier Poet Makes Marshall Wish He Had Run Second Best

AN Indiana poet has written a song which he thinks should become the official music of the Panama-Pacific Exposition. He has asked Vice-President Marshall to arrange the matter. The Vice-President took one look at the poem and then remarking that a man has to choose sometimes went back to hear Senator Reed speak.

A few of the stanzas of the poem are here reproduced:

"When Darien sailed the briney deep,
Our present age was fast asleep.
Ship ahoy! ship ahoy!
Ship ahoy! Panama.
De Lesseps' dream has now come true,
Darien's isthmus we sail through.
Ship ahoy, etc.
Great men of dreams find all profusion,
Waiting for their bold intrusion.
Ship ahoy, etc.
Radiant flowers perfume the air
And food is growing everywhere."

Then comes the jubilative "ship ahoy" chorus.

As the Vice-President wandered into the Senate chamber he said sadly:

"Poor Darien, how he must have suffered."

"How's that?" someone asked.

"Don't you remember what Keats says: 'All Cortez's men stood silent upon a peak in Darien?'"

ANOTHER APPEAL IN PROSPECT FOR JONES STOCK SUIT

Plaintiffs Will File Objections to Allowance Made by Referee Reynolds.

ACTION BEGUN IN 1903

They Were Minority Stockholders in Deal to Sell Missouri Edison Co.

After having been in litigation more than 10 years at a cost of nearly $100,000, and passed upon six times by courts and special masters, the celebrated suit of Morgan Jones and others against the Union Electric Light & Power Co. will go a third time to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for final adjudication, if the finding of Special Master Matt G. Reynolds allowing $309,205.33 to Jones and his associate litigants is approved by the United States District Court.

This case presents a most striking example of the law's delays. Should another appeal be taken, it will probably be two years more before a final decision can be obtained from the Court of Appeals.

The suit grew out of the merger of the Missouri Edison and the Union Electric Light and Power companies in 1903. Jones, Frank A. Ruf and other stockholders of the Missouri Edison Co. were dissatisfied with the price offered for the shares of the Missouri Edison in the consolidation. The directors of Union Electric, who planned and executed the merger, decided that the stockholders of the Missouri Edison Co. were entitled for their stock to only 15 per cent of the value of the consolidated properties, or $1,500,000.

Amount Half Intervenors Expected.

The litigants contended that they were entitled to approximately 50 per cent of $5,000,000. The United States Circuit Court of Appeals, after a full hearing of the case, decided that they were entitled to 43 per cent, and ordered the lower court to find the value of the properties at the time of the merger and allot to Jones, Ruf and the other intervenors their proportionate share on the 43 per cent basis. Reynolds, as special master, found that they were entitled to but $309,205.33, which is about half what they expected.

The Reynolds report will go to the United States District Court for approval. The attorneys for Jones and Ruf already have declared that they would appeal from this finding if it should be approved by the District Court. One of the peculiar features of this case is that in every instance the lower courts decided against the litigants and in favor of the company and on appeal the higher court has reversed the lower court and decided in favor of Jones and his associates.

The Morgan Jones suit was filed April 1, 1904. A demurrer to the allegations of the petition was filed by the defendants and this demurrer was sustained by Federal Judge Pollock, before whom it was heard in St. Louis.

Trial Court Is Reversed.

Jones' attorney appealed to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals to test the sufficiency of their allegations. The Appellate Court reversed the trial court in a decision which has since become one of the leading opinions on the rights of minority stockholders.

The upper tribunal declared that the rights of the stockholders of the Missouri Edison Co. had not been protected in the merger, and sent the case back to the United States District Court at St. Louis for trial.

Arthur B. Shepley was appointed special master to hear the evidence and report on the case. He began the taking of testimony Feb. 21, 1907, and finished May 5, 1909. Early in 1910—nearly six years after the suit had been filed—Shepley reported his findings to the District Court. He held that Jones and the intervening petitioners had not proven that their rights were not protected in the merger.

Shepley's report was sustained by the District Court, making it necessary for the plaintiffs to take the case again to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals.

Another Appeals Victory.

The case was not submitted until more than a year after the appeal was taken but the Court of Appeals, upon a full investigation of the facts as shown by the record, handed down a decision directing the District Court to award 43 per cent of the value of the consolidated plant to the stockholders of the Missouri Edison Co.

When the decree of the Appellate Court came down the District Court appointed former Circuit Judge Matt Reynolds as special master to find the value of the plant at the time of the consolidation and determine how much was due to Jones and the other litigants. Reynolds had the case for nearly a year before he announced a conclusion.

The attorneys for Jones declare that Reynolds' allowance was about one-half what they should have gotten. They will file exceptions to the report and if the report is accepted by the court, an appeal will be taken to the Circuit Court of Appeals to have it fix the amount that should be awarded to the litigants.

Two Litigants Are Wealthy.

Jones lives in Texas and Ruf is a drug manufacturer in St. Louis. Both are millionaires. Many of the other litigants were men of moderate means. The widows, who inherited Missouri Edison stock, originally joined in the litigation but were forced to drop out on account of the great expense.

Reynolds fixed the fee of the lawyers for the plaintiffs at $65,000 but they are asking for a much larger sum. Several law firms are said to have devoted from two to three months' time to the case during each of the 10 years that it has been pending.

Reynolds was paid $500 for his services. The expenses of the litigation, outside of attorneys' fees, have been heavy.

SPANISH ROYALTY NOT ANXIOUS TO WELCOME COLONEL

Roosevelt's Unexpected Visit Expected to Excite Resentment of Bourbon Court.

WAR IS NOT FORGOTTEN

Presence of Most Talked of American Officer Will Arouse Much Interest.

Copyright, 1913, by Press Publishing Co. (New York World.)

MADRID, May 23.—Col. Roosevelt's announcement in New York that he will sail May 30 to attend his son Kermit's marriage here to Ambassador Willard's daughter was the first intimation given to the Spanish court of the former President's intention to visit Spain. It was generally understood that he would not come. There seemed every reason to think it would not be convenient for him to leave home again so soon after an absence of nine months.

And it was taken for granted that he would recall the fact that he was the most talked-of officer in the United States, fighting in the army against Spain in the late war. It creates a situation at the Spanish court which can better be imagined than described.

If his son was going to marry an Infanta of Spain at Madrid the Royal family could find an excuse for absenting themselves from the wedding. But an Ambassador of a foreign nation has to be treated with the most rigid etiquette. If the Willards want royalty at the wedding and go about it in the right way, royalty will have to come. It is understood that they will be there.

But the court is amusing itself now with inventing the various kinds of illnesses which the Dowager Queen can suddenly acquire to necessitate her leaving the country at once for her native Austria. She is a good woman and served the people faithfully during her son's minority, but she is, above all else, a Bourbon, a race that forgets nothing. She has certainly not forgotten Roosevelt.

King Alfonso is an amiable young man, but he, too, is a Bourbon. It will be an historical occasion when he entertains Roosevelt at the royal palace, as he will have to do if the Colonel accepts the invitation which Spanish court etiquette demands shall be sent to him.

An Ambassador said the other day, in commenting upon his coming here: "It's a chance in a million for a man to get in close touch with the underlying forces which are working themselves out in Mexico. The Spanish Cabinet know all about them—nobody else does.

"Roosevelt can meet every member of the Cabinet, if he wants to. They can't decline to meet him if they are alive when he is here, and they can't keep him from getting hold of some of their secrets. He knows the game too well. It's only too bad that such a pretty little bride will have to take a back seat. The Colonel will be the whole show. I shouldn't wonder if some of the old Spanish War veterans came a few hundreds of miles to see him. It will be more exciting than a bullfight—when one remembers the Bourbons."

Y. M. C. A. TO OPEN A DOWNTOWN BRANCH

General Offices of the Association Will Be Located in the New Branch.

The general offices of the Young Men's Christian Association, now occupying the fifth floor of the Central Y. M. C. A. Building, at Grand and Franklin avenues, are to be moved downtown early this summer. A branch of the association will also be opened in the same downtown building.

The change of location was decided upon definitely at a meeting of the Board of Directors in the Mercantile Club, Friday afternoon. The plan has been under discussion for a year and a committee is now looking for a suitable location. Several localities have been proposed but no selection has been made.

Philemon Bevis, general secretary of the Y. M. C. A., said the object in establishing a downtown branch was to put the association in closer touch with a larger element of business people who have not yet availed themselves of membership in the six other branches of the association. It is intended to house the new downtown branch in rented quarters temporarily, and later to erect an association building.

GRIZZLY ROUTS HUNTERS

Beast Then Flees, Wounded Guide Follows, Kills It.

CODY, Wyo., May 23.—A courier has just reached here from Table Mountain with a message detailing the encounter of a New York hunting party with a large grizzly bear and the wounding of the guide, Joe Jones.

Jones and John Murgatroyd were attacked by the animal, which tore the flesh of one of Jones' legs to the bone. Murgatroyd was so excited that he jammed his rifle and was unable to shoot. Then, the message says, he ran and the grizzly took flight in another direction for fear Roosevelt's friend might decide to return. Jones pluckily followed and killed the beast.

John McAleenan, wholesale jeweler, his brother, Arthur McAleenan, and R. H. Boyd, all of New York, are with Murgatroyd.

Pastor to Speak on "New St. Louis."

Dr. S. H. Woodrow will discuss "The New St. Louis," at Pilgrim Congregational Church, this evening, and will endeavor to answer the oft-repeated question, "What is the matter with St. Louis?"

Nugents

A Sale of Surplus Stocks, Manufacturers', Jobbers', and Our Own, at Much Less Than Early Season Prices

Nugents

It is the end of the Spring season for manufacturers, jobbers and wholesalers.

As is customary at this time of the year they inaugurate sales, disposing of remaining stocks at very low prices, in order to prepare for the Fall and Winter business.

Anticipating this condition, we have been preparing for some time to take advantage of it, and tomorrow we inaugurate a merchandising event as a result.

In addition to the special purchases featured we will include broken assortments and slow-moving goods from our own stocks.

Particular attention is directed to the fact that there are no comparative prices quoted in this announcement, and emphasis is placed upon the statement that every item in the advertisement is sharply underpriced.

Savings of ten to fifty per cent will be effected on every purchase made of these goods.

150 Women's and Misses' Suits, $15

These Suits, remaining from our Spring lines, are fashioned of wool crepe, gaberdine, crepe poplin, Bedford cords, serges and black and white check materials. The season's best colorings as well as black, navy and novelty effects. The reductions are from forty to sixty per cent from former prices.

Sizes, misses' 14 to 18; women's regular and extra sizes.

CARNEGIE CASH TO AID PROF. NIPHER IN EXPERIMENTS

Institute at Washington Will Furnish Funds for Local Magnetic Variations Test.

DYNAMITE TO BE USED

Washington University Instructor to Take Half Ton of Explosive to Lake Huron Woods.

The Carnegie Institute at Washington, D. C., has notified Prof. Francis E. Nipher of Washington University that it will finance experiments on the phenomena of local magnetic variations, which he expects to make at his retreat on upper Lake Huron this summer. They will be a continuation of his work which has already attracted world-wide attention.

The psychist desired to notice what effects heavy explosions of dynamite will have on the magnetic needle. The expense of carrying enough of the explosive to a point so remote that it can be exploded safely is considerable. Lake boats refuse to carry the dynamite and Prof. Nipher faced the alternative either of chartering a boat and getting a wagon to haul dynamite 40 miles.

He wrote to the institute that he would require about $130 for this purpose. The reply was that he might use any part of $500. This sum, he thinks, will be more than ample for all his purposes.

Hopes to Solve Mystery.

Prof. Nipher hopes to clear up a matter that has long puzzled scientists. It has been noticed that the magnetic needle is subject to two sorts of variations, one of which are general throughout the earth's magnetic field and the other which are relatively local. About 12 years ago, an observer noticed that there was some kind of an explosion on the sun and that simultaneously there were magnetic disturbances throughout the entire earth field.

By a series of experiments, Nipher has almost completely demonstrated that local vibrations are often due to weather disturbances, such as heavy winds, etc. The theory is that these disturbances affect the movement of air particles and the electrons they contain in such a wav as to disturb the local magnetic field.

He has been able to produce vibrations of a highly sensitive needle by fanning magnets which control it. His next undertaking is to do on a small scale exactly what the explosion on the sun did on a large scale. In other words, he believes that great local explosions will cause local vibrationns.

Will Depart in June.

He has made several experiments on a small scale at the university, but the results were not altogether satisfactory. He found that the jar of street cars in the city made accurate observation impossible. It is for this reason he will take the explosive to his land on Lake Huron. He expects to depart in the middle of June.

He says he will probably take half a ton of dynamite. He does not expect to explode all of this at one time, but will experiment with gradually increaced discharges.

Complete demonstration of the causes of local magnetic variations will be of great importance, not only to scientists, but to navigators and surveyors. Th eCarnegi einstitute has given the matter much study and recently made extensive world-wide charts at great expense.

17 TURNER SOCIETIES IN FIELD MEET JUNE 13—14

First Time in Several Years That St. Louis Has Seen Annual Event.

Athletes from 17 gymnastic societies of St. Louis and Illinois will compete at the annual festival and field day in Priester's Park, June 13 and 14, under the auspices of the St. Louis District of the North American Gymnastic Union. St. Louis Turners for several years have held their meets in Illinois towns.

Otto Kallmeyer, chairman of the Board of Directors of the St. Louis District, is president of the Executive Committee, and John Friesel is secretary. The Finance Committee is headed by B. J. Korzendorfer, and the Committee on Publicity by Frederick Warmbold.

The competition will be started Saturday, June 13, and continue over Sunday. There will be mass drills by children, juniors, women and actives on Sunday afternoon. The announcement of winners and the distribution of prizes will be made in the evening.

Everyone Is Invited to Visit Our Store and Inspect the Many Articles of Historic Interest That Will Be on Display

In conjunction with the Pageant and Masque of Saint Louis, which will be held the latter part of next week, we shall have on display, beginning Monday, May the 25th, a very fascinating display of heirlooms and relics, most of which figured in the early history of our City.

These have been generously loaned to us by some of the leading old families of Saint Louis and are articles which, under ordinary circumstances, would be seen only by a few people if it were not for this special exhibition.

There will be old gowns, millinery, shawls, lace, jewelry, combs, fans, and other articles that were used by women of the past two centuries, while other articles on display, owned by men, include sabers, used in the War of 1812, dueling pistols, sword canes, waistcoats, etc.

One of the most interesting parts of the exhibition will be a number of photographs taken between 1850 and 1880, which show how well-known parts of Saint Louis looked at the time these photographs were taken.

This exhibit will be made on the Second, Third and Fourth Floors, and a catalogue, stating to whom each article belonged and by whom loaned, will be supplied to those who visit this exhibition.

LOS ANGELES UTILITIES BEATEN IN BITTER FIGHT AGAINST MUNICIPAL PLANT

Telephone and Railway Interests Help Light Interests Oppose Los Angeles' Move.

MOST VOTERS ARE WOMEN

Cutting of Rates to Consumer and Offer to Buy Aqueduct Power Final Appeals.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., May 23.—With nearly 80,000 indicated horsepower coming into the city from the now nearly completed Owens River aqueduct, the people of Los Angeles have decided, by a vote of more than two to one, that they will run their own light plants, as they already are running their own water works system. This decision finally ratified at the polls May 8, came as the culmination of a popular uprising against the electric light and gas combinations which started with the commencement of work on the aqueduct nearly seven years ago.

The campaign for the bond issue, which carried with it the preliminary work of setting the municipal plants in motion, was probably the most vigorous in the history of this city. Long suffering through being subjected to the usual methods employed by light and gas companies in furnishing gas or light, such as over-charges, with scant or no courtesy when complaint was made, and inability or refusal to supply power for city street extensions made the people seem to be a unit in the matter until the power corporations began one of the most bitter campaigns of opposition ever known here.

Ads Answered in Next Column.

For a time, their efforts seemed to gain strength. However, with but one of the six daily newspapers supporting their side, the corporations were forced to buy space in the other papers by the page and run their ads. In several instances, the papers would run the ad, and in an adjoining column, answer the arguments set forth by the corporations.

Foot notes, asking the hostile editors to "Play fair in their statements" were appended and these usually brought out hot retorts in the column adjoining.

"We are buying space in this paper to put our case before the people," read one of the foot notes, "and ask the editor to be fair in his statements."

"We are selling space to the power corporations to run their advertisements because we need the money," came back the answer. "But the fact that they buy our space does not mean that they can buy our opinion and we will give this as we see it."

Two papers refused to run the power company advertisements at any price.

The principal contention of the corporations in fighting the bonds was that the city was already bonded nearly to the legal limit; that the city would have to issue millions of more bonds before their plants could be put in shape to begin business, and that these bonds would greatly increase the tax rate of the poor man.

The latter feature was especially played up. Tables purporting to show all of the bond issues were printed, but city officials denied the correctness of the amounts, and no one knows yet whether they were right or wrong.

Offer City $1,000,000 a Year.

As an eleventh hour argument the corporations came out in their page-wide advertisements offering to pay the city $1,000,000 a year net for the use of the power generated by the aqueduct, citing that this $1,000,000 could be used in reducing the tax rate.

This argument proved the worst boomerang of all. Opposition papers immediately came out with glaring headlines saying it the power of the aqueduct was worth $1,000,000 a year to the power trust, who wouldn't offer $1,000,000 unless they knew they would get back three dollars for every one dollar they spent, it was worth many more millions to the people.

An election already called for the purpose of issuing more school bonds also was seized upon by the power corporations as an added inducement to keep down the tax rate.

To all of these tax rate arguments, municipal officials who favored the bonds showed that the waterworks system, which was taken over by the city in the face of practically the same arguments, had, since the city owned the system, reduced water bills from $1.25 a month to 75 cents and still was making a surplus every year, with the probability of still another cut in the near future. They argued that if the city could do this with the waterworks and keep the system out of politics, as has been done, the city could do it with the other domestic utility plants and that, instead of adding to the tax burdens of the people, it would greatly reduce these charges, beginning probably in the first year.

Companies Reduce Rates.

This line of argument was strengthened by the power corporations themselves, who admitted they could still further lower rates and make a paying profit and, in fact, they did file a schedule of lower rates with the Council. This was used against them in the campaign as showing by their own admissions that they had been overcharging.

One surprising thing about the election was the small vote cast. Out of a registration of nearly 245,000 but 79,378 persons voted. Of these, 56,199 were in favor of the $6,500,000 issue and 23,179 against. The vote of the women was larger than that of the men and they were in great majority for the bonds. With the carrying of the bonds, it is the intention of the city at once to begin the work of acquiring sites for an electric power plant.

The City Council some time ago offered $17,000,000 to the Pacific Light and Power Co. for its plants, lines, conduits, etc., but was met with a counter offer of $26,000,000 and it is unlikely that the city and company can get together on a price. City Attorney Stephens declares the city will begin work on its own plant, paralleling the lines of the P. L. & P.

Light at five cents per kilowatt hour is an expectation for the near future. Last year, the corporation charged 6½ cents a kilowatt hour, then reduced it to 6 cents and just before the bond election offered to make the rate 5½. As a matter of fact, electric rates in Los Angeles have shown a reduction of half a cent a year steadily for several years, giving this city the cheapest light in the United States with but one or two exceptions.

Gas Price of 70 Cents to Be Cut.

Free lamps are furnished by the corporation here, while in Pasadena with a rate of 5 cents a kilowatt hour, the people have to pay for their lamps, which, it is believed, brings their rates even higher than those of Los Angeles.

The gas company, which now charges 70 cents for artificial gas and the same for mixed, or natural gas, announces as new prices, 68 for artificial, 60 for mixed and 52 for natural. These prices, it is claimed, can be greatly reduced by a municipal plant.

The harbor districts, because of the long reach of pipe necessary to deliver gas or power there, pay approximately 25 per cent more than Los Angeles proper, but to this there is but scant objection.

Stockholders of the various power companies, including light, gas, telephones and street railways, all worked

Proposed Charter Gives to St. Louis Right to Own Utilities

UNDER the present city charter St. Louis has no power to own, operate, buy, sell or lease public utilities such as street railways, subways, electric light or gas plants.

But if the new city charter should be adopted at the special election to be held, probably June 30, the city would acquire this charter power.

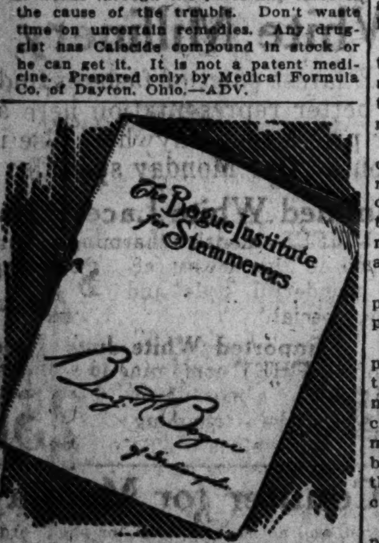
After the adoption of the charter, a public utility could be acquired by construction, purchase or lease. The Board of Aldermen, to be created by the new charter, would enact the necessary legislation for the acquisition of the property and the people, by a two-thirds vote, would authorize the bonds to pay for it.

The bond issue could be levied against the value of the property of the utility, or against its earning power, and the bonds paid off from the revenues derived from its operation.

It is considered likely that a subway will be the first public utility to be acquired by the city. Under the proposed charter the city will have the power to build a subway and lease it to an operating company.

Gives Quickest and Surest Cure for All Sore Feet

The following is absolutely the surest and quickest cure known to science for all foot ailments: "Dissolve two tablespoonfuls of Calocide compound in a basin of warm water. Soak the feet in this for full fifteen minutes, gently rubbing the sore parts." The effect is really wonderful. All soreness goes instantly; the feet feel so good you could sing for joy. Corns and callouses can be peeled right off. It gives immediate relief for sore bunions, sweaty, smelly and aching feet. A twenty-five cent box of Calocide is said to be sufficient to cure the worst feet. It works through the pores and removes the cause of the trouble. Don't waste time on uncertain remedies. Any druggist has Calocide compound in stock or he can get it. It is not a patent medicine. Prepared only by Medical Formula Co. of Dayton, Ohio.—ADV.



The Bogue Institute for Stammerers

of Indianapolis

On Page 37 Every STAMMERER

will find the guarantee that is given to all students upon entering the Bogue Institute for Stammerers.

This guarantee is only one of the intensely interesting features of this new and valuable 68-page book—a book which will gladly be sent free to those who will ask for it.

The Bogue method of curing stammering is based on the experience of Benjamin N. Bogue, who cured himself after being afflicted for 20 years. He knows the mental anguish and the social and business handicaps common to all stammerers and, as well, he knows the many unsuccessful efforts that every stammerer makes in the desperate attempt to regain perfect speech.

Mr. Bogue knows these things because he has experienced them himself. And in offering this method to those who are afflicted, he agrees to refund every penny paid him as tuition, provided he does not furnish you instructions which, if followed, will positively cure you of stammering. You are to be the sole judge. He leaves the decision entirely to you. His method has cured hundreds of others, and it will cure you, and it will cure any person of normal intelligence, eight years of age or older.

Read on page 37 of this free book about the Bogue guarantee and what is means to you.

Turn to page 5 and read the story of Mr. Bogue's life—how he suffered as a stammerer and how he cured himself. Begin on page 16 and read in detail the causes of stammering. Turn to page 23 and read the results of stammering. Then begin at page 28 and read the explanation of the Bogue method of cure.

Read the dozens of grateful expressions from former stammerers who have been cured by the Bogue method and are glad to tell you about it. Then write for this interesting and valuble 68-page book. It is free to you. State your age and how long you have stammered and the book will be mailed to you promptly. Address makes "Kisses" that delight the kiddies. They're so tempting, delicious and tasty that they're liked by young and old. No "store" kisses compare with them in purity and flavor. It's so easy to make them that even the youngsters can do it and our book tells how it's done. Snow-Mellow makes creams and other fine confections, among which is the children's favorte, "Divinity Candy."

Every mother and housewife should keep Snow-Mellow on hand. It makes cake fillings, cake icings, and dainty whipped-up desserts. Our book shows 28 ways in which you can use Snow-Mellow. Every 25c box makes seven desserts for four to six people. It takes the place of whipped cream with hot chocolate or coffee. Every thrifty woman should have it in the house. Price 25c. Your grocer has it, and gives free with each package a book and unique beater spoon. If he's out of stock and you'll send us his name and 25c we'll mail Snow-Mellow with book and beater Free. How to Save Your Eyes

Try This Free Prescription

Do your eyes give you trouble? Do you already wear eyeglasses or spectacles? Thousands of people wear these "windows" who might easily dispense with them. You may be one of these, and it is your duty to save your eyes before it is too late. The eyes are neglected more than any other organ of the entire body. After you finish your day's work you sit down and rest your muscles, but how about your eyes? Do you rest them? You know you do not. You read or do something else that keeps your eyes busy; you work your eyes until you go to bed. That is why so many have strained eyes and finally other eye troubles that threaten partial or total blindness. Eyeglasses are merely crutches; they never cure. This free prescription, which has benefited the eyes of so many, may work equal wonders for you. Use it a short time. Would you like your eye troubles to disappear as if by magic? Try this prescription. Go to the nearest wide-awake drug store and get a bottle of Optona tablets; fill a two-ounce bottle with warm water, drop in one tablet and allow it to thoroughly dissolve. With this liquid bathe the eyes two to four times daily. Just note how quickly your eyes clear up and how soon the inflammation will disappear. Don't be afraid to use it; it is absolutely harmless. Many who are now blind might have saved their eyes had they started to care for them in time. This is a simple treatment, but marvelously effective in multitudes of cases. Now that you have been warned don't delay a day, but do what you can to save your eyes and you are likely to thank us as long as you live for publishing this prescription.—ADV.

Joplin Woman Is Restored by Wonderful Stomach Remedy

Mrs. Hillman Took Treatment Two Years Ago—Has Been Well Ever Since.

Mrs. Ida Hillman of Joplin suffered from stomach ailments for twelve years. She followed the advice of several expert physicians and took a great deal of medicine. Two years ago she discovered Mayr's Wonderful Stomach Remedy—and she has been well since. Mrs. Hillman took but a few doses. She writes:

"I suffered with stomach trouble almost twelve years. I tried many doctors, but received no help until, while in Cleveland, O., I read your notice in a paper and concluded to try Mayr's Wonderful Stomach Remedy. Since then I have felt like a new woman.

"I took only four bottles, but that was all that was needed to make me well. It has been almost two years and I have had no return of my trouble."

Similar accounts of the remarkable results of the use of Mayr's Wonderful Stomach Remedy come from all parts of the country. It clears the digestive tract of mucoid accretions and poisonous matter. It brings swift relief to sufferers from stomach ailments, liver and intestinal disorders. Many declare it has saved them from operations; many are sure it has saved their lives.

Because of its remarkable success there are many imitators of Mayr's Wonderful Stomach Remedy, so be cautious. Be sure it's MAYR'S. Probably it is known among your own neighbors. Ask them. Go to Judge & Dolph and Wolff-Wilson Co. drug stores and ask them about the wonderful results it has been accomplishing—or send to Geo. H. Mayr, Mfg. Chemist, 154-156 Whiting St., Chicago, Ill., for free book on stomach ailments and many grateful letters from people who have been restored. Any druggist can tell you its wonderful effects.—ADV.

Get at the Real Cause—Take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets

That's what thousands of stomach sufferers are doing now. Instead of taking tonics, or trying to patch up a poor digestion, they are attacking the real cause of the ailment—clogged liver and disordered bowels.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets arouse the liver in a soothing, healing way. When the liver and bowels are healthy, away goes indigestion and stomach troubles.

If you have a bad taste in your mouth, tongue coated, appetite poor, lazy, don't-care feeling, no ambition or energy, troubled with undigested food, you should take Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are a purely vegetable compound mixed with olive oil. You will know them by their olive color. They do the work without griping, cramps or pain.

Take one or two at bedtime for quick relief, so you can eat what you like. At 10c and 25c per box. The Olive Tablet Company, Columbus, Ohio. All Druggists.

Blood Tonic Has Important Meaning

Puts the Right Sort of Vi Where Most Needed.

To tone the blood means to enable to throw off accumulated impuritie increase the red corpuscles and to put blood-making organs into such active co dition as to produce that conscious sens tion of what we feel as health.

This is the logical effect of using th famous blood purifier, S. S. S.

Half the people you meet complain weary muscles, stagnant brain, jangle nerves, and a wonderful desire to l down and just quit. Most of these peop have been using nervines that spasmod ally flare up the nerves only to die do again, as die they must. Avoid ner stimulants. Bear in mind that this wor out feeling is due to poor blood, to ba teria in the water you drink; to th multiplying of destructive germs in th blood faster than they can be overcom by the white corpuscles; and to what known as auto-toxemia, that conditi where the venous or impure blood a cumulates faster than it can be replac by the red arterial blood.

S. S. S. has long been famous as blood purifier, and its action by elimina tion of the irritating poisons that infe the blood, is one of the very importa things to know.

You can get S. S. S. at any drug stor but take no other so-called blood purifie

S. S. S. is purely a vegetable produ and you will make a great mistake t have some enthusiast palm off a mercury arsenic or iodide of potash preparatio that may do you irreparable harm.

S. S. S. is prepared by The Swift Spe cific Co., 533 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, G and if you have any deep-seated or o stinate blood trouble, write to their Me ical Dept. for free advice. It will worth your while to do so.—ADV.

TWO-BY-FOUR SOCIETY TO OPEN ART EXHIBIT

Collection of Paintings and Statuary to Be on Display in City Museum Today.

The City Art Museum today is to open another special exhibition of St. Louis art. The new collection occupies gallery 18, in the west wing, and comprises 39 paintings and sculptures. It is the Eighth Annual Exhibition of the Two-by-Four Society, a professional organization of St. Louis artists.

A portrait of Gov. Major occupies the center of the east wall, and it the work of Carl Gustave Waldeck. The Governor is standing, apparently at his executive desk, with one hand upon some books, facing the observer. Victor S. Holm and Robert P. Bringhurst exhibit sculpture designed for the St. Louis Pageant, together with other statuary. Bringhurst's Pageant figure is to represent the Spirit of Winter, and is called "Noohai." Holm's Pageant figure represents the "God of Fire." Oscar E. Berninghaus shows decorative pictures of the American Indian.

Other pictures are by Dawson Watson, Charles Percy Davis, Gustave Goetsch, William Matthews, Arthur Mitchell, Gustave von Schlegell, Frederick Oakes Sylvester, Jessie Watson and Humphry Woolrych.

Grand Chancellor Joseph J. Cites of Rolla, Mo., will review the lives of members who died during the year. Other speakers will be S. C. Rogers and C. R. Lupton.

TAKE SALTS IF YOUR BACK HURTS SAYS DRUGS ONLY EXCITE THE KIDNEYS

Salts is absolutely harmless to flush your Kidneys and neutralize uric acid, thus ending all Bladder trouble.

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore, don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite and irritate the kidneys. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild, harmless salts which removes the body's waste and stimulates them to their normal activity. The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from it 500 grains of acid and waste, so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active. Drink lots of water—you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralize the acids so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder trouble.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this, also keep up the water drinking, and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache.—ADV.

COMMISSION OF 15 NAMED TO REVISE MISSOURI CODE

Governor Announces Names of Lawyers and Jurists Who Will Suggest Changes.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, May 23.—Gov. Major today announced the names of 15 lawyers and jurists of the State who are to make up the commission to consider the revision and simplification of code procedure in Missouri.

The men chosen are: Judge Elijah Robinson, Edward J. White, president of the State Bar Association, and John I. Williamson, president of the Kansas City Bar Association, all of Kansas City; Judge W. M. Williams, Boonville; Judge David H. Harris, Fulton; Judge Alonzo D. Burns, Platte City; Judge William T. Ragland, Paris; Frank Harris, Columbia; J. W. Halliburton, Carthage; Judge Albert D. Nortoni, Judge of St. Louis Court of Appeals; F. N. Judson, Judge Hugo Muench, Charles P. Williams, president of the St. Louis Bar Association; J. Lionberger Davis, chairman special commission of the Business Men's League, and Breckenridge Long, secretary of the St. Louis Bar Association, all of St. Louis.

The Governor said he would not attempt to circumscribe the work of the commission by presenting his personal views.

"There is no appropriation to cover the expenses of the commission," he continued, "but I shall recommend that an appropriation be made to meet them when the Legislature convenes. After the general election this fall I shall add to the commission three members from the House and three from the Senate, so that the views of the commission may be fully presented to both branches of the Legislature."

GRAVES TO BE DECORATED

G. A. R. and Sons of Veterans to Honor Dead Members.

Gen. C. D. Wolff Camp No. 5, Sons of Veterans, will assist Gen. Lyon Post No. 2, G. A. R., in the decoration of graves of Civil War veterans and late members of their organizations today at Bethany, St. Peter's Zion and Salem Cemeteries.

Members of the camp will assemble at Cinderella Hall, Iowa and Cherokee streets, at 8 a. m., when auto trucks will convey them to the Wellston loop, where they will meet the members of the post at 9 a. m. Special services will be conducted and the usual salute of three volleys will be fired and taps sounded. Capt. G. Percy Lentz will command the firing squad.

PEARY GETS GOLD MEDAL

American Explorer Honored by French Society.

WASHINGTON, May 23.—Rear-Admiral Robert E. Peary, U. S. N. retired, the Arctic explorer, has just received the gold medal conferred upon him by the French Geographical Society on April 24 last.

Admiral Peary was not present in Paris to receive the medal and it was turned over by Prince Roland Bonaparte, president of the society, to the American Ambassador, Myron T. Herrick, by whom it was transmitted through the American State Department to him.

MAJOR NAMES BUTLER

Colonel Made Regent for Negro School.

JEFFERSON CITY, May 23.—Gov. Major today appointed Col. C. C. Butler of St. Louis a member of the Board of Regents of Lincoln Institution, a school for negroes, to succeed John Sullivan of Sedalia, whose term has expired.

Col. Butler is a member of the Governor's personal military staff.

City Plant Voted Despite Fight By Utility Owners

against the bond issue, fearing greatly reduced returns from their holdings in case the city should operate its own plant and then later decide to operate the other utilities. It is practically certain, however, that in the case of the light and power corporations there will be little, if any, depreciation in stock values, and some experts believe to lose the city business would be a real boon, as the power corporation could then devote its energies to outside business, which pays much greater returns with about half the outlay in expenses.

Anti-Workers in Droves.

Hordes of employes of all these concerns were put to work in a house-to-house canvass, asking the people to vote against the bonds. It is recorded that, in several instances, four men called at the same house in one day, all employes of power corporations, and asked the support of the resident against the bonds.

The day before the election a statement was issued by the opposition declaring they had enough pledged votes to defeat the proposed municipal ownership by a large majority, but these claims were not sustained at the polls.

An analysis of the vote shows that of 446 precincts, only six were carried by the opposition and these were all in the "silk stocking" residential district. Socialists and union labor men voted almost solidly for the bonds. City Attorney Stephens says the new city lighting plant will be running within a year.

ALOE TO TALK TO CIVIC COUNCIL ON NEW CHARTER

Delegates From Improvement Association to Hear Freeholder Speak Monday.

The Central Civic Council, representing 17 improvement associations, will meet at the Central Public Library at 8 p. m., Monday, to discuss the proposed new city charter. Louis P. Aloe, a freeholder, will speak.

It is expected the delegates will report how their organizations stand on the new city charter. Civic Council officials predict the organization will go on record as favoring the new city charter. The election of new officers for the coming year will be held. At the last meeting delegates were nominated as follows:

President, S. G. Lewis, Marcus Avenue Association, and H. W. Barth, Tenth Ward Association, first vice-president, E. R. Schwartz, South Forest Park Association, and D. Eitzmann, Tenth Ward Association; second vice-president, G. J. Heleck, South Side Welfare Association, and Dr. A. E. Dill, Marcus Avenue Association; third vice-president, A. T. Johnson, Northwestern Protective Association; fourth vice-president, C. C. Crone, North St. Louis Citizens' Association; secretary, Roger N. Baldwin, Civic League; treasurer, S. L. St. Jean, Shaw-Dundee.

The present officers of the Central Civic Council are: President, S. G. Lewis; first vice-president, D. Eitzmann; second vice-president, George J. Heleck; third vice-president, A. T. Johnson Jr.; secretary, Roger N. Baldwin; treasurer, William H. Hilkerbaumer.

CANDIDATES FILE PETITIONS; BITTER FIGHTS EXPECTED

Democrats Hope to Elect Congressmen From Tenth and Twelfth Districts.

MANY OFFICES TO FILL

Merriwether Charges Committee Secretary With Usnig Power to Help Rival.

With nearly threescore offices from Constable to United States Senator to be filled at the election in November, numerous candidates are filing their declarations for party nominations with the political committees. The candidates will have until June 4 to file for the State primary elections to be held Aug. 4.

The leaders of the party organizations are expecting an unusually big crop of candidates. It is expected that there will be at least five Democratic candidates for each nomination, and almost as many Republicans.

The Democrats believe they have a chance to elect the Congressmen in the Tenth and Twelfth Districts, and this fact is bringing out many candidates and some bitter fights for the nomination. Lee Merriwether, who is a candidate in the Twelfth District, has accused P. J. O'Donnell, secretary of the Democratic City Committee and in charge of Democratic headquarters, with trying to use the power of the party organization to aid former State Senator John P. Collins, a rival candidate.

Gill Is a Candidate.

Collins was the first Democratic candidate in the Twelfth District to get into the race. He began his campaign by sending two letters to all the Democratic judges and clerks of election soliciting their support. M. J. Gill is also a candidate.

O'Donnell denied that he was showing favoritism to Collins. O'Donnell and Collins live in the same ward, and have been close political friends.

Fred L. English, an attorney, has filed for the Democratic nomination in the Tenth Ward. Congressman Bartholdt will not seek re-election. There is a bitter fight on between State Senator Charles O. A. Brunk and Jacob E. Meeker for the Republican nomination. George Brand, Clerk of the Probate Court, may also run.

It is expected that former Congressman P. J. Gill will try to defeat William L. Igoe for the Democratic nomination in the Eleventh District. William T. Findly, secretary of the Republican Sate Committee, has filed for the Republican nomination in that district.

William F Bentzen, a commission merchant, has entered the contest against Charles F. Joy and Frank B. Ruhr for the Republican nomination for Recorder of Deeds. Joy has held this office for many years, and Bentzen and Ruhr are eager to dislodge him.

Dr. Paul R. Fletcher, Progressive, has announced that he will file for the Bull Moose nomination in the Tenth District.

Anderson Wants Senatorship.

Al Guion, a deputy assessor under Frank Schramm, filed his declaration yesterday as a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Clerk of the Circuit Court for Criminal Causes. Guion has been actively identified with Democratic politics for many years.

Peter Anderson, Republican City Committeeman of the First Ward, filed for the State senatorial nomination in the Thirty-fourth District, and John E Clooney, Democratic City Committeeman of the Sixteenth Ward, filed for Constable in the Third Justice of the Peace District.

Anderson served one term in the State Senate and in 1909 was elected Inspector of Weights and Measures. Clooney now holds the constableship for which he is seeking renomination.

Judge Calvin N. Miller of the Criminal Court Correction, Division No. 1, filed for renomination at the Republican primary. Other declarations were filed by J. J. Spaulding, Democrat, for Justice of the Peace, Fifth District; Robert J. Kirkwood, Democrat, Justice of the Peace, Ninth District; John A. Hyde, Republican, Justice of the Peace, Ninth District; Patrick Stanton, Democrat, Constable, Eighth District, and Henry C. Meister, Republican, Constable, Fourtn District.

MRS. WILSON'S TITLE TO CALIFORNIA LAND UPHELD

Others Claimed 60 Acres President's Wife Bought From Her Sister.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., May 23.—Concurrence in the recent decision by the Register of the local land office, giving Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, wife of the President, title to 60 acres of land in the Coachella valley, was given yesterday by O. R. W. Robinson, receiver of the local land office. This concurrence was necessary to establish the title.

Mrs. Wilson came into possession of the land through the original filing of John T. King, who sold his rights to Mrs. Margaret Axson Elliott, Mrs. Wilson's sister. She in turn sold them to Mrs. Wilson.

When Mrs. Wilson desired possession of it she found that others claimed the land. In the completed ruling the land office held the confusion in the title was due to misunderstanding of the law.

Every Man Read This

This treatment is said to have acquired a wonderful reputation throughout the East, owing to its peculiar propensity to fortify the nerve force and generate health and a consequent personal magnetism, so essential to the happiness of every normal human being. It is claimed to be a blessing to those who are physically impaired, gloomy, despondent, nervous or who have trembling of the limbs, dizziness, heart palpitation, cold hands and feet, insomnia, fear without cause, timidity in venturing and general inability to act rationally as others do. Also of vast benefit to writers, professional men, office workers and the victims of society's late hours and over-indulgence in wines, liquors, etc.

By obtaining the treatment at some well-stocked pharmacy, no one need know of another's trouble while the treatment has been widely prescribed and dispensed heretofore by physicians and pharmacists, the grain tablets are so prepared with full directions for self administration that it is wholly unnecessary to pay a physician for prescribing them. Just ask for three-grain Cadomene tablets, begin their use and soon all the joy of a healthy body, sound nerves and strength will be felt.—ADVERTISEMENT.

ST. LOUIS HEROES OF 1812 HONORED BY DESCENDANTS

Graves of Beaumond, Clarke, Cruttendon, Kearney and Bates in Bellefontaine Cemetery Marked.

Missouri members of the National Society of the Daughters of 1812 conducted special services in Bellefontaine Cemetery at 3 p. m. yesterday in honor of five early settlers of St. Louis who fought in the War of 1812.

Those honored were Dr. William Beaumont, surgeon; Col. William Clarke, one of the leaders of the Lewis and Clarke expedition; Gen. Joel Cruttendon, Gen. Kearney, and Judge Edward Bates, who was a member of Lincoln's Cabinet.

Boys and girls, in each case the youngest descendants of those honored, placed markers on their graves, while two buglers and a drummer of the National Guard of Missouri sounded "taps."

Dr. Beaumont's grave was marked by Miss Beaumont Irwin, a granddaughter. Two children of Mrs. Alonzo Church, a great granddaughter, marked Col. Clarke's grave. Other descendants of Col. Clarke living in St. Louis are John O'Fallon Clarke Sr., John O'Fallon Clarke Jr., Mrs. Adreon and Mrs. Volney Turner.

Gen. Cruttenden's grave was marked by Miss Adair Skipwith, a great-grandaughter. Other St. Louis descendants of Gen. Cruttenden are Mrs. Edwin T. Howard, Mrs. Peyton, H. Skipwith and Miss Emma Powell, president of the Missouri Society, Daughters of 1812.

Mary and Louise Coombe, great-granddaughters of Gen. Kearney, marked his grave. Gen. Kearney's St. Louis descendants are Mrs. W. B. Coombe, Mrs. Western Bascombe and Mrs. Anna Owens Cooke.

Judge Bates' grave was marked by Bates Eno Crompton, his great-grandson. Other descendants of Judge Bates are Mrs. J. Eno of Kirkwood, a daughter, and Mrs. George Crumpton, a granddaughter.

The Rev. J. Boyd Coxe read the ritual of the Daughters of 1812 at each grave.

The Grand-Leader Choral Club.

The Grand-Leader Choral Club will be the star attraction at the New Grand Central Theater, Grand and Lucas avenues, for the week beginning tomorrow. This organization is composed entirely of employes of the Stix, Baer & Fuller Dry Goods Co., under the leadership of professor and composer, Mr. Arthur Lieber. About 75 voices are in the chorus, and the repertoire of songs includes the works of the best composers.

The club has been in existence about four years and during that time has given a number of successful concerts. An engagement was filled at the New Grand Central Theater last season witn much success.

Senate Asked to Recognize Dr. Cook.

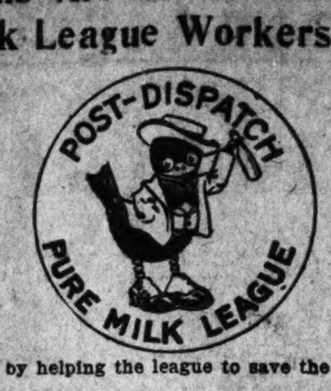
Membership Buttons Are to Be Given Pure Milk League Workers



HANDSOME buttons, testifying to their wearer's membership in the Post-Dispatch Pure Milk League, now are ready for distribution to all who become league members during the summer of 1914.

They bear the inscription "Post-Dispatch Pure Milk League" and are ornamented with an attractive drawing of the Post-Dispatch Weather Bird in colors and with a bottle of pure milk in its "hand."

Membership in the league is won by helping the league to save the babies.

A membership card also will be sent to all who thus qualify for league membership.

WIDER SCOPE OF PURE MILK FUND'S WORK THIS SEASON

Pure Milk Commission and King's Daughters Plan Greater Lifesaving Service.

MONEY URGENTLY NEEDED

Join the Pure Milk League Now and Help the Good Cause—Save the Babies!

With the arrival of June, the first of the four hot summer months, now but one week distant, it is vitally necessary that the Post-Dispatch Pure Milk and Free Ice Fund, the St. Louis Pure Milk Commission and the Free Ice and Sick Diet Circle of the King's Daughters, working in a splendid triple alliance to save the tenement babies from sickness and death due to impure milk, shall be enabled to arrange for the most vigorous campaign yet prosecuted to rescue the little ones of the poor.

The Post-Dispatch Pure Milk and Free Ice Fund, established and maintained through the generous contributions of the Post-Dispatch's readers, led by the children of St. Louis, enlisted in the Post-Dispatch Pure Milk League, again will strive to raise the money necessary to pay in full all the milk bills of the St. Louis Pure Milk Commission for June, July, August and September, and, as it always has done, to furnish the entire financial support necessary to the good work of the King's Daughters in distributing free ice daily to tenement mothers and the sick poor.

Both the St. Louis Pure Milk Commission and the King's Daughters are pluckily planning a wider scope for their life-saving service this summer than ever before in their helpful history. They count confidently upon the Post-Dispatch Pure Milk and Free Ice Fund for the money necessary to defray the cost of this noble service.

The Pure Milk Commission maintains strict supervision over the distribution as well as the production of "certified" milk in St. Louis. It maintains a well-equipped laboratory and substations for the distribution of bottled milk scientifically modified for the use of babies. It maintains infant feeding and instruction clinics for the feeding and hygienic care of infants and for encouraging maternal feeding.

Its certification committee, composed of leading St. Louis physicians, is an authoritative and scientifically competent body. The physicians supervising its clinics and prescribing the special modification of milk needed by each individual baby, devote the closest and most earnest attention to their task.

In the case of mothers able to pay for the milk prescribed for their babies a nominal price is charged, but no applicant is refused milk. It is freely and gladly given to all needy mothers for the saving of their babies' lives. Not one tenement mother was turned away empty-handed from any pure milk station last summer.

The Pure Milk Commission will have the following pure milk stations in operation this summer:

Pure Milk Stations.

United Jewish Charities, Ninth and Carr; Neighborhood Association, 817 North Nineteenth; Kingdom House Mission, 1033 South Eighth; Boyle Memorial Center, 816 North Eleventh; City Dispensary Branch No. 1, 3741 North Broadway; Bethlehem Congressional Church, Thirteenth and Allen; Markham Memorial Church, Menard and Julia; St. Louis Children's Hospital, 400 South Jefferson; Holy Cross House, 1601 North Eleventh; Ebn Ezra Lodge, Jefferson and Carr; Laboratory, 1726 North Thirteenth; Victor Street Missions, Third and Victor; Guardian Angel Settlement, Marion and Menard; Open Door Settlement, 1303 Hebert; Curby Memorial Church, Texas and Utah; Epworth Settlement, 3019 Bell; the Italian Station, 1011 Wash.

In addition to this widespread service for the distribution of pure milk, the Commission will maintain infant feeding and instruction clinics at the following points:

Infant Feeding and Instruction Clinics.

Laboratory of St. Louis Pure Milk Commission, 1726 North Thirteenth street.

Holy Cross House, 2601 North Eleventh street.

Jewish Alliance, Ninth and Carr streets.

Neighborhood Association, 817 North Nineteenth street.

Boyle Memorial Centre, 816 North Eleventh street.

Guardian Angel Settlement, 1029 Marion street.

Kingdom House Mission, 1033 South Eighth street.

St. Louis Children's Hospital, 400 South Jefferson avenue.

The active direction of the Pure Milk Commission's work is in the capable hands of Herbert E. Mortland, secretary, with headquarters at the Laboratory, 1726 North Thirteenth street.

The work of the Free Ice and Sick Diet Circle of the King's Daughters is under the direction of Miss Glassbrook, leader, 5978 Von Versen avenue; Mrs. Ida L. McIntyre, treasurer, 5244 Washington avenue; Miss Clara McCluney, secretary, and Mrs. L. M. Melick, visitor, the latter giving her personal and constant attention to the task of visiting the tenement mothers and sick poor and seeing that the free daily distribution of ice is properly performed.

It is for the maintenance of all this splendid life-saving service among the tenement babies and the sick poor during the hot summer months that the Post-Dispatch Pure Milk and Free Ice Fund now appeal to the public for contributions. It is hoped that a fund of at least $5000 will be raised this season. Every dollar of it will be needed.

All contributions to the fund will be acknowledged through the columns of the Post-Dispatch. Every dollar contributed will go to the support of the work. The name of every contributor to the fund will be enrolled on the membership list of the Post-Dispatch Pure Milk League, and league buttons and membership cards will be given to all contributors.

Join the Pure Milk League now and help the good cause which it represents.

Save the babies!

Weak Lungs Often Lead to Serious Illness

If you have weak lungs and your system is run down, you are more susceptible to serious lung trouble. By the use of Eckman's Alterative many have been restored to health. Read of this case:

231 S. Atlantic Av., Haddonfield, N. J. "Gentlemen—In the fall of 1905 I contracted a very severe cold, which settled on my lungs. At last I began to raise sputum, and my physician then told me I must go to California immediately. At this time I was advised to take Eckman's Alterative. I stayed at home and commenced taking it the last week of October. I began to improve, and the first week in January, 1906, I resumed my regular occupation, having gained 25 pounds, fully restored to health. It is now seven years since my recovery has been effected, and I cannot praise Eckman's Alterative too highly." (Abbreviated)

(Signed) W. M. TATEM.

Eckman's Alterative is most efficacious in bronchial catarrh and severe throat and lung affections and upbuilding the system. Contains no harmful or habit-forming drugs. Accept no substitutes. Sold by Raboteau Drug Co., Wolff-Wilson Drug Co., Judge & Dolph Drug Co. and leading druggists. Write Eckman Laboratory, Philadelphia, Pa., for booklet of recoveries.

Diabetes Loses Its Terrors

Specialist Believes Cure Has Been Found for This Disease.

Diabetes no longer need be a terror to those who have become victims to this dread disease.

As the result of extensive experiments, a specialist announces that a simple plant, growing wild in Mexico, is a specific in the treatment of diabetes, quickly reducing the specific gravity and sugar, restoring vigor and building up the system.

This harmless vegetable remedy should relieve the patient of his worst symptoms, in the most aggravated cases, within a week, and to prove it we will mail a 50c package for 10c to help pay distribution cost, with free booklet of special value to the diabetic, containing latest diet lists and exclusive table of food values, giving percentage of starch and sugar (carbohydrates) in 250 different foods. Diabetol herb is sold under guarantee of satisfaction or money refunded.

The "Force" of Herpicide.

Even the first application of Newbro's Herpicide (THE ORIGINAL GERM-REMEDY FOR DANDRUFF) shows the hair-saving satisfying "force" that is in it. This "force" is the sum of two characteristics that are united in Newbro's Herpicide. It has the ABILITY to eradicate dandruff contagion and the QUALITY that delights those who wish a dainty hair dressing.

It holds the secret of popularity and pleases every one who is discriminating enough to have a preference. It is not sticky. It will not darken the hair. The remedial effect of Herpicide is sometimes little short of marvelous, for after the dandruff contagion is eradicated, and kept out of the scalp, the hair is bound to resume its natural beauty. It stops itching of the scalp almost instantly.

More men and women have gotten positive results from the use of NEWBRO'S HERPICIDE than from all other hair remedies combined.

SATISFACTION GUARANTEED.

Send 10 cents in stamps to THE HERPICIDE COMPANY, Dept. 110B, Detroit, Michigan, for sample. Two Sizes—50 cents and $1.00. At all Toilet Goods Counters. When you call for Herpicide, do NOT accept a substitute. Applications at prominent Barber Shops.

SUN RAYS FOUND TO HAVE CAUSED FIRES IN KANSAS

State Fire Marshal Is Trying to Educate the People Against the Sun Blazes.

MATCHES IN WINDOW SET

Rays on Unpainted Tin, Edge of Fish Bowl and Bubble in Window Pane Cause Fires.

TOPEKA, Kan., May 23.—Harrison Parkman, State Fire Marshal, is trying to educate the people against fires that are caused by sun rays.

Out in Rawlins County last month a woman put some matches on the window sill in the kitchen. It was a bright, sunshiny day, and a few minutes afterward the woman returned to the kitchen to find the whole side of the room on fire. The sun rays shining through the window pane had set these matches on fire and they had set the building.

At Holton a building was found to be on fire. It was almost new, and no cause for the fire in a corner of the roof could be found until someone discovered that a piece of tin had not been painted and the sun rays on it had set the roof afire.

Sun on Bowl Causes Fire.

A bubble in a window pane of a home in McPherson County concentrated the sun rays on a spot on a lace curtain and set it on fire.

The sun shining upon the heavy rolled edge of a glass fish bowl in a home in Mitchell County set a table runner on fire, and the home burned.

It is not unusual to hear of grass being set afire by the sun shining upon bright metals. The peculiar thing about the fires caused by the sun rays is that they happen at any time of the year. It would ordinarily be supposed that the sun rays would not be concentrated into enough heat upon a cold winter day, but some of the fires caused by sun rays came in January and February and one in December.

Fires From Electricity.

Another seemingly impossible fire cause is static electricity generated by wind whipping blades of grass against wire fences. Special investigations by electrical experts in Western Kansas last year and again this spring are said to have demonstrated that the high winds constantly blowing tall grass against wire fences produced sufficient electricity to cause a spark an inch long and of sufficient brilliancy to set the grass on fire. About 30 prairie fires which resulted in loss of hay and several homes and barns are said to have been the direct result of this sort of flame generator.

HENRY WATTERSON'S SON PLEADS THAT HE IS SANE

Matteawan Inmate Appears in Court and Says He Is Capable of Defending Self.

POUGKEEPSIE, N. Y., May 22.—Insisting that he was mentally capable of defending himself against a charge of assault pending against him in Kingston, Ewing Watterson, son of Col. Henry Watterson, the Louisville editor, appeared before County Judge Arnold here and asked for his release from Matteawan. Watterson was committed in 1911, after having been arrested for shooting a man in Kingston.

Asked whether his family would aid him, Watterson said that he would not ask for aid. The case was adjourned until June 7. In the meantime Judge Arnold will communicate with the District Attorney of Ulster County to learn what steps that county wishes to take in the matter.

Dr. Kieb, superintendent of the asylum, said Watterson had hallucinations about hearing voices.

SAILORS ADRIFT FOUR DAYS

Five Shipwrecked Seamen Rescued From Open Boat.

MONTREAL, May 23.—Five shipwrecked seamen, victims of the ice conditions existing in the vicinity of New Foundland since early spring, arrived here today on the Allan Liner Corinthian.

Bound from Brest with a cargo of provisions their three-masted brig, Marie Emilie, was ground to pieces by the ice and the crew took to the boats. After drifting four days they were picked up.

Negroes to Play "Damon and Pythias."

Damon and Pythias, a Grecian drama, will be played by the Dumas Dramatic Club, a negro organization, at the La Salle Theater, Tenth and Pine streets, Monday night. The play, a history of the Knights of Pythias, will be presented under the direction of W. E. Officer Jr., with Miss A. Leah Harris in the leading part of Calanthe. The Dumas Club was organized in 1901 and has presented plays from time to time for charitable purposes.

Democratic Candidates Indorsed.

At a meeting of the Eighth Ward Democratic Precinct Organization Friday night, the following candidates were indorsed: Fred L. English for Congress, Charles F. Jerebeck for Justice of the Peace in the Second District and J. J. Kennedy for the City Central Committee. Walter Graesear, Theodore Schaumann and Fred L. English addressed the meeting.

Why French Women Have Few Wrinkles

American women marvel at the velvety skins of their Parisian sisters and rather chide the fate which treats the European so graciously when, in reality, it is neither chance nor nature which makes the difference. It is only the difference of care and the use of proper treatment which marks the beautiful skin from the wrinkled, unpleasant one. The heavy massage is one of the American institutions which makes the flesh and skin flabby, while the use of a simple vegetable jelly cream takes little time, and both cures wrinkles and protects against them. It will not grow hair nor stain bed linen, and acts immediately. Just dissolve one ounce of almozoin (every good druggist carries this) in ½ pint of water, and before retiring apply the paste thus made to the wrinkled surface. At the very first application you will feel a slight drawing and note the fact that the blood is more active in the region which is covered. This means stimulation of the face muscles and a greater supply of flesh-building material brought to the surface at the place it is most needed which will demonstrate its power to smooth the skin and stimulate it so that the surface becomes perfectly healthy.—ADV.

BRANDES VISITS CHICAGO

Danish Author and Critic Is Guest at Cliff Dwellers' Fete.

CHICAGO, May 23.—George Brandes, Danish author and critic, was welcomed to Chicago today by a committee of Chicagoans and citizens of other cities and was escorted to the Fine Art Building, where he was the guest at a reception given by the Cliff Dwellers' Society.

On the welcoming committee were C. H. W. Hasselriss, Henry Hert of Chicago and M. C. Myrup and H. C. Olsen of Racine, and Dr. P. Lauritzen of Minneapolis, all prominent in Danish circles. Before his departure for Milwaukee and Minneapolis next week the author will deliver several lectures.

Stories From Washington

When Lea Nearly Got Lee's Appointment and Chickens

WASHINGTON, May 23.

SENATOR BLAIR LEE of Maryland, and Senator Luke Lea of Tennessee don't look anything like each other, but they frequently are confused by persons who know them merely by name.

The Maryland Lee has a farm just over the Maryland line from the District of Columbia, in Montgomery County. One day a tall, gaunt farmer stepped into the office of Senator Lea of Tennessee and told the secretary, as he deposited some fresh eggs and a couple of young chickens on the desk, that he just loved Senator Lee so much he had to bring them.

When Lea returned, his secretary told him that Gabe Peter of Montgomery County, had brought them because he loved him so much that he just couldn't help it. Now there is a Montgomery County in Tennessee, but Lea did not know any Gabe Peter, or anyone else in that county who loved him enough to bring chickens all the way to Washington.

Shortly afterward he called up the White House and asked for an appointment with the President for the following day. The voice at the other end of the phone told him he already had one.

"That's very considerate of someone are you sure it's for me?" Lee asked. "Yes," was the reply, "It's down for Senator Lee of Maryland."

"Well," said Lea, "please arrange an appointment for Senator Lea of Tennessee." Then turning to his secretary he said, "Take those chickens over to the Senator Lee of Maryland."

Fletcher an Authority on Many Branches of Navy Work

REAR ADMIRAL FRANK FRIDAY FLETCHER, who commanded the fleet in the occupation of Vera Cruz, is said to be an authority on more different branches of naval affairs than any other man in the navy. He knows gunpowder and target practice, and most of the three-inch guns in use by the Government conform to inventions by him.

The modern way of handling a fleet is his idea. Formerly charts were used to keep the vessels of a fleet the proper distance apart. Fletcher simplified this by having lights placed on the vessels, to be used like sights on a gun. The pilot sights along the signal lights on the vessel ahead of him, and knows just where he belongs without the use of chart. Fletcher has very little to say, but he is probably the most strict disciplinarian in the navy.

He is agreeable enough when one knows him, but a person who knows him only slightly can hardly imagine fellow officers addressing him affectionately by his first name.

Green's Specialty Is Meeting With His Former Acquaintances

FRANK L. GREENE, a Vermont Representative, was a young captain in the Spanish-American War. For many days he lay in the typhoid fever ward in the hospital at Chickamauga. On a cot beside him was a young soldier from Tennessee, Sam R. Sells. They became good friends, and when they parted, each expressed the hope that they would meet again.

Their next meeting was when both were assigned to the same committee in the House of Representatives, and one of their first duties was to pass upon a pension application for a soldier who had been in the hospital at the same time they were. They had seen each other in Congress several times before, but neither had recognized the other. The soldier got his pension.

Greene tells of another experience he had in meeting an old acquaintance unexpectedly. When a young man he made a tour of Europe, working his way from place to place, and seeing the country. He arrived in Rome just in time for the big jubilee, held for the late Pope Pius XIII, on the fiftieth anniversary of his pontificate. He obtained a ticket to the jubilee with much difficulty, and while pushing his way through the crowd at the door, his ticket became torn. The soldier on duty at the door refused to accept it, but after much pleading and argument, Greene managed to get past.

A short time ago he was talking with an Italian fruit vender in his home town, and they mentioned several places each had visited in Europe. Greene mentioned attending the jubilee. The Italian remarked that as a soldier he had been assigned to one door as ticket taker. He said one American had a ticket that was worthless, but he coaxed so hard that he let him in.

Coloradoan Not Authority on Rain; Only There 12 Years

KENT COOPER of the Associated Press found himself waiting for a train in Fowler, Colo., one hot summer day. It was a lonely wait and he attempted to start a conversation with a citizen, who was whittling a stick as he sat on a trunk at the station.

There was a small cloud in the sky and Cooper asked the native if he thought it was going to rain.

The man gave him a disgusted look, but failed to answer.

Cooper thought he had been misunderstood and tried again. "I was just wondering if it is going to rain," said Cooper.

"Only blamed fools wonders about that out here," said the whittling native, without looking up.

"Why, don't it ever rain here?" asked Cooper.

"I don't know," said the citizen. "I've only been here 12 years."

Ashberry Would Rather Place Pensions Than Fight Mexicans

REPRESENTATIVE ASHBERRY of Ohio calls himself one of the best pension specialists in Congress. When the Mexican trouble broke, a friend said to him: "Well, I suppose you will organize an Irish regiment and go to Mexico."

"Oh, no," said Timothy, "but I shall stay here and make a brave fight to get a pension for every man that does go."

MANY BIG DEALS INDICATE AN ACTIVE SEASON IN REALTY

Negotiations for Holdings Downtown and in West End Involve $1,000,000 and Are Nearing Completion; Other Big Transactions Are Being Considered.

BUILDINGS PLANNED IN THE BUSINESS SECTION

Site at Twelfth and Locust Considered for New M. A. A. Structure; Third National Bank Purchases the Clark Estate Plot.

Realty and building in commercial St. Louis, notwithstanding the attractions of the outskirts, displays extraordinary vigor, the conditions, according to agents, giving assurance of activity in this section throughout the summer.

Negotiations embracing holdings downtown and in the West End, whose aggregate value is estimated at $1,000,000, are in process of completion, and other transactions are pending.

Pine street holdings, including a valuable corner east of Twelfth street have been exchanged for Olive street interests, and Chestnut street ground east of Eighteenth street for one of the largest apartment buildings in Cabanne. Announcement of these deals only awaits the return of deeds which have been sent off for execution, the largest owners being residents of California.

Both the Pine and Chestnut street holdings are falling into hands which will doubtlessly improve them on a substantial scale, according to agents. Cornet & Zeibig and the Mississippi Valley Trust Co., whose transactions have lent to the gaiety of the downtown movement, are handling the aforementioned operations, the announcement of which will doubtless have a wholesome effect on the local realty and building situation.

Other Negotiations Under Way.

There are under way other negotiations which involve pretentious building plans for the downtown area, two of which, the probabilities are, will soon be brought to successful issue.

The most important looks to the anchoring of the Missouri Athletic Association project at the norteast corner of Locust and Twelfth streets. The site, which is controlled under a 99-year lease by the Holbrook-Blackwelder crowd, was recently exploited for a skyscraper garage, which it was claimed would solve the parking problem downtown.

The Victoria Building, taken under foreclosure last week by its bondholders, for $312,000, has also been submitted as available for the new big M. A. A. This building, which occupies a quarter of a block at the southeast corner of Eighth and Locust streets, according to C. C. Nicholls Jr., could be altered to accommodate the association.

While these are only eventualities, reference to them is made with the idea of keeping the public abreast of the situation.

Bids have been forthcoming from both speculators and investors for the Victoria Building, which it is understood, can be obtained at an attractive price.

Incidentally instruments conveying to the Third National Bank the title of the Clark estate plot, 41x127 feet, at 215 North Broadway, which adjoins the financial establishment on the south, for $205,000, have been filed. The purchase, which was effected by the Mississippi Valley Trust Co. and McNair & Harris Realty Co. gives room for the extension of the Third National Bank, it having outgrown its ground floor quarters in its building at the southwest corner of Broadway and Olive street.

$1,055,000 Invested in Site.

The purchase gives the Third National Bank 115 feet on Broadway and 127 feet on Olive street. The site which has been assembled piecemeal, represents a total investment of $1,055,000.

The Third National Bank was erected facing the 127-foot Olive street depth. Thereby the value of the Olive street site, according to Thomas Wright, vice-president of the bank, has virtually been doubled, the Olive street frontage, according to his figurs being worth $15,000 a front foot, or approximately $1,905,000.

Developments at Broadway and Olive street have been of a character that promises to further enhance ground values in this section.

Realty circles are waiting with keen expectancy announcement of plans for the improvement of the southeast corner of Eigheenth and Olive streets. Negotiations have been pending for this corner for several months. The prospective purchasers or lessees, according to realty men, having large building plans. Members of the McDonald estate, clients of John J. Reardon, yesterday confirmed the story that the site is about to change control, but they declined to give details.

Eighteenth street corners between Market street and Washington avenue, are exciting noteworthy interest in both speculative and investment circles. A syndicate represented by the Hagerman-Fitzsimmons Realty Co. recently purchased the northeast corner of Eighteenth and Locust streets for $125,000, announcement being made at the time that it would be improved with a seven-story hotel building at a cost of $350,000.

Activity in Railroad District.

Substantial offers have been forthcoming for both the northeast and the southeast corner of Eighteenth and Washington avenue, owned respectively by the Lindsay and Leathe estates, both being desired for sites for commercial structures.

The movement in downtown St. Louis, according to the wiseacres of the row, is only a foretaste of what is ahead, realty circles being keyed up for activity in this section throughout the summer.

Purchases in the railroad district of North St. Louis, both north and south of the Merchants Bridge, according to underground sources will soon flood the St. Louis realty market with a stream of silver.

The Mullanphy Board, it is understood is entertaining an offer for 35x746 feet on the east side of Hall street, south of the Merchants Bridge. The land, forming a strip extending from Hall street to the Mississippi River, divides the former Boatmen's Bank Building, extending from Ferry to Dock street, which were recently purchased by the Burlington Railroad. The latter's purchase, obviously, would not be available without the Mullanphy strip.

According to John Mullanphy Cates the sale of this strip would be a violation of the will of the late Bryan Mullanphy, philanthropist.

The Mullanphy strip, it is said, is valued at $60,000, but the Burlington will probably pay twice that much before it gets it.

The Chicago & Northwestern, which is preparing to enter the city from the north, and the Burlington Railroad soon promise to be heavy purchasers in this section, while the agents of the Terminal Railway Association are sounding out dominant owners in the vicinity of the Merchants Bridge.

Many Apartments Planned.

Apartment building has been renewed with a flourish on the South Side as well as in the West End.

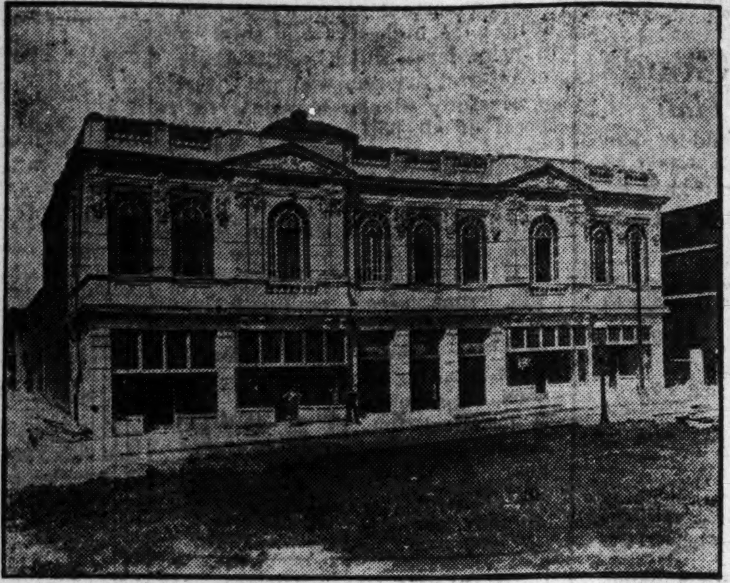
Frank L. Dittmeier, Chestnut street realty magnate and agent, has let contracts for 11 apartment buildings, which will be erected on the north side of Shaw avenue, between Lawrence and Thurman, at a cost of $115,000. The sites, having an aggregate frontage of 580 feet, were included in the 1850 feet recently sold by the Anderson-Stocke-Buermann company, in conjunction with Paul Jones & Co., representing the Shaw estate.

This will be Dittmeier's maiden venture on the South Side, he having heretofore confined his building operations, which have been extensive, to North St. Louis.

Architects will soon have plans completed for the six-apartment buildings to be erected on the north and south sides of Waterman avenue, east of Lake, by J. I. Epstein, as was announced last Sunday. The site, with a total frontage of 300 feet, 150 on the north and 150 on the south, was purchased last week by a syndicate of which Epstein is the head, and of which Judge Shields is a member, through Albert T. Terry & Co.

A three-story apartment building at 4418 Forest Park boulevard, comprising six apartments of five rooms each, was sold by the Anderson-Stocke Realty Co., along with the William J. Abbott Realty Co., on behalf of Melvin C. Fritsche to Jacob Grandhomme of Ironton, Mo.

New Lorelei Natatorium in West End Is Opened



The Lorelei Natatorium, housed in a two-story building of classic lines, which has just been completed on Olive street, just west of Taylor avenue, was formally opened last night.

The building, which was christened by Miss Lottie Mayer, is described as one of the finest and most complete of its kind in the country. Massive mirrors, art glass transoms, marble wainscoting and tile floors harmonize with the decorations of the walls and ceilings and the walls and the electric fixtures.

There are novel features in the equipment for the teaching of swimming, and precautions have been taken for safety, convenience and health of swimmers.

Women's reception and sun rooms and a beauty parlor are provided on the second floor and there is an emergency room with a nurse in attendance.

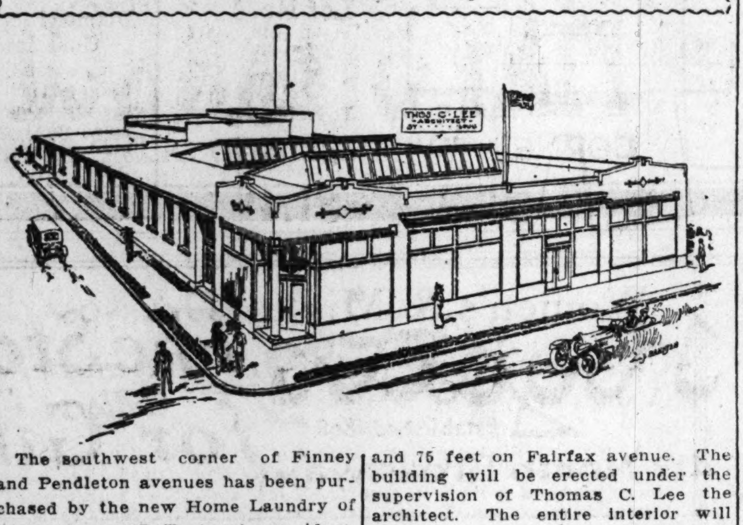
The pool is 60 feet wide and 160 feet long. The first floor and balcony are provided with more than 400 lockers, two showers, two spring boards and two slides.

Miss Mayer is the instructor for women and children. Gustav Hilmer will be director of the pool and instructor.

The Beethoven Conservatory of Music has leased the second floor of his building and will move from their present location at Olive street and Taylor avenue.

The building was financed by J. I. Epstein, 617 Chestnut street.

Site Purchased for Modern Plant for a Laundry Company



The southwest corner of Finney and Pendleton avenues has been purchased by the new Home Laundry of which George J. Texton is president, as a site for a new and modern plant. The site has a frontage on three streets, 75 feet on Finney avenue, 32 feet 6 inches on Pendleton avenue, and 75 feet on Fairfax avenue. The building will be erected under the supervision of Thomas C. Lee the architect. The entire interior will be faced in white enamel brick and will be complete in its appointment. William A. Giraldin, of Geraldin Bros., represented both the seller and purchaser.

TWO HANDSOME HOMES OF CITY SELL FOR $110,000

Sales of two costly homes, one in St. Louis County and the other in the city, swelled the volume of residential transactions for the week.

The house and grounds of Henry Garneau, comprising three acres in Hampton Park, were sold to Henry Graham for $30,000, while 3 Kingsbury place, the home of Mrs. Cora E. Nugent, widow of the late Charles E. Nugent, was acquired by James C. Jones for $80,000.

Albert T. Terry & Co. represented Graham, and the Mississippi Valley Trust Co., with John H. Farish & Co., acted for Jones.

The Hampton Park house, according to Terry, is one of the most complete of the Colonial character in St. Louis County, which is enhanced by its park environments.

Features of the building are larger sleeping porches, a hot water heating system and several bath rooms. Among the auxiliary buildings is a garage.

The former Nugent home, distinguishable by two marble lions, is one of the show places of St. Louis. The house comprises 24 rooms, with a proportionate number of baths. It occupies a lot 220x185 feet. It was built 10 years ago, at a cost of $110,000.

As part payment Mrs. Nugent took Jones' house at 5561 Chamberlain avenue, containing 14 rooms and occupying a lot 180x200 feet.

LOTS IN BRYAN PARK AND WEST WALNUT MANOR SELL FAST

North Side Tracts Are Popular With Homeseekers and Investors, as Terms Are Easy.

GLEN ECHO NO. 2 ACTIVE

Insurance and Sickness Clauses in Contract of Subdivision Helps Sale of Property.

Subdivision activity is at its zenith in North, South and West St. Louis, especially in the popular price sections. Bryan Park and West Walnut Manor are the storm centers of the North Side, the demand for lots in these subdivisions being rampant.

Bryan Park, a brand-new plat, thirty minutes from Eighth and Olive streets by the Bellfontaine line, was launched yesterday with the grand special sale. A list of the sales was not issued, but according to salesmen, a new high record was scored for Northwest St. Louis.

In Bryan Park, which is on King's highway northeast, a 200 foot automobile or vehicle driveway is being presented under the auspices of Barngrover & Specht, a bristling young concern, with offices in the Fullerton Building.

Sewers and granitoid walks, together with other improvements, have been installed there, the cost of which is included in the sale prices.

Tract Is Well Located.

Bryan Park is well located for a medium-priced subdivision, the lay of the ground lending itself to home improvements.

The sale will be continued today and until all the lots are disposed of.

A rush of buyers is also reported at West Walnut Manor, David P. Leahy's northwest subdivision, at the terminus of the Union avenue car line. Probably 50 lots were disposed of at this tract, which represents an addition of 1000 lots to the original West Walnut Manor.

The Manor sale is being made at remarkably low prices, and on terms which place the lots within the reach of all.

The up-building of this section is the marvel of the realty and building movement of the North Side.

Glen Echo Park No. 2 a Magnet.

Glen Echo Park No. 2 and Charlack are the maelstroms of the suburbs.

While Glen Echo No. 2 will not be formally presented until next Saturday, reservations therein are being made by the score. This subdivision, for which Paul Jones & Co., one of the stanchest in St. Lous realty circles, are agents, is being offered at prices and terms which will appeal especially to the strong investor or homeseeker, or rather the installment fellows.

The Glen Echo contract contains a forfeiture clause which waives the payment for a period of 10 weeks in case of sickness. There is also an insurance clause whereby in event of the death of the buyer the lot will be deeded to widow or heirs, of the deceased, without further payments, provided 10 per cent of the purchase price was paid down at the outset, or if his widow or heirs elect, the money already paid in will be refunded to them.

The Glen Echo proposition is unprecedented in challenging attention of the thrifty classes, which prefer owning their own homes, rather than paying rent, according to Mr. Jones.

How to Get to Glen Echo No. 2.

Glen Echo Park No. 2 is situated opposite Glen Echo Country Club, on the Hunt road, and is accessible by the St. Charles Electric car—St. Peters' Cemetery division—five minutes from Wellston, or by the Kirkwood division of the United Railways.

Paul Jones & Co. announce a grand free lunch for next Saturday, with an invitation to the public to picnic near to nature under the forest trees of this picturesque home site.

Granitoid walks, with other conveniences, have been installed at Glen Echo.

The site is one of the highest points in St. Louis County, overlooking the western part of the city.

G. Irving Lowe is sales manager at Glen Echo.

Charlack, the charming Creve Coeur line subdivision, is awakening interest that dims the fondest day dreams of Edward Goecke, its promotor and agent.

Goecke is standing behind his proposition with an offer to repurchase the lots at the end of five years, which he believes by that time will have doubled and trebled in value.

Charlack extends from the Creve Coeur Lake interurban line to the St. Charles line. The lots are being disposed of at comparatively nominal prices and on easy terms.

The locality, which is one of the most charming in St. Louis County, is being built up with attractive homes.

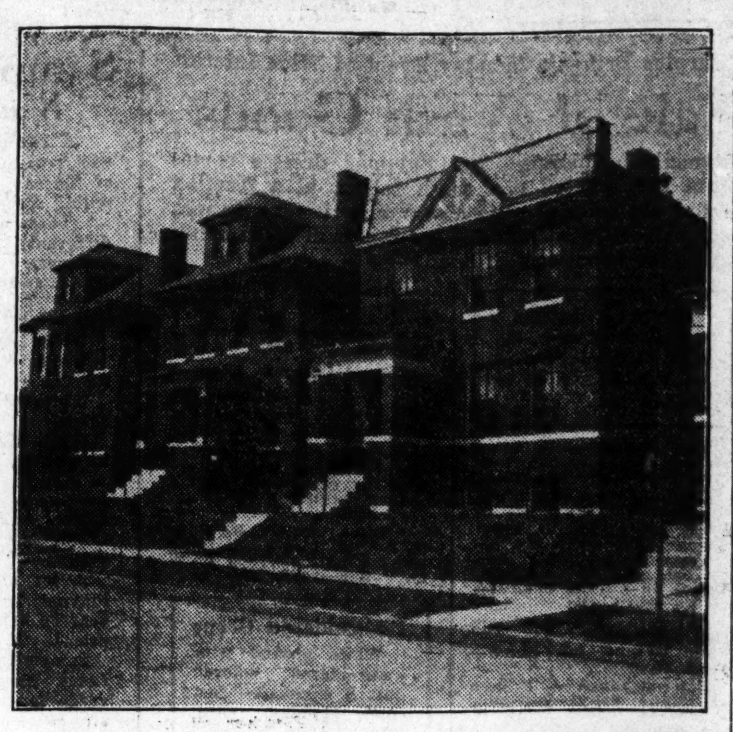
Southamption is the magnet on the South Side, not a day passing but what two or three lots are sold. The best value, according to agents, is given at Southamption. This tract, which has been beautifully graded and improved, is being offered at comparatively nominal prices with the terms which make the property available for all classes. A hundred or more houses have been erected in the addition in the last year, while plans are maturing for a hundred more, the majority of which will be started this summer.

A visit to this tract will be a revelation to the home seeker. The Mercantile Trust Co. is handling the property, with R. C. Buchanan at the helm.

Returns From California.

John E. Langan, vice-president and treasurer of the Taylor-Easton Trust Co., has returned from a business trip to California.

New Residences Being Erected in Dover Place



South Side Subdivision Is Set Aside Exclusively for Homes.

A number of seven-room and nine-room residences have been erected by the Dover Place Realty and Investment Co., in the new subdivision, Dover place. All the latest improvements are embodied in the construction. There are also in course of construction several bungalows.

Dover place is on the south side, 30 minutes from Market street. The Bellefontaine cars pass the subdivision, going in both directions. The Broadway line is only a few blocks away. The ground is beautifully situated and the place is set aside strictly for residence purposes.

LOTS ARE SELLING FAST IN WASHINGTON UNIVERSITY PL.

Indications Are That Former Tesson Park Tract Soon Will Be Sold Out. Distributions Will Be Made to Subscribers in Few Days.

Whirlwind sales characterized the week at Washington University place and at Maryland terrace, both within the Washington University district.

All except 48 of the 171 lots in Washington University place have been subscribed for, the indications being that the plat will be entirely out of the market within the next four or five days.

Keen to the speculation involved in the Washington Place proposition, which provides for disposition of lots at the uniform price of $24 a front foot, many are signing up for as many of the lots as may be sold to one person under the rules and regulations of the sale, or, rather, the contest.

The distribution of the lots, which will be according to numbers to be drawn from a hat and corresponding with those of the plat of the subdivision will be made when the subscriptions have been completed.

In this connection Archbishop John of the Third Baptist Church, who ofthe Third Baptist Church, who have purchased sites, will officiate, the Goodwin Realty and Investment Co., the agents, announced.

Sale to Meet Emergency.

This is an emergency sale to meet a deed of trust for $171,000, which wil be due June 1, the tract having been purchased only a fortnight ago as a speculation by a group of professionals at $22 a front foot.

The site offers a commanding view of both the suburbs and the city. Washington University place, formerly known as Tesson Park, lies along the east and the south lines of Pennsylvania and Forsyth boulevards.

Sales for the week in Maryland terrace aggregated $20,000, representing about eleven lots, which, according to Everett Davis, president of the Davis Realty and Development Co., sets a new record at this tract.

The lots are being disposed of by the square foot, the popularity of which can be gauged by the increased sale of the lots. When the tract was first placed on the market it was quoted on the front-foot basis.

This subdivision lies on the west line of Pennsylvania avenue, overlooking Washington University.

A new and successful method of selling real estate is being used in the sale of bungalow sites in West Portland place. J. Burt Gildersleeve, who has recently acquired from the original owners the remaining lots of that subdivision, depends almost exclusively upon what he calls "silent salesmanship."

That is, he has each bungalow site carefully marked with a red stake, on which is fastened a yellow card. On this card full particulars as to that piece of property is given. The amount of the deed of trust, if any, the front and depth of the lot, the width of the alley, the price per foot, as well as the gross price.

Furthermore, anyone interested in this home site to the point of purchase, may tear off this yellow card and present it at his office, 308 Title Guaranty Building. The important feature of this idea is, that by presenting this card in person, one is allowed a discount of approximately 2½ per cent on the total price of the home site.

The method appeals to a number of people who like to deal directly with the owner in making their purchase.

HOUSE NUMBERS IN HILLCREST TO BE SMALL

House numbers in Hillcrest, the new exclusive residence subdivision, will probably be short numbers, from 1 to 30, rather than four-figure numbers, such as the location of the subdivision would naturally indicate. Property holders in Hillcrest are now voting on this matter, and two-thirds of them are in favor of the short numbers, according to Gerald B. O'Reilly, president of the Hillcrest Improvement Association.

An effort will be made to persuade the city authorities to build a new park roadway, which will come out near the east terminus of Arundel avenue, Hillcrest. Hillcrest now contains 40 houses, and bids are being taken for street oiling.

THE
OF SAINT LOUIS

Welcome Visitors

To the Pageant & Masque, to St. Louis to This Store

This is a gala week, when St. Louis extends the cordial hand to its visitors, when it displays its civic pride in a great spectacle—an out-door drama—conceived, planned & produced now in commemoration of the PROGRESS & ACHIEVEMENT of St. Louis. We point with pardonable pride to the vast empire which has developed since the discovery & settling of St. Louis & to the great INDUSTRY and COMMERCE which has been built up, & now every true St. Louisian shows the true spirit of our commercialism with a CORDIAL WELCOME to the visitors within our gates.

With the growth & advancement of St. Louis this store has been closely identified for the greater part of a century.

With the city & the commonwealth it has grown in size & in service. Today this business is housed in the LARGEST BUILDING IN THE WORLD devoted to department stores & offices.

There are many wonderful features about it which visitors should see, many service features which are innovations in the realm of department stores.

The store has—

20 electric traction elevators.

3 double escalators, running to & from Basement to Third Floor.

2 Restaurants, one in Basement, other on Sixth Floor.

Recital Hall, capable of seating 200 people.

3 commodious Rest Rooms, two for women, one for men.

United States Postoffice & Parcel Post Substation.

Ticket Office, where tickets for current attractions may be secured.

Emergency Hospital for indisposed customers.

Silence Rooms in connection with Waiting Room.

Free Check Room for parcels or luggage.

Nursery & Playgrounds for children.

Two-story high Cold Storage Fur Vault.

It is absolutely fireproof.

The air on the first floor & basement is washed, purified & changed every seven minutes.

Your visit to St. Louis is hardly complete without a tour of its greatest department store, one of its greatest sights & an institution which ranks in the forefront of merchandising emporiums of the entire world.

Famous-Barr Co. furnished most of the costumes, wigs & hand properties used in the Pageant & Masque.

MANY BIG DEALS INDICATE AN ACTIVE SEASON IN REALTY

Negotiations for Holdings Downtown and in West End Involve $1,000,000 and Are Nearing Completion; Other Big Transactions Are Being Considered.

BUILDINGS PLANNED IN THE BUSINESS SECTION

Site at Twelfth and Locust Considered for New M. A. A. Structure; Third National Bank Purchases the Clark Estate Plot.

Realty and building in commercial St. Louis, notwithstanding the attractions of the outskirts, displays extraordinary vigor, the conditions, according to agents, giving assurance of activity in this section throughout the summer.

Negotiations embracing holdings downtown and in the West End, whose aggregate value is estimated at $1,000,000, are in process of completion, and other transactions are pending.

Pine street holdings, including a valuable corner east of Twelfth street have been exchanged for Olive street interests, and Chestnut street ground east of Eighteenth street for one of the largest apartment buildings in Cabanne. Announcement of these deals only awaits the return of deeds which have been sent off for execution, the largest owners being residents of California.

Both the Pine and Chestnut street holdings are falling into hands which will doubtlessly improve them on a substantial scale, according to agents.

Cornet & Zeibig and the Mississippi Valley Trust Co., whose transactions have lent to the gaiety of the downtown movement, are handling the aforementioned operations, the announcement of which will doubtless have a wholesome effect on the local realty and building situation.

Other Negotiations Under Way.

There are under way other negotiations which involve pretentious building plans for the downtown area, two of which, the probabilities are, will soon be brought to successful issue.

The most important looks to the anchoring of the Missouri Athletic Association project at the norteast corner of Locust and Twelfth streets. The site, which is controlled under a 99-year lease by the Holbrook-Blackwelder crowd, was recently exploited for a skyscraper garage, which it was claimed would solve the parking problem downtown.

The Victoria Building, taken under foreclosure last week by its bondholders, for $312,000, has also been submitted as available for the new big M. A. A. This building, which occupies a quarter of a block at the southeast corner of Eighth and Locust streets, according to C. C. Nicholls Jr., could be altered to accommodate the association.

While these are only eventualities, reference to them is made with the idea of keeping the public abreast of the situation.

Bids have been forthcoming from both speculators and investors for the Victoria Building, which it is understood, can be obtained at an attractive price.

Incidentally instruments conveying to the Third National Bank the title of the Clark estate plot, 41x127 feet, at 215 North Broadway, which adjoins the financial establishment on the south, for $205,000, have been filed. The purchase, which was effected by the Mississippi Valley Trust Co. and McNair & Harris Realty Co. gives room for the extension of the Third National Bank, it having outgrown its ground floor quarters in its building at the southwest corner of Broadway and Olive street.

$1,055,000 Invested in Site.

The purchase gives the Third National Bank 115 feet on Broadway and 127 feet on Olive street. The site which has been assembled piecemeal, represents a total investment of $1,055,000.

The Third National Bank was erected facing the 127-foot Olive street depth. Thereby the value of the Olive street site, according to Thomas Wright, vice-president of the bank, has virtually been doubled, the Olive street frontage, according to his figurs being worth $15,000 a front foot, or approximately $1,905,000.

Developments at Broadway and Olive street have been of a character that promises to further enhance ground values in this section.

Realty circles are waiting with keen expectancy announcement of plans for the improvement of the southeast corner of Eigheenth and Olive streets. Negotiations have been pending for this corner for several months. The prospective purchasers or lessees, according to realty men, having large building plans. Members of the McDonald estate, clients of John J. Reardon, yesterday confirmed the story that the site is about to change control, but they declined to give details.

Eighteenth street corners between Market street and Washington avenue, are exciting noteworthy interest in both speculative and investment circles. A syndicate represented by the Hagerman-Fitzsimmons Realty Co. recently purchased the northeast corner of Eighteenth and Locust streets for $125,000, announcement being made at the time that it would be improved with a seven-story hotel building at a cost of $350,000.

Activity in Railroad District.

Substantial offers have been forthcoming for both the northeast and the southeast corner of Eighteenth and Washington avenue, owned respectively by the Lindsay and Leathe estates, both being desired for sites for commercial structures.

The movement in downtown St. Louis, according to the wiseacres of the row, is only a foretaste of what is ahead, realty circles being keyed up for activity in this section throughout the summer.

Purchases in the railroad district of North St. Louis, both north and south of the Merchants Bridge, according to underground sources will soon flood the St. Louis realty market with a stream of silver.

The Mullanphy Board, it is understood is entertaining an offer for 35x746 feet on the east side of Hall street, south of the Merchants Bridge. The land, forming a strip extending from Hall street to the Mississippi River, divides the former Boatmen's Bank Building, extending from Ferry to Dock street, which were recently purchased by the Burlington Railroad. The latter's purchase, obviously, would not be available without the Mullanphy strip.

According to John Mullanphy Cates the sale of this strip would be a violation of the will of the late Bryan Mullanphy, philanthropist.

The Mullanphy strip, it is said, is valued at $60,000, but the Burlington will probably pay twice that much before it gets it.

The Chicago & Northwestern, which is preparing to enter the city from the north, and the Burlington Railroad soon promise to be heavy purchasers in this section, while the agents of the Terminal Railway Association are sounding out dominant owners in the vicinity of the Merchants Bridge.

Many Apartments Planned.

Apartment building has been renewed with a flourish on the South Side as well as in the West End.

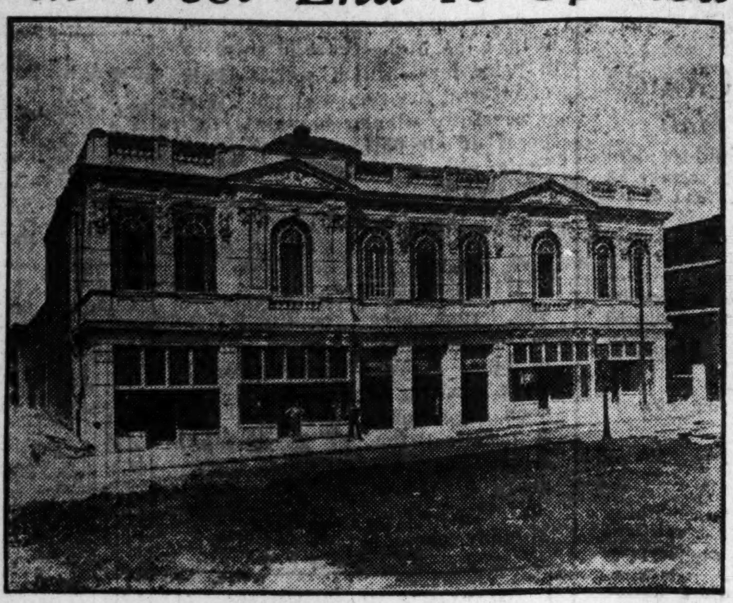
Frank L. Dittmeier, Chestnut street realty magnate and agent, has let contracts for 11 apartment buildings, which will be erected on the north side of Shaw avenue, between Lawrence and Thurman, at a cost of $115,000. The sites, having an aggregate frontage of 580 feet, were included in the 1850 feet recently sold by the Anderson-Stocke-Buermann company, in conjunction with Paul Jones & Co., representing the Shaw estate.

This will be Dittmeier's maiden venture on the South Side, he having heretofore confined his building operations, which have been extensive, to North St. Louis.

Architects will soon have plans completed for the six-apartment buildings to be erected on the north and south sides of Waterman avenue, east of Lake, by J. I. Epstein, as was announced last Sunday. The site, with a total frontage of 300 feet, 150 on the north and 150 on the south, was purchased last week by a syndicate of which Epstein is the head, and of which Judge Shields is a member, through Albert T. Terry & Co.

A three-story apartment building at 4418 Forest Park boulevard, comprising six apartments of five rooms each, was sold by the Anderson-Stocke Realty Co., along with the William J. Abbott Realty Co., on behalf of Melvin C. Fritsche to Jacob Grandhomme of Ironton, Mo.

New Lorelei Natatorium in West End Is Opened



The Lorelei Natatorium, housed in a two-story building of classic lines, which has just been completed on Olive street, just west of Taylor avenue, was formally opened last night.

The building, which was christened by Miss Lottie Mayer, is described as one of the finest and most complete of its kind in the country. Massive mirrors, art glass transoms, marble wainscoting and tile floors harmonize with the decorations of the walls and ceilings and the walls and the electric fixtures.

There are novel features in the equipment for the teaching of swimming, and precautions have been taken for safety, convenience and health of swimmers.

Women's reception and sun rooms and a beauty parlor are provided on the second floor and there is an emergency room with a nurse in attendance.

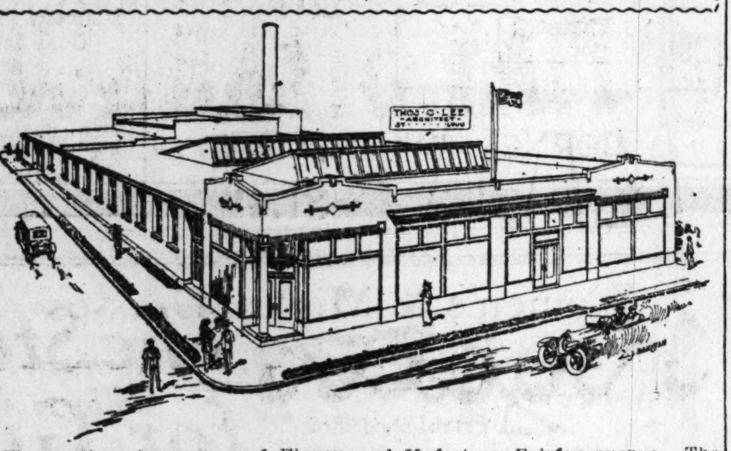
The pool is 60 feet wide and 160 feet long. The first floor and balcony are provided with more than 400 lockers, two showers, two spring boards and two slides.

Miss Mayer is the instructor for women and children. Gustav Hilmer will be director of the pool and instructor.

The Beethoven Conservatory of Music has leased the second floor of his building and will move from their present location at Olive street and Taylor avenue.

The building was financed by J. I. Epstein, 617 Chestnut street.

Site Purchased for Modern Plant for a Laundry Company



The southwest corner of Finney and Pendleton avenues has been purchased by the new Home Laundry of which George J. Texton is president, as a site for a new and modern plant. The site has a frontage on three streets, 75 feet on Finney avenue, 32 feet 6 inches on Pendleton avenue, and 75 feet on Fairfax avenue. The building will be erected under the supervision of Thomas C. Lee the architect. The entire interior will be faced in white enamel brick and will be complete in its appointment. William A. Giraldin, of Geraldin Bros., represented both the seller and purchaser.

TWO HANDSOME HOMES OF CITY SELL FOR $110,000

Sales of two costly homes, one in St. Louis County and the other in the city, swelled the volume of residential transactions for the week.

The house and grounds of Henry Garneau, comprising three acres in Hampton Park, were sold to Henry Graham for $30,000, while 3 Kingsbury place, the home of Mrs. Cora E. Nugent, widow of the late Charles E. Nugent, was acquired by James C. Jones for $80,000.

Albert T. Terry & Co. represented Graham, and the Mississippi Valley Trust Co., with John H. Farish & Co., acted for Jones.

The Hampton Park house, according to Terry, is one of the most complete of the Colonial character in St. Louis County, which is enhanced by its park environments.

Features of the building are larger sleeping porches, a hot water heating system and several bath rooms. Among the auxiliary buildings is a garage.

The former Nugent home, distinguishable by two marble lions, is one of the show places of St. Louis. The house comprises 24 rooms, with a proportionate number of baths. It occupies a lot 220x185 feet. It was built 10 years ago, at a cost of $110,000.

As part payment Mrs. Nugent took Jones' house at 5561 Chamberlain avenue, containing 14 rooms and occupying a lot 180x200 feet.

LOTS IN BRYAN PARK AND WEST WALNUT MANOR SELL FAST

North Side Tracts Are Popular With Homeseekers and Investors, as Terms Are Easy.

GLEN ECHO NO. 2 ACTIVE

Insurance and Sickness Clauses in Contract of Subdivision Helps Sale of Property.

Subdivision activity is at its zenith in North, South and West St. Louis, especially in the popular price sections. Bryan Park and West Walnut Manor are the storm centers of the North Side, the demand for lots in these subdivisions being rampant.

Bryan Park, a brand-new plat, thirty minutes from Eighth and Olive streets by the Bellfontaine line, was launched yesterday with the grand special sale. A list of the sales was not issued, but according to salesmen, a new high record was scored for Northwest St. Louis.

In Bryan Park, which is on King's highway northeast, a 200 foot automobile or vehicle driveway is being presented under the auspices of Barngrover & Specht, a bristling young concern, with offices in the Fullerton Building.

Sewers and granitoid walks, together with other improvements, have been installed there, the cost of which is included in the sale prices.

Tract Is Well Located.

Bryan Park is well located for a medium-priced subdivision, the lay of the ground lending itself to home improvements.

The sale will be continued today and until all the lots are disposed of.

A rush of buyers is also reported at West Walnut Manor, David P. Leahy's northwest subdivision, at the terminus of the Union avenue car line. Probably 50 lots were disposed of at this tract, which represents an addition of 1000 lots to the original West Walnut Manor.

The Manor sale is being made at remarkably low prices, and on terms which place the lots within the reach of all.

The up-building of this section is the marvel of the realty and building movement of the North Side.

Glen Echo Park No. 2 a Magnet.

Glen Echo Park No. 2 and Charlack are the maelstroms of the suburbs.

While Glen Echo No. 2 will not be formally presented until next Saturday, reservations therein are being made by the score. This subdivision, for which Paul Jones & Co., one of the stanchest in St. Lous realty circles, are agents, is being offered at prices and terms which will appeal especially to the strong investor or homeseeker, or rather the installment fellows.

The Glen Echo contract contains a forfeiture clause which waives the payment for a period of 10 weeks in case of sickness. There is also an insurance clause whereby in event of the death of the buyer the lot will be deeded to widow or heirs, of the deceased, without further payments, provided 10 per cent of the purchase price was paid down at the outset, or if his widow or heirs elect, the money already paid in will be refunded to them.

The Glen Echo proposition is unprecedented in challenging attention of the thrifty classes, which prefer owning their own homes, rather than paying rent, according to Mr. Jones.

How to Get to Glen Echo No. 2.

Glen Echo Park No. 2 is situated opposite Glen Echo Country Club, on the Hunt road, and is accessible by the St. Charles Electric car—St. Peters' Cemetery division—five minutes from Wellston, or by the Kirkwood division of the United Railways.

Paul Jones & Co. announce a grand free lunch for next Saturday, with an invitation to the public to picnic near to nature under the forest trees of this picturesque home site.

Granitoid walks, with other conveniences, have been installed at Glen Echo.

The site is one of the highest points in St. Louis County, overlooking the western part of the city.

G. Irving Lowe is sales manager at Glen Echo.

Charlack, the charming Creve Coeur line subdivision, is awakening interest that dims the fondest day dreams of Edward Goecke, its promotor and agent.

Goecke is standing behind his proposition with an offer to repurchase the lots at the end of five years, which he believes by that time will have doubled and trebled in value.

Charlack extends from the Creve Coeur Lake interurban line to the St. Charles line. The lots are being disposed of at comparatively nominal prices and on easy terms.

The locality, which is one of the most charming in St. Louis County, is being built up with attractive homes.

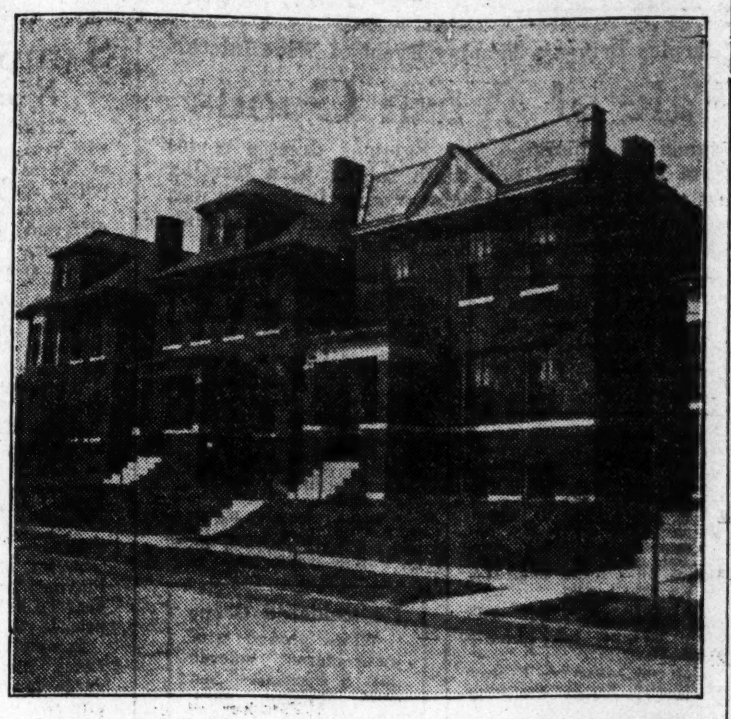
Southampton is the magnet on the South Side, not a day passing but what two or three lots are sold. The best value, according to agents, is given at Southampton. This tract, which has been beautifully graded and improved, is being offered at comparatively nominal prices with the terms which make the property available for all classes. A hundred or more houses have been erected in the addition in the last year, while plans are maturing for a hundred more, the majority of which will be started this summer.

A visit to this tract will be a revelation to the home seeker. The Mercantile Trust Co. is handling the property, with R. C. Buchanan at the helm.

Returns From California.

John E. Langan, vice-president and treasurer of the Taylor-Easton Trust Co., has returned from a business trip to California.

New Residences Being Erected in Dover Place



South Side Subdivision Is Set Aside Exclusively for Homes.

A number of seven-room and nine-room residences have been erected by the Dover Place Realty and Investment Co., in the new subdivision. Dover place. All the latest improvements are embodied in the construction. There are also in course of construction several bungalows.

Dover place is on the south side, 30 minutes from Market street. The Bellefontaine cars pass the subdivision, going in both directions. The Broadway line is only a few blocks away. The ground is beautifully situated and the place is set aside strictly for residence purposes.

LOTS ARE SELLING FAST IN WASHINGTON UNIVERSITY PL.

Indications Are That Former Tesson Park Tract Soon Will Be Sold Out. Distributions Will Be Made to Subscribers in Few Days.

Whirlwind sales characterized the week at Washington University place and at Maryland terrace, both within the Washington University district.

All except 48 of the 171 lots in Washington University place have been subscribed for, the indications being that the plat will be entirely out of the market within the next four or five days.

Keen to the speculation involved in the Washington Place proposition, which provides for disposition of lots at the uniform price of $24 a front foot, many are signing up for as many of the lots as may be sold to one person under the rules and regulations of the sale, or, rather, the contest.

The distribution of the lots, which will be according to numbers to be drawn from a hat and corresponding with those of the plat of the subdivision will be made when the subscriptions have been completed.

In this connection Archbishop John of the Third Baptist Church, who ofthe Third Baptist Church, who have purchased sites, will officiate, the Goodwin Realty and Investment Co., the agents, announced.

Sale to Meet Emergency.

This is an emergency sale to meet a deed of trust for $171,000, which wil be due June 1, the tract having been purchased only a fortnight ago as a speculation by a group of professionals at $22 a front foot.

The site offers a commanding view of both the suburbs and the city. Washington University place, formerly known as Tesson Park, lies along the east and the south lines of Pennsylvania and Forsyth boulevards.

Sales for the week in Maryland terrace aggregated $20,000, representing about eleven lots, which, according to Everett Davis, president of the Davis Realty and Development Co., sets a new record at this tract.

The lots are being disposed of by the square foot, the popularity of which can be gauged by the increased sale of the lots. When the tract was first placed on the market it was quoted on the front-foot basis.

This subdivision lies on the west line of Pennsylvania avenue, overlooking Washington University.

A new and successful method of selling real estate is being used in the sale of bungalow sites in West Portland place. J. Burt Gildersleeve, who has recently acquired from the original owners the remaining lots of that subdivision, depends almost exclusively upon what he calls "silent salesmanship."

That is, he has each bungalow site carefully marked with a red stake, on which is fastened a yellow card. On this card full particulars as to that piece of property is given. The amount of the deed of trust, if any, the front and depth of the lot, the width of the alley, the price per foot, as well as the gross price.

Furthermore, anyone interested in this home site to the point of purchase, may tear off this yellow card and present it at his office, 808 Title Guaranty Building. The important feature of this idea is, that by presenting this card in person, one is allowed a discount of approximately 2½ per cent on the total price of the home site.

The method appeals to a number of people who like to deal directly with the owner in making their purchase.

HOUSE NUMBERS IN HILLCREST TO BE SMALL

House numbers in Hillcrest, the new exclusive residence subdivision, will probably be short numbers, from 1 to 30, rather than four-figure numbers, such as the location of the subdivision would naturally indicate. Property holders in Hillcrest are now voting on this matter, and two-thirds of them are in favor of the short numbers, according to Gerald B. O'Reilly, president of the Hillcrest Improvement Association.

An effort will be made to persuade the city authorities to build a new park roadway, which will come out near the east terminus of Arundel avenue, Hillcrest. Hillcrest now contains 40 houses, and bids are being taken for street oiling.

MISSING ILLINOIS DRY LEADER FOUND BOUND IN CABIN

Pastor Says Four Men Kidnaped Him From Westville Seven Weeks Ago.

KEPT DAZED BY DRUGS

Imprisoned in Cellar, Beaten and Taken on Long Auto Ride at Night.

The Rev. Louis R. Patmont, anti-liquor campaigner, who disappeared March 31 at Westville, Vermillion County, Ill., at the height of a local option fight in which he was leading the dry forces, and who was believed by many persons to have been murdered, was found yesterday afternoon in a vacant log cabin 2½ miles north of Columbia, Ill., bound hand and foot, with a gunny sack over his head. The cabin is on Joseph Richert's farm, and a farm hand named Glaenzer made the discovery. Columbia is in Monroe County, 18 miles south of St. Louis.

The prisoner had been gagged, but he chewed the course cloth to pieces. He was bound like an Egyptian mummy, with a stout stick holding his elbows and his knees on the same level so he could neither sit nor lie down.

At the home of the Rev. William Schlinkman in Columbia last night, Patmont told an astonishing story of being kidnaped by four men and held prisoner for more than seven weeks in a dark cellar. He said he was bound and blindfolded much of the time and kept under guard all the time, and that when he made an outcry he was beaten on the head with sandbags. Ether and other drugs were used, he said, to keep him in a stupor much of the time. When released, he was at first unable to use his limbs.

Carried in Auto at Night.

In the last two nights, he said, he had been carried in an automobile the greater part of the distance between Westville and Columbia, which is nearly 200 miles in a diagonal line across the State. During the day, he said, he was kept prisoner in some abandoned building, and at night the automobile was driven, much of the time, at breakneck speed.

He said he was placed in the log cabin early yesterday morning and was told that if he called for help the cabin would be burned with him in it. He said that, from threats which his captors had made, he believed they meant to set the cabin on fire last night, and thus destroy him. At Pastor Schlinkmann's request, three armed men guarded his home last night, and the Sheriff and Prosecuting Attorney of Monroe County spent some time there.

A strange automobile was seen in Columbia yesterday, but no one seemed to know which direction it took in leaving town, or who were the men in it. Patmont says he was kidnaped by "two Americans and two Italians."

Disappeared on March 21.

Patmont, whose home is in Milwaukee, went ot Westville, the center of the so-called "bad lands" district in Vermillion County, March 18 last, and took the lead of the dry forces in the local option campaign. March 31, at 6:30 in the evening, he was seen on the outskirts of the town, and the next day he was missing.

Sympathizers of Patmont in the neighboring city of Danville, where a local option campaign also was on, instituted a search. On the theory that he might have been cast into an abandoned coal mine, several mines of the county were searched.

Saloon men of Westville declared they knew nothing about the man's disappearance, and offered a reward of $500 for information about his whereabouts, or for evidence connecting any liquor interests with his disappearance.

Had Been Given Up as Dead.

In several cases an unidentified body has been found which has been supposed, for a time, to be Patmont's. A body found near Cleveland was said to be identified by Patmont's brother as that of Patmont, but the identification was later disputed.

Westville went wet, April 7, by a vote, in the township, of 2691 wet and 1287 dry. The disappearance of Patmont was made an issue in the Danville local option election, April 21, and the dry leaders charged the wets with having kidnaped or killed the missing man. Danville went wet.

Yesterday, Glaenzer, working on the Richert farm, was about 300 feet from the vacant house when he heard a cry of "Help!" Going into the house, he found the bound man, a gunnysack fastened with a wire over his head.

Weeps When He Is Freed.

The farm hand was astonished at what he saw. When the bound man heard Glaenzer's voice, he began to weep.

"I was afraid you were one of those men, until I heard your voice," he said. "They told me that if I made an outcry they would burn this house with me in it."

Glaenzer cut the cords and the man's limbs moved slowly apart, but he seemed unable to use them. Glaenzer pulled him to his feet, but he sank down again.

"It's no use," he said. "I can't stand up. I've been tied this way for weeks."

The farm hand called his employer and after learning who the man was, Richert took him to town in a farm wagon and to Pastor Schlinkmann's home.

Patmont was emaciated, and his limbs

AMERICAN GIRL TO WED MEXICAN SHE NURSED

Miss Elizabeth Woods, 18, Leaves Vera Cruz For Mexico City to Meet Federal General.

VERA CRUZ, May 23.—Miss Elizabeth Woods, an American girl, 18 years old, left Vera Cruz for Mexico City this afternoon, where she will wed Gen. Jiminez Castro of the Federal army, commanding at Cuernavaca. They met six months ago at Cuernavaca, following the battle between the Federals and the Zapatistas.

Miss Woods and her parents came to Vera Cruz as refugees, but she insisted on returning when Gen. Castro wrote, asking her to come back to marry him. Her parents reluctantly agreed and went on the train with her. John Woods, her father, is a business man of Cuernavaca.

Gen. Castro was several times wounded and the American girl nursed him back to health.

PRISONERS AIDED BY FORD CAUGHT IN BURGLARY

Men Put to Work at $5 a Day Arrested Breaking Into Invalid's Home at Night.

DETROIT, May 23.—Henry Ford, believing kindness to ex-prisoners would result in their reformation, gave two of them work at $5 a day a few months ago. The police at 2 a. m. today gave the theory a jolt by capturing the men in the act of burglary, it is alleged.

The men are George Welty and James Lake, both of Highland Park. They still held their Ford jobs, being industrious workmen by day and burglars, it is asserted, by night. They made the mistake, according to the police, of trying to break into a house of sickness. The nurse notified headquarters.

The proceeds of a burglary committed earlier in the night were found, it is alleged, on Welty, who two years ago came here from Hagerstown, Md., kicked in the window of a pawnshop and got away with $5000 in diamonds. He said he did it because he was hungry. He became a "pal" of Lake when in the House of Correction.

$60,000 GIFT TO DRYS

CLINTON, Mo., May 23.—E. W. Chafin, the prohibition leader, announced today that the prohibition national committee had received as a gift from H. P. Faris of this city the Artesian Park of 60 acres in this city.

The property will be named University Park, and will be devoted to educational purposes, prohibition party, annual chautauquas and other reform work. The park is valued at $60,000.

Arrested for Cutting Corners.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., May 23.—St. Joseph inaugurated a campaign against "jay walkers" today and the first man arrested was Edward Walls of New York City. Walls insisted on making a crossing diagonally instead of "squaring it." He said he thought the policeman who arrested him was joking.

CHARITY GRAFTERS DUPE PRESIDENT AND MAYOR KIEL

Procure Letters That Help Them to Get $2500 in Seven Months.

IN GUISE OF CLERGYMEN

Turkish Ambassador Induced to Get Them Recommendations From High Officials.

The use of testimonials fraudulently obtained from the President of the United States, United States Senators and other men of high station is part of a new system of graft with headquarters in Turkey, and between 200 and 300 agents in this country, which was described last night by United States Immigration Inspector James R. Dunn. He recommended to the Secretary of Labor at Washington that George Michael and Joseph George, self-styled "missionaries," in jail here, be deported as professional beggars.

Michael and George were arrested at the St. James Hotel yesterday, whither they had betaken themselves after they had lived out their welcome at the Planters as the guests of the manager, William Walker, and as the nonpaying occupants for nine days of the bridal suite, with the privilege of soliciting contributions from other guests of the hotel. They represented that they were collecting funds to build a Christian orphanage at "Van, Syria."

Letter From the President.

In their possession, according to Dunn, were letters referring to the charity they purported to represent, and bearing the signatures of President Wilson, of Secretary of War Garrison, Senators Stone and Reed of Missouri, and the Turkish Ambassador at Washington, Youssouf Zia Pacha. They also persuaded Mayor Kiel to supply them with a written testimonial, Dunn said.

The Inspector would make none of the letters public, stating that they were part of the evidence to be forwarded to the Secretary of Labor. But he said they were of a routine nature, addressed to "those whom it may concern," and using some such formula as that "the writer was informed the bearers were collecting funds for an orphan asylum in Syria, which was said to be worthy of the sympathy of charitable persons."

The prisoners, who wore the clerical collars, high vests and long black coats associated with clergymen's attire, were taken before Dunn for a hearing and there admitted, he said, that the asylum for which they were soliciting money was already built and that it was a municipal institution, supported entirely by taxpayers. They confessed that the letters of introduction which they brought to America and which pretended to bear the signatures of Archbishops and Bishops in Syria, were forged by the ringleaders of the band in Turkey.

Duped Turkish Ambassador.

With these bogus credentials they obtained access to the Turkish Ambassador, and, obtaining a testimonial from him, used it to elicit similar letters from President Wilson and Senators Reed and Stone. Senator Stone's testimonial won for them the hospitality of the Planters Hotel.

George had $256, which he said represented their collections in St. Louis. He told the inspector that he and his companion had been in the United States seven months and had collected $2500, the greater part of which, after paying their own salaries, they had sent to their leaders in Turkey. Dunn declared that photographs which they displayed to prospective contributors as the pictures of Christian children in Syria were really taken on the East Side in New York.

Herbert S. Mosher, superintendent of the St. Louis branch of the Pinkerton Detective Agency, was worked upon by the "missionaries" to the extent of contributing half a dollar to their "cause."

"Oriental solicitors," said Dunn, is the name by which the Immigration Department classifies the agents of the "pious graft" industry, as he calls it. Many of them have been deported, and the department is seeking to drive them all out of the country. With their forged credentials and those obtained under false pretenses, together with their pretensions to charity and religion, they are able, he says, to worm themselves into the influence of prominent men, and to obtain introductions from clergymen to anyone they wish to meet.

How They Were Trapped.

Several days ago Michael and George called upon J. D. Lynn, secretary of the Charities Committee of the Business Men's League, and requested a contribution. Lynn had been warned against "oriental solicitors" and told them to return Friday. He reported their visit to Inspector Dunn, who found that their names were on his list of "confidential missionaries." Arrangements for their arrest followed. Dunn expects an order for the deportation of the men to arrive from Washington this week.

At police headquarters they were measured and photographed for the rogues' gallery. Michael is 28 years old and George 24. To reporters they insisted they were genuine missionaries representing the Greek Orthodox Church. Both are swarthy of complexion. Michael is stout and intelligent of appearance. His companion has a cast in the left eye, a narrow forehead and a habit of holding his face bent towards the ground.

The atlases give no such city as "Van, Syria." But there is a town of 30,000 called Van in Armenia, which is an important center of Christian missions.

BOY KILLED, TWO HURT WHEN TRAIN HITS AUTOMOBILE

Chicago & Alton Passenger Crashes Into Machine on Granite City Crossing.

VICTIM 11 YEARS OLD

Brother, 20, Escapes With Bruises and Companion, 19, Is Dangerously Injured.

Walter Roseman, an 11-year-old schoolboy, was killed, his brother, Edward, 20, was badly shaken up and Edward Meyerling, 19, a companion, was seriously injured at 6:30 p. m. yesterday when a north-bound Chicago & Alton passenger train struck an automobile truck in which they were riding at the intersection of Twentieth street and Railroad avenue in Granite City.

The boys had been on a fishing trip to Chouteau Slough, and were returning to their homes in the auto. The train was bearing down upon the railroad crossing as the automobile approached. Edward Roseman, who was at the steering wheel, seemed to lose control. Bystanders declared he seemed to be confused. The auto sped on to the tracks and was struck full by the engine and smashed into a pile of wreckage.

Thrown Out, Run Over by Train.

The occupants of the automobile, all of whom were riding on a single seat, were pitched to the ground. Walter Roseman was run over by the train and killed instantly.

Edward Roseman fell on the ballasted roadway and was but slightly injured. Meyerling, who is a Granite City high school student, suffered cuts about his knees and body. He was sent to St. Elizabeth's Hospital.

The body of Walter Roseman was removed to the undertaking establishment of Edward Me[illegible]. The boy's mother was prostrated by the news of his death.

The boy killed was the son of Mr. and Mrs. H. F. Roseman of 2108 D street. The father is a well known painting contractor of Granite City.

KOENIG ASKS HEL[illegible] TO SAVE YOUNG T[illegible]

City Forester Reports Many Recently Planted Saplings Victims of Drouth.

City Forester Julius Koenig has despaired of saving hundreds of young trees dying as a result of the continued dry spell, unless householders assist his corps by watering the perishing saplings.

"We are doing all we can to nourish these trees that are languishing in all parts of the city, but it is more than we can attend to," Koenig said yesterday. "No matter how rich the soil, unless water is supplied, these young trees will die, because only through moisture can they absorb nourishment."

Koenig says there is no danger to well developed trees as yet, but many dead saplings have been discovered by his inspectors. He says the ground should be saturated with water until it is soft, to provide ample nourishment.

CITY TEARING DOWN ITS NEGRO SHACKS

Springfield, Mo., Drives Out Squatters and Sets Fire to Several Huts.

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., May 23.—By direction of Mayor Bowman and the city health authorities, dozens of negro families are being forced out of "Jordan Valley." Half a dozen buildings, some containing several families, were torn down while the frightened negroes hurried away with their belongings. The families in most instances were "squatters."

It is the intention to destroy scores of worthless shacks and fire was applied to some of them. The huts were within a block of the business center.

'RUNAWAY' MORTON GIRL HAVING FUN ON VIRGINIA MANOR

Chicago Heiress, Still Single, Found With Brother of Supposed Fiance.

DENIES SHE'S ENGAGED

Man She Was Said to Have Wed, Is in Sanitarium—Third Suitor on Way There.

By Wire From the Washington Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, May 23.—The ancient Virginia estate of Chief Justice John Marshall, in the foothills of the Blue Ridge Mountains, may be the gathering place within the next 48 hours of the suitors of Miss Helen Morton, daughter of Mark Morton, of Chicago and the niece of the late Paul Morton, Secretary of the Navy.

Miss Morton, who flitted from Chicago without the knowledge of her parents, devoted today to denying that she was married or engaged or likely to be, to standing off interviewers and to cantering through the mountains with Henry Clay Bailey Jr., one of the men to whom she is reported to be married or engaged.

On their return to the old manor house from one of these rides, the couple was interviewed. Miss Morton said she was neither married nor engaged to Henry Clay Bailey, whom she described as "just a good friend." Henry Clay himself murmured dejectedly that "it is not true, but I wish it were."

Brother in a Santarium.

Meanwhile Roger Bailey, the brother of Henry Clay, to whom Miss Morton first was reported to be engaged, was in a Washington sanitarium and chafing to be off to the Blue Ridge mountain fastnesses where the Chicago girl is racing the thoroughbreds with his brother.

He suffered a relapse of his illness a few days ago and it is suspected that it was the plight of a sick man in Washington, instead of a girlhood chum in New Jersey, which brought about the flight of Miss Morton from Chicago. It is reported she saw Roger in Washington last Thursday night.

While the nurses stood guard over him and endeavored to prevent him from over-taxing himself, Roger said Miss Morton was not engaged to his brother. As for himself, he pensively remarked that any statement "must come from Miss Morton." Roger protested to the nurses that he was well and that he must depart at once "to attend to urgent business in Virginia."

Third Suitor Is on the Way.

It would surprise no friend of the couple if Roger appeared tomorrow at the Marshall estate and put the thoroughbreds through some new paces, designed to arouse the envy of his brother.

Just as it began to look as if Miss Morton was the heroine of a romance involving the rivalry of two brothers, known as Virginia gentlemen and expert judges of horseflesh, it transpired that another man was on his way to the Blue Ridge Mountains. He is said to be Charles Wacker Jr. of Chicago. He is an acquaintance of Miss Morton and is coming to visit the Baileys and Mr. and Mrs. E. Allen Russell, formerly of Chicago, who have a country estate near Warrenton. Miss Morton denied that Wacker was interested in her in any romantic degree.

Then along late in the afternoon, when there was a lull in the reports of young men about to descend upon the retreat of Miss Morton, the Sheriff of Fauquier County visited the Marshall estate, which is the home of Mr. and Mrs. N. Frank Neer, and intercepted Miss Morton as she was cantering forth on a fresh jumper and served on her a summons to court.

It appears that a suit has been filed against Miss Morton in which it is alleged that she did not carry out a contract to purchase the Blair Johnson farm near Warrenton. Miss Morton accepted service, declaring she had purchased the farm in accordance with her contract, and blithely galloped away over the fields.

Miss Morton says she is at the Neer home, near Delaplane, because "Papa got peevish and insisted that I go to Wheaton immediately to spend the summer with him and I wanted to come down here."

The interviewer was driven up the lane of century-old sugar maples, interspersed with crepe myrtle bushes, just as Miss Morton and Henry Clay Bailey Jr. entered from their morning ride. The girl, with flushed cheeks, sparkling eyes and tresses blowing across her face, swung herself from the saddle.

Wears No Engagement Ring.

She was dressed in a greenish gray riding habit, with a screaming yellow vest, which set off her dark olive complexion strikingly. Her voice rippled with laughter and her blue eyes twinkled and flashed as she answered questions, first while stroking the nose of her favorite horse, Cocktail, and later in the parlor of the Neer home. She was absolutely without jewelry, wearing no wedding or engagement ring.

Bailey is a horseman, who has had his ups and downs financially.

Washington friends of Miss Morton and the two Baileys said tonight they had heard of an engagement. They said, however, that the marriage was being delayed until Miss Morton could remove the objection of "papa."

Morton, it is said, has refused absolutely to make it possible for his daughter to carry out her dream of owning a stock farm in Virginia and possibly of having a Virginia gentleman for a husband.

TROUBLE WAGON AS TROUBLE MAKER TIES UP TRAFFIC

Hits "Dead Man," Turns Over and Wires Blaze for Blocks on Grand Avenue.

A United Railways "trouble wagon," abetted by the "dead man" used to support the scaffolding about the unfinished steeple of St. Francis Xavier's Church, turned trouble-maker in a freak accident at 9:15 o'clock last night. The trolley wires on Grand avenue between Laclede avenue and Olive street were bruned out, street car traffic in the vicinity was halted for an hour, a big crowd assembled, and the fire department was called out.

From the top of the scaffolding, 190 feet in the air, two guy cables were stretched downwards over Grand avenue and were secured to a stout post, called a "dead man," which stood just inside the curb on the other side of the avenue, about 15 feet south of Lindell boulevard. The wires, even on the east side of the street, were high enough for ordinary vhicles to pass beneath.

But the contractors had not taken into account the "trouble wagons" of the trolley system, which are automobile trucks bearing a platform about 10 feet high, with extension ladders upon which the linemen work.

At 9:15 o'clock the "trouble wagon" came whizzing north, running close to the east curb. Just as the hub of the front wheel struck the "dead man" the superstructure carried away the guy wires. The truck turned over and slid on its side into Lindell boulevard. Its occupants, a chauffeur and a lineman, James Corruth, 4470 Finney avenue, and James McKeever, 4466 Fairfax avenue, picked themselves up unhurt.

"The "dead man," 10x10 inches, was snapped off, and the guy wires fell across the trolley wires, causing a short circuit. A line of fire ran along the wires for blocks, causing a dazzling electrical display. White-hot wires sagged and dropped sizzling to the street, or snapped in two with loud deports. Police patrols and fire engines arrived on the gallop. Theatergoers poured out into the streets.

By the time the damage was repaired the "trouble wagon was righted and went on its way.

BOOKKEEPER FALLS AT HIS DESK AND DIES

Employe of Worral Manufacturing Co. Expires Before Doctor Arrives.

Thomas Whitaker, 46 years old, of 3629 Washington avenue, dropped dead at 11 a. m. yesterday in the office of the Worral Manufacturing Co., 212 North Main street, where he was a bookkeeper. He was working on his books, when he staggered, and a fellow employe caught him in his arms. He was dead when a doctor arrived.

James Whitaker of 6254 Berlin avenue, a brother, said Thomas had been suffering from acute indigestion for the last few days, and had declared his intention of going to a doctor.

LIFE SAVING SHIP IS LOST ON ROCKS; WITH CREW OF 25

Wreckage of Halifax 19, New Canadian Vessel, Found After Six Bodies Are Recovered.

HALIFAX, N. S., May 23.—The battered hulk of the new lightship Halifax, No. 19, was found among the breakers on Liscomb Island, five miles from the mainland, today. She struck during the dense fog which had enshrouded the coast for several days and it is believed her crew of 25 Scotchmen are lost. Six bodies bearing life belts had been recovered up to dusk tonight by the steamer Dufferin. Both lifeboats, which the vessel carried, were also found. A search of the little rock islands in the vicinity was made in the hope that some of the crew may have been able to get through the surf alive.

The bodies were picked up off Liscomb Island, on the eastern coast of Nova Scotia, today, by the steamer Dufferin. It is believed the ship struck Long Ledges during a dense fog and went down with her crew.

The lightship was built at Paisley, Scotland, for the Canadian Government, and was manned by a Scotch crew. She was supposed to be the last work in the construction of life saving vessels. The ship was built entirely of steel and carried one 23-foot life boat and a powerful 24-foot motor launch. At the spot where the vessel is thought to have gone down, long rollers from the North Atlantic break over the jagged rocks in the calmest weather, and all vessels give the spot a wide berth. The Canadian Marine Department holds out little hope that any of the crew will be rescued alive, but the Government steamers Stanley and Lady Laurier have been ordered to search for possible survivors.

The vessel was due to reach this port yesterday. The first intimation of the disaster was the report of the Dufferin that she had picked up three bodies. Later in the day she returned to Liscomb Island and found the fourth body.

The Halifax 19 stopped at St. Johns, N. F., for coal a few days ago, and then continued towards this port.

The scene of the disaster is about 40 miles west of Cape Canso.

MINE STRIKE IN PROSPECT

Subcommittee Fails to Agree With Operators on Scale.

CHARLESTON, W. Va., May 23.—The subcommittee of miners and coal operators who have been endeavoring to reach an agreement on wages and working conditions in the Kanawha coal field, decided late today to report to the general committee next Tuesday that they had been unable to formulate a satisfactory scale.

This is taken to mean that a strike will be called by the United Mine Workers of America.

ENVOYS, FEARING HUERTA'S END, PUSH PLANS FOR PEACE

First Full Conference of A B C Mediators and American and Mexican Delegates Called at Request of Huerta's Men After They Get Word From Home.

Mexicans Wish to Have New Government Satisfactory to United States Set Up Before Zapata or Villa Can Enter Mexico City.

Carranza's Minister of Interior Sees Bryan, Then Telegraphs Chief in Regard to Mediation Envoy.

By Wire From the Washington Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 24.—Information came to the Post-Dispatch bureau from a high authority tonight that Great Britain is prepared to give support to President Wilson's policy of permitting the Constitutionalist forces to succeed in Mexico and would recognize Gen. Carranza as the de facto President if the President should do so.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NIAGARA FALLS, Ontario, May 23.—"The Mexican delegates are very anxious abount conditions in Mexico City and are asking the mediators to hurry."

That was the statement of a prominent attache of the mediators tonight.

Fearing that Huerta is about to fall and that if the Constitutionalists reach Mexico City President Wilson will recognize Carranza as de facto President of Mexico, the Huerta delegates to the mediation conference are doing everything they can to reach a prompt settlement with the representatives of the United States.

Entirely without warning, the first full conference tonight was called at the urgent request of the Mexican delegates. So great was their anxiety on receipt of dispatches from Mexico City that they went into conference at 9 this morning with the A B C mediators and immediately afterward the secretary telephoned the American delegates, who came over at noon.

After a short conversation with Ambassador da Gama and the Ministers of Argentina and Chile, it was announced that a full conference would be held five hours later.

Telephone Is Resorted To.

So important were the developments deemed that it was decided to ask the American delegates to meet the mediators again at 10 o'clock at night and all through the afternoon and evening code dispatches were passing to and fro between the Prospect House on the American side, where Justice Lamar and F. W. Lehmann are staying, and Washington. At one time the long-distance telephone was resorted to.

The formal conference was held and the official bulletin issued after it said:

"The full conference of today was held at the request of the Mexican representatives for the purpose of informing the mediators and the American representatives of their Government concerning several interesting points for the best solution of the present difficulty.

"In accordance with the rules laid down in the minutes of procedure it was decided to maintain secrecy in regard to these points until a concrete solution shall have been reached, to which end the conventions will continue."

The "several interesting points for the solution of the present difficulty" were several plans suggested by the Mexicans for the establishment of a provisional government which could count on the backing of the United States as a means of shutting out Villa and Zapata. How necessary it is that this should be done quickly can be judged from the fact that within 20 minutes after the Mexicans had issued an official statement that "Saltillo has not been taken by the rebels," dispatches were received here confirming the news of its capture.

The formal conference was held in the solarium and attended with due diplomatic ceremony. At the head of the large table sat Ambassador da Gama of Brazil with the Argentine Minister at his right and the Chilean Minister at his left. The American delegates sat on the right side of the mediators. Mr. Justice Lamar sat next to Senor Naon. On the left were the Mexican delegates, Mr. Rabassa being seated to the left of Minister Suarez. Next to him were Senor El Quero and Dr. Austin Rodriguez. The leader of the conference and of the Mexican delegations sat at the foot of the table facing the mediators. The only other persons present was interpreter Joanini of the State Department.

Sunday Meeting Possible.

The informal conference between the mediators and the American delegates began at 10 o'clock and lasted until 11:40.

Nothing definite was decided tonight but the delegates left with the understanding that they might be called into conference again tomorrow, although it is Sunday. As soon as the Americans left the Mexicans sought the mediators. Minister Suarez of Chile, who was tired out, went to bed, but Mr. Rabassa and Senor El Quero conferred at length with Ambassador da Gama and Minister Naon.

It can be positively stated at that formal conference no specific plan of any kind was formally submitted, only several suggestions were put forward.

and have been transmitted to Washington and Mexico City. The suggestions came only from the Mexican delegates and the mediators. The attitude of Mr. Justice Lamar and Mr. Lehmann was that of listeners.

The delegates said they had made substantial progress. One of those in attendance said he believed the duration of the mediation labors would be much shorter than expected. Enough was disclosed to indicate that the subjects under consideration took a wide range and that the delegates were in general in accord upon the results to be desired and entered earnestly upon the work.

Would Protect Land Interests.

Almost any plan that is acceptable to President Wilson is acceptable to the Mexican delegates, so long as it safeguards the great landed interests and prevents the Constitutionalists from enjoying the material fruits of their victories. But it has been made quite plain that the plan must be the work of the delegates and not of the mediators. The mediators are very anxious to keep out of the responsibility of establishing a stable form of government—this must be left to the Mexicans with the moral support and material assistance, if necessary, of the United States.

Reports that the mediators were endeavoring to select members of a committee to administer the affairs of the republic of Mexico and that they had reached a choice of a provisional government were scouted as absurd, and the mediators said any such activity was entirely foreign to their desires.

The mediators made it quite clear that they are here to mediate and that the responsibility of whatever is done will rest upon the delegates. About 20 days ago in Washington the mediators informally let it be known that one of their suggestions was for a commission composed of two Huerta delegates, two Constitutionalists and a fifth to be appointed by the President of Brazil, but this met with such opposition from the Carranza side that nothing came of it.

During the afternoon the American delegates attended the funeral in the city of Niagara Falls on the American side of Andrew M. Saunders, an American marine, who was accidentally killed by a comrade in the occupation of Vera Cruz.

Huerta's Torreon Commander Said to Have Revolted With Troops.

VERA CRUZ, May 23.—Six Americans who arrived here by train from Mexico City today brought an unconfirmed report that Gen. Jose Velasco, the Federal commander, defeated at Torreon by Villa, then recalled to the capital and later sent to San Luis Potosi, had revolted against Gen. Huerta, with most of the Federal troops under his command.

Felix Diaz in Toronto Tells How He Would Divide Mexican Land.

TORONTO, Ont., May 23.—Gen. Felix Diaz today said he heartily approved of the mediation proceedings at Niagara Falls. In the event that a new provisional Government results from the mediation conferences, he said he would be among the first to swear allegiance to it.

In a statement dictated to the Associated Press, Gen. Diaz suggested that the mediators consult informally the leaders of all the political parties of Mexico, taking part in the last two presidential elections. Thus they could obtain for provisional President a man satisfactory to all factions.

"My plan for settling the land problem," said Diaz, "would be to divide the vast tracts of land for the benefit of the poor people, but not to give them proprietary rights, because it has been true in many places, where land has been divided that it has been sold and not cultivated. I would suggest giving the people usufruct of the land only so that it will be tilled. There ought also to be progressive taxes, so that large owners would be forced to divide their estates."

CARRANZA'S AID AND BRYAN CONFER

Rebel Minister of Interior Wires Chief Regarding Mediation Envoy.

WASHINGTON, May 23.—Another exchange of telegrams tonight between Gen. Carranza and Emilio Zubaran, Minister of the Interior in the Constitutionalist Cabinet, left the question of representation of the Carranzistas at the Niagara conference undetermined.

Jose Vasconcelos, prominently mentioned in diplomatic circles as a likely selection should Gen. Carranza ultimately dicide to have a representative at the Niagara meeting, arrived here and conferred with Zubaran, who in turn, conferred with Secretary Bryan. The exchanges with the Constitutionalist first chief followed.

Vascon Gelos reiterated he had no intimation that the Constitutionalists might participate in the mediation or that he was to be selected. He said he had stopped over at Washington on his way to San Antonio, whence he expects to join Carranza in Mexico. However, Zubaran's conference with the Secretary of State, following a prolonged conference today between Bryan and John Lind and Charles A. Douglas, attorney for the Constitutionalist agency, after which Bryan went to the White House gave rise in some circles to a feeling that mediation might be facilitated by participation by the Carranzistas.

Commission Plan Objected To.

Constitutionalists here, however, continued to express their doubt of Carranza's willingness to take any position which might be interpreted in Mexico as participating in a mediation concerning the internal affairs of that republic.

It became definitely known tonight that the plan for a commission form of government in Mexico City during the transition period has not found favor with the Constitutionalists. Before Charge O'Shaughnessy left the capital city he forwarded to Washington, at the direction of the State Department, a list of Mexicans who might be termed "elder statesmen," as a possible council of notables to form a provisional government and maintain order in Mexico City should the expected fall of Huerta occur before another government was ready to supplant him.

The list was headed by Luis Mandez and was made up of Mexicans who were said to have had no connection with the intrigues and revolutions of the last three years. To most of the names suggested the Constitutionalists have objected on the ground that the men are members of the Catholic party, and on the larger ground that the Constitutionalists have made other plans for assuming the reins of power.

Their plan provides that should a sudden elimination of Huerta leaves the Government in Mexico City without a head, or should a popular uprising or army revolt overturn affairs there, a Constitutionalist junta already provisionally organized would take control of the machinery of the government and turn it over to the chief of the Constitutionalist movement.

Urrutia Sails on U. S. Ship.

Dr. Aurelliano Urrutia, former Minister of the Interior in Huerta's Cabinet, who fled from Mexico City because he feared assassination, sailed from Vera Cruz at 5 p. m. today on board the American naval transport Hancock for Galveston, with a number of American refugees.

Bryan was more hopeful tonight than he has yet appeared to be over the Mexican situation. It was predicted by persons close to the Secretary there would be peace between this country and Mexico within forty days. Secretary Daniels declared this afternoon that the peace negotiations under way would "work out." Everybody is feeling better since Vice-Consul Silliman reached Mexico City.

The President has put the lid on tight and will not let any mediation news out if he can keep it in.

The Brazilian Minister at Mexico City today informed Bryan that Vice-Consul John R. Silliman was nine days on the way from Saltillo to Mexico City, and that he was upset because of the hardships experienced. He was told that because of his weakened condition Silliman would not undertake the trip to Vera Cruz until Monday. Silliman is not ill, Bryan explained, but worn from worry.

Twice-a-Day Mail Service From Vera Cruz to Capital Arranged.

VERA CRUZ, May 23.—The exchange of mail twice daily with Mexico City will begin Monday, Postal Inspector Robinson having received today formal notification that the Huerta Government was willing to participate in this arrangement.

The American postoffice clerks will take the first consignment of mail destined for Mexico City and interior points to the break in the railroad line on Monday, where a Mexican clerk will receipt for it and deliver mail from the capital. Inspector Robinson decided that he would forward no mail to Cordoba for points north of the line dividing the republic at San Luis Potosi. He is endeavoring to arrange, instead, for the delivery of the northern mail to the Constitutionalist commander at Tampico.

The Post-Dispatch is the only evening newspaper in St. Louis that receives or publishes news gathered by the Associated Press.

Type of Intrenchment Occupied by Detachments of the Fifth Brigade at Vera Cruz Outposts

Copyright by Underwood & Underwood.

An idea of how Gen. Funston is guarding any possible move of the Mexican Federals against detachments of his command on guard at the Vera Cruz outposts may be had from the photo showing part of the intrenchment in the sand dunes about 10 miles from that city. The intrenchment itself is almost shoulder high. About the intrenchment breastworks of sandbags have been raised.

17,000 MEXICANS MENACE FUNSTON WITH 6000 MEN

Despite Reports of Safety at Vera Cruz, Returning Americans Say Huerta Is Massing Men Outside City Who Are Anxious to Attack Smaller Force.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

GALVESTON, Tex., May 23.—While official reports from Vera Cruz tend to indicate that all is quiet about Gen. Funston's lines, American officers and others who have returned to Galveston on United States vessels are talking freely of the dangerous conditions which confront the American army.

The General, with his 6000 regulars, backed by as many more marines, are doing everything possible to hold all they have gained, but opposed to them, forming a semicircle extending from Orizaba on the north, through Tambladers, Paso del Macho, Jalapa to Tejar on the south, are distributed 17,000 Mexicans, comprising all branches of service, splendidly equipped and anxious for a trial of strength with the American invaders.

Such was the declaration made today by Harry L. Dunn, ill in the hospital here, who is just back from Vera Cruz, where he spent two weeks on Gen. Funston's picket line, making frequent visits to the Mexican forces forming a semicircle about the American commander, and talking freely with both American and Mexican officers, gaining information which would indicate that, were it not for the near presence of the American warships, the American military force now holding Vera Cruz would have a tremendous task holding a footing on Mexican soil.

"Mexican refugees," said Mr. Dunn, "who are coming into Vera Cruz through the American lines in large numbers, bring in evidence of the gathering back of the picket lines established by Gen. Pena of large bodies of troops."

The fact that Gen. Villa is finding the way to Saltillo so weakly defended is pointed out as indicating that Huerta is drawing large number of men from opposing the advance of the rebels and placing them in a position for hurling them against the Americans now holding the city. His purpose in agreeing to mediation is said to have been for no further purpose than to strengthen his position between Vera Cruz and the City of Mexico by fortifying the bluffs and cliffs, mining the railroad tunnels and making the gorges intervening impassable and the defense impregnable.

In this semi-circle opposed to the Americans Gen. Navarette is said to have an artillery force of 16 batteries of three-pounders, five batteries of five-pounders and a number of heavier guns, all of which are being favorably placed for disputing the advance of the Americans. The men behind the guns are trained artillerists, some of them having been taught in European schools or under tuition of European experts. Gen. Navarette also has 60 or more machine guns of the latest French type, with plenty of ammunition.

Gen. Pena, whose headquarters are located in a narrow valley in the mountains, has 2000 veterans and a number of Oaxacan Indians, whose chief occupation is fighting and whom it would be next to impossible to capture.

At Tembladeras, a little station on the Mexican Railroad, are declared to be 2000 cavalry, commanded by Candelario Fugarte, a former Lieutenant of Emilano Zapata, the bandit.

These troopers are splendidly equipped and their mounts are the best the republic can produce. Many of these cavalrymen formerly fought under Zapata and are considered the most reckless men in Huerta's army. The American cavalry in Mexico are vastly inferior in number, and it has been a difficult task to hold the wild riders in check. They are supplied with the best in provisions that Mexico affords, and are the special guards of Gen. Huerta.

Seven miles north of Vera Cruz, near Orizaba, are about 2000 infantrymen, commanded by Rafael Ruiz. These men are co-operating with Huerta against the invaders, their hatred of the Americans being greater than their dislike for Huerta. As the Americans are not expected to move in this direction, they are merely forming part of a line of opposition to be developed later.

At the outpost opposite the waterworks are said to be 2500 men, mixed cavalry and infantry, many of the former being drawn from the rurales. They are well mounted and active. These, too, are represented as anxious to try conclusions with the Americans. The Mexican commander appears to be using a lot of ragged peons of low order of intelligence, but it is a frequent occurrence that at some point on the American line some large body of cavalry is to be seen, as if reconnoitering. They do not approach near the American pickets so as to be challenged, but move quietly from point to point. These bodies are usually from 200 to 500 in number.

URRUTIA SAILS FOR GALVESTON ON U. S. TRANSPORT

Hated Mexican Taken Aboard by Marines—Hopes to Be American Citizen.

VERA CRUZ, May 23.—After five days of virtual imprisonment in a hotel where he was held under guard against personal enemies, Dr. Aurdliano Urrutia, who was Minister of the Interior in Huerta's Cabinet, and who recently fled from the capital to escape Huerta's wrath, was quietly taken aboard the United States transport Hancock this afternoon by the American authorities and will be taken to Galveston.

So quietly was the transfer made that few outside of those who were personally enlisted in the task of removing the former Minister, his wife and six children and their personal belongings to the transport were aware of the occurrence. Early in the afternoon Lieut. Aristides Moreno of Judge Advocate Porter's staff called at the hotel with two army automobiles and took the unwelcome guests to the pier, where Rear Admiral Badger's barge was waiting.

Marines Were on Guard.

Before the trip to the water front began, marine guards were posted in conspicuous places along the route to be traversed. Marines were in the automobile and mounted marines followed closely.

Even the guests at the hotel were not aware that the much-hated Mexican had been slipped away until hours after his departure.

Dr. Urrutia was greatly relieved when Lieut. Moreno informed him that Admiral Badger had consented to his passage to the United States on the Hancock. He expressed over and over again his gratitude to the American officers for the care they had taken in guarding him from his enemies.

Dr. Urrutia declared that he intended to go to New Orleans, where he would probably establish a permanent residence and make application for American naturalization.

His Death Had Been Planned.

His relief is shared by the American officers, to whom his presence in Vera Cruz has been a source of constant worry. Both officers and men have felt that the honor of the United States was involved in seeing to its that Urrutia left the country in safety and they were aware that the numerous plots were talked of for the assassination of Huerta's former Minister.

American officers, upon investigation, found there was nothing to warrant Urrutia's detention for trial by an American court, and that accusations against him were based on flimsy hearsay evidence.

While Urrutia, his wife and six children were speeding to Galveston tonight, his six other children occupied a less enviable position. When he had determined that only flight would save his life, the plans for his departure were made with such haste that only the six youngest of his children could be taken. The others are still in the capital.

El Paso Thinks Villa Returned to Torreon to Attack Zacatecas.

EL PASO, Tex., May 23.—The return of Villa's army to Torreon, as reported in dispatches received here today, puzzled those who have been watching the Constitutionalist leaders' compaign. One explanation was that Villa, after taking Saltillo, would move against Zacatecas by way of Torreon, thus cleaning up the country along a straight line drawn east and west. This accounted for the giving up of the projected campaign against San Luis Potosi.

Another speculation had to do with the reported insubordination of the Arrieta brothers, insurgent leaders in Durango State, which would be entered by way of Torreon. This was denied by local representatives of the Constitutionalist Government.

All of Villa's troops returned to Torreon with the exception of the Robles' brigade, which remained to garrison Saltillo.

SALTILLO REGION MADE DESOLATE BY REVOLUTION

Post-Dispatch Correspondent on Trip From Monterey Finds Farms Devastated.

By B. C. UTECHT,

Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

RINCONADA, Mexico, May 21 (delayed in transmission).—When I received instructions to find John R. Silliman, United States Vice-Consul at Saltillo, I knew there would be a certain amount of hardships and risk, but I did not realize that a trip to Saltillo was like one into darkest Africa, nor had I any idea of what I must go through.

Armed with several passes, I presented myself to Gov. Villarreal, at Monterey, for another to Saltillo, but he laughed and said: "The only passport you need is a gun."

I had a six-shooter which I carry in my suitcase, as Mexicans respect Americans more when unarmed, as it shows they have no fear of molestation.

Gov. Vallareal arranged with me to go first to Rinconada with Col. Novoa in an automobile. We also had a guide and a chauffeur and his assistant.

Soon after leaving Monterey we entered a desert plain with high mountains on either side. These mountains are infested with bandits who hold up wayfarers and then get back into the wilds long before troops can give chase.

Farmers' Homes in Ruins.

As we advanced the road got worse, but the speed was not slackened. Nowhere were there any farms. In fact, there were no signs of habitation at all, so ruthless had been the civil war. Nothing but cacti and crags remained in a country which was once a prosperous farming region. The people have fled and their homes are in ruins.

At times we passed over a section of large stones and again we would jump right into a declivity, when we would have to hold tight with both hands.

A little of this is probably the experience of every automobilist, but imagine 40 miles of it! A dozen times we had to get out, so sharp was the rise. We reached a small village—and the term [illegible] complimentary—where we stopped for the night. We had the usual Mexican supper of tortillas and weak tea. The family had no [illegible]oles. Mother and daughter sla[illegible] the tortillas—the slap[illegible] an important step in the process—while the men of the family sat around and talked of the war. A small candle lighted the interior and in a corner sleeping were a child, dog and pig. Fumes from the oven filled the room. We ate without knife, fork or spoon, of course. The tortilla is the table utensil as well as the food of the poorer Mexicans and all Mexicans, rich or poor, know how to use the tortilla as a scoop.

Their Bed Made of Boards.

We passed the night in a room with one spring couch and one bed made of boards. Novoa insisted that I should take the bed. I refused until it appeared I was declining his hospitality, then I lay down, but not to sleep.

At 2 o'clock in the morning Capt. Gomez and six soldiers came in from the front on horseback to report a Constitutionalist victory. Sixty-four Federals and several machine guns had been captured, the Constitutionalist force numbering 200 and the Federals several times greater. Capt. Gomez could not refrain from carrying the news to his Colonel. We started for the outpost at 5 o'clock without breakfast. Oftentimes we traveled in the dry bed of a stream filled with rocks and I marvel how we reached this point.

About a thousand soldiers are at Rinconada and they gave us a greeting. They were surprised to see an American come to camp. As to intervention, they think it is not worth discussing. All the troops here are hardy cavalrymen, armed with gun, pistol and dagger. If the embargo is hurting their cause one would not think so, judging from the three belts of cartridges they wear. There are a hundred boys in this regiment and some of them 10 years old carry arms.

As soon as we had our tortilla and frijoles we were on the way again, this time on horseback. A hundred cavalrymen accompanied us. I had not ridden a horse for 15 years. VERA CRUZ, Mexico, May 23.—To anyone who landed with the army it seems as though he had lived in Vera Cruz for many years. He knows it as he konws his home town. He cannot extend his knowledge. To the east extends the Gulf of Mexico, in every other direction his way is blocked by out-guards and patrols. Beyond the outposts he may not go. So, the only escape from Vera Cruz is straight up in the air.

For three weeks I have been seeking permission to escape in that direction. This morning, aided by and abetted by, the flying men of the navy I escaped. From this angle I obtained a very good view of Vera Cruz, but a view you get of it from the back of a slow-moving pony and from the marble-topped table in front of the Diligencias is just as good. At least, so they will satisfy your correspondent for sometime to come.

Mustin Coaches Aviators.

The strategy board of the navy aviators is on the Mississippi, of which Lieutenant Commander Henry Mustin is Captain. With Nerk Bristol he coaches the aviators as at Yale, Walter Camp teaches another dangerous science. Like Camp, Mustin has practiced what he preaches. That he is the mechanical genius who invented the telescope sight used in all turrets on all our guns in our navy is not enough, he has also his masters' tickets as an air pilot and when he sends an aviator aloft to arrest a derelict cloud or photograph heat lightning he is only sending him over the course Mustin has already steered.

Flying Squad Daring.

Under Mustin the actual flying-fish are: J. H. Towers, the only man that ever fell 3000 feet and lived to tell about it; Sauffley of North Carolina, who has had an ancestor serving as an officer in every war in which our country has ever been engaged, and Patrick Ballinger. At present Towers is at Tampico with his wings clipped and at Vera Cruz the "Lehiban No. 1," topside aviator is Pat. Ballinger. In a former existence he was called "Midshipman Easy," "Jack Harkaway," "Charles O'Malley." Still, for a navy hero, Pat. Ballinger is a good name, too. He looks the part. He has a very young face and tanned the color of a McClennan army saddle. His hair is yellow, eyes blue; he is always smiling. The beauty doctors of health, clean thinking and the daily exercise of taking a fall with death, have given him the look of a Greek god and one of Lydendecker's captains. He is much too good to lose. Were he my son, and he is young enough, I would give him a good talking to for taking such risks, and then in order to keep him out of danger, I would make him a paymaster or an admiral.

Sits on "Pie Plate."

The mother ship of the airships is the Mississippi, but their present nesting place is on the beach to the south of the city. They lie on the hard sand guarded by sentries and cared for by a detail of 12 machinists, picked men from the different ships who sleep in open tents and by day live in bathing suits.

There are two hydro-aeroplanes of the Curtiss model. In one you sit in a rowboat and as in a monoplane, can see only the bottom of the rowboat and the distant horison line. In the other you sit on a tin pie-plate and dangle your legs. To obstruct your view of the earth from which you have been so foolish as to take leave, there is nothing.

We choose the one in which the view was least obstructed.

In case of a fall, Ensign Stolz buckled me into an air mattress like the breastplate of a baseball catcher. He said I could swim better without it and besides, with 16 battleships in the harbor, each with launches riding from the boom, we soon would be picked up. But you will be unconscious, said Stolz, they always are.

Ships in Harbor Looked Small.

The machinists in bathing suits shoved us off. Below us was a punt like a decoy boat in which you go duck shooting. It just touched the surface, sending back two waves of spray behind us. The engines roared like motor cars with their mufflers off. So far, it was like a ride in any high-power motorboat.

Apparently with the intention of ramming it, we were pointed at a stone breakwater. We were going very fast, the breakwater was 100 yards away. One of two things must happen, we must stop or someone must remove the breakwater, but young Ballinger had a better idea. He spun his wheel, or pulled a lever, and the punt, dripping and glistening with water, like a duck, rose from the surface and the breakwater sank from beneath us.

We continued to rise. As steadily as an express elevator in a skyscraper building on an imaginary rail, up an invisible staircase we climbed toward the sun. Between my feet I can see the fighting tops of a battleship. Yesterday from the deck, when I had leaned back to look up at them, the white-clad sailors had seemed as far away as to be cut off from the rest of the ship. As the acrobat on the trapeze up under the roof of the circus tent, now we looked down upon them they were as small as eggs in a nest seen from the highest branches of a tree.

Pictures Fleet's Destruction.

For the great New York, the greatest battleship in armament and in tonnage in all the world, we began to feel a certain pity. She was so unwieldly, so helpless. Young Ballinger had just to soar higher and drop a bomb. We pictured a flock of air birds descending like hawks upon those giant battleships. What would avail them their 25 knots an hour while we were moving at 60? Against a descending hail of bombs, of what use their 14-inch guns, their sharpshooting marines? They might as well hope to hit a falling star or a meteor. The marines could bring down the pilot, but not if the bomb fell first.

We were over the Fortress of San Juan spying on her secrets that for 300 years had been hidden by her walls. How the same walls that have survived the bombardment of the warships of America, France and Mexico helped her not at all. Science and the courage of the air pilots and the gasoline motor had laid bare all that had been hidden. It was as though with one hand we had stopped and lifted the roof of a house and had seen what they were preparing for dinner.

Nothing to Grip.

We began to turn towards the land and as the planes tilted I could not discover any good reason why they continued to tilt, they would not spill me into the Caleta Reef. I had been up before and in a monoplane with Tommy Sopwith had sat comfortably in a sort of bathtub and in a Wright biplane. The seat was part of the frame and there had been a brace for your feet and steel stanchions to cling to, and I had clung to it until I squeezed off the paint, but in this hydroplane of Ballinger's there was nothing to grip except the tin pie-plate upon which I sat, so I clung to that. It was like trying to lift yourself with your own boot straps.

I could not complain about it, the 60-horsepower engines made that futile, but appealingly I glanced at Ballinger to get me back on even keel. He only smiled reassuringly, but as he is always smiling that did not help.

Went 70 Miles an Hour.

Afterwards I saw a great many things, but I had other matters to occupy me. The most important was how to balance on a flat frying pan while 500 feet above sea level and while progressing over a city at the rate of 60 miles an hour. I saw our outposts, saw the clouds on the yellow sandhills, saw Ballinger take his trusty right hand from the wheel and point at lines of chicken coops that proved to be wall tents of a two-company post, and I wished he would not. Below us like a colored map lay Vera Cruz, the tower of Benito Juarez no larger than a salt-cellar, the lighthouse no higher than a Grand Army monument. Then again we began to bank and spiral and I decided Vera Cruz was the ugliest city I had ever seen. Ballinger pointed at the beach where lay the other biplanes and where in the surf machinists were waiting for us, little dark spots on the green water, and then at 70 miles an hour we began to sweep towards them, down a great toboggan slide of air—and without as much as splashing our feet, we slid into the harbor.

The men in the bathing suits wanted to know what I thought of it. I was still so scared that I told them. On closer observation and as seen from an open cab, I find Vera Cruz is a beautiful city, but I repeat Pat Ballinger is too valuable to waste. He can serve his native land best by not leaving it.

FEDERAL WILD BIRD LAW DECLARED INVALID

Judge Trieber Holds Birds Are Property of States Which Alone Can Legislate.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., May 23.—Federal Judge Trieber today handed down an opinion declaring the migratory wild bird act passed by Congress in 1912 unconstitutional. Congress, by the act, sought to protect the migratory game in the United States. The Court holds that game, whether migratory or local, is the sole property of the states where found, not in the proprietary sense, but for the benefit of all the people, and that the states alone can enact laws for [illegible]eir protection.

In reply to the contention that the states are powerless to protect the [illegible]ame, the court holds that this does [illegible] justify the courts in extending the [illegible]wers of Congress beyond those grant[illegible] by the constitution, but that the peo[illegible] alone, by an amendment to the Con[illegible]itution, may remedy the defect if it [illegible]ists.

PROF. TAFT YIELDS TO A BRYANESQUE TEMPTATION

Explains Why He Consents to Address Western Yale Club's Meeting.

CINCINNATI, O., May 23.—The Associated Western Yale Clubs, at their meeting today at the Sinton Hotel, decided to hold their next year's convention at Kansas City. These new officers were elected: Irwin Rew, Chicago, president; Porter Hall, Kansas City, vice-president; Paul Leidigh, Kansas City, secretary; D. Sutphin, Cincinnati, assistant secretary; C. E. Lovejoy, Kansas City, treasurer. The annual banquet was held tonight.

"I am only yielding to the Bryanesque temptation to make a speech and object to being given a vote of thanks for it," smilingly declared William H. Taft at the closing session today.

A resolution was adopted thanking Prof. George Adams of the Yale faculty for his address before the convention and Maj. Frank Jones suggested that the names of Prof. Taft and Prof. William Phelps be added, for both had spoken briefly. Yale men applauded when Prof. Taft protested he had merely "yielded to the Bryanesque temptation to make a speech."

BANDITS ESCAPE POSSE, LEAVING STOLEN $1400

Two Bank Robbers Exchange Shots With Pursuers in Six-Hour Battle.

HUGO, Ok., May 23.—Two bandits who robbed the bank of Millerton, Ok., Thursday of $1400, escaped last night from a posse in the mountains, 30 miles northeast of here, and were not killed as first reported.

The posse and the bandits engaged in a 6-hour battle in which more than 200 shots were exchanged. The bandits escaped in the darkness after throwing away a bag contained the stolen funds.

BANK PRESIDENT CHARGED WITH MISUSING FUNDS

Head of Failed Institution at Paris, Ky., Arrested and Gives $50,000 Bond.

LEXINGTON, KY., May 23.—Geo. H. Alexander, until Wednesday president of the George H. Alexander & Co. bank at Paris, Ky., was arrested today on warrants issued by the State Banking Department on three charges, namely, misappropriation of the bank's funds, false entries and swearing falsely to entries on the bank's books.

Bond was furnished by Alexander in $50,000, and his case will be taken up by the Bourbon County grand jury.

Alexander's bank failed Wednesday when the doors were closed by the state Bank Commissioner, who said that bad loans had been made.

A special commissioner so far has discovered that $140,000 of the bank's money is loaned on bad securities.

Alexander has turned over his personal estate to the bank.

MAN UNCONSCIOUS WITH HEAD BETWEEN BED RODS

John Diehle, 23 years old, a butcher, was found unconscious in bed in his room at 4408 Chouteau avenue at 5 p. m. yesterday, with his head pinned between two brass rods running horizontally at the head of the bed.

The owner of the rooming house, who gave the name of Mrs. Finneland, told the police that Diehle went to bed at 10 p. m. Friday, but did not arise at the customary hour yesterday. A maid passing in the hall in the afternoon heard groans from Diehle's room and another roomer crawled through the transom after Diehle failed to answer a knock at his door.

Diehle was taken to the city hospital, where physicians found he was suffering with an infectious wound of the head and neck, caused by continuous rubbing against the brass bars. Diehle was unable to explain how he got his head between the bars.

WHITMAN SAID TO HAVE NOTES BECKER WROTE TO GUNMEN

Missives Cautioned Them Not to "Squeal" and Were to Trap Him if He Went on Stand.

CAME FROM "LEFTY LOUIE"

Rosenberg Instructed Widow to Hand Death-House Evidence to District Attorney.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, May 23.—Anent the suggestion that Charles Becker might have won by going on the witness stand himself, it was developed today that District Attorney Whitman relied on such a move to dispel the last doubt of the existence of the conspiracy which led to the murder of Herman Rosenthal.

With Becker on the witness stand, District Attorney Whitman intended to spring a trap for the former police official which was fashioned last Easter in the deathhouse at Sing Sing prison by "Lefty Louis" Rosenberg, one of the four gunmen. His wife, Lillian, was charged with making certain that the plan of revenge made by the man before he went to the death chair should be carried out.

"Here are some letters I want you to give to the District Attorney, and I want you to tell him the truth," were the instructions given to Mrs. Rosenberg.

Notes Written to Gunmen.

The papers now in possession of the District Attorney are notes, which handwriting experts are prepared to swear were written by Becker. In them the gunmen were cautioned not to "squeal" on the promise that the influence of the Police Lieutenant would gain them freedom.

Mrs. Rosnberg, in her testimony, said that Becker had frequently written notes of "cheer" to the four gunmen and that they had been passed to their cells between the pages of books. But no suggestion was made that the notes had been saved, as the District Attorney wanted to hold them as his biggest cards in the case against Becker.

When the notes were given to Whitman by Mrs. Rosenberg, who took them from Sing Sing with other property belonging to her husband, he carefully compared them with samples of Becker's handwriting. To the casual observer there was no striking similarity in the handwriting, but an apparent effort had been made to disguise the writing.

Evidence Ready for Jury.

Under the magnifying lenses of the experts, who compared the notes with the entries made by Becker on the police blotters, it was said, the writing was identified, as elaborate enlargements were prepared to be used as exhibits before the jury.

While Becker pleaded to be permitted to go on the witness stand, his lawyers, anticipating that the District Attorney had planned to use him as the strongest rivet for the prosecution, insisted against such a move. At the last moment, when Mrs. Becker, John Becker, his brother, and the former Police Lieutenant begged to have him make his own defense, the lawyers flatly refused to allow any of the family to go on the stand.

Becker, undaunted by the blow of his second conviction today took up the preparations for his appeal. He accepted the expressions of sympathy from his friends with the assurance that he believed the Court of Appeals would give him another chance to fight for his life.

Mrs. Becker Renews Her Fight.

Mrs. Becker, though stricken to the heart by the verdict of the jury, bravely fought her sorrow and depression through the night and today she turned from brooding and busied herself to renew her husband's fight for life. Through both his trials, and especially the last, she worked constantly with the lawyers defending her husband. She has a quick and resourceful mind.

Tombs Warden Hanley gave out an interesting sidelight on the stoical attitude of Becker. When Becker returned to the Tombs after the second conviction Hanley expressed sympathy and asked.

"Do you think I had better get a doctor to look you over, Charlie?"

Becker threw his head up and, squaring his shoulders, answered:

"Do you think I need a doctor, Johnny?"

All of the Tombs keepers are loud in their praise of Becker's "nerve." They say that in their experience there they never have seen a man in similar circumstances so self-possessed.

WILL STUDY U. S. SHIPS

WASHINGTON, May 23.—Permission has been given to the Brazilian Government to send three naval officers to the United States to study modern battleships and military matters. They are to report to Admiral Badger, commander in-chief of the Atlantic fleet, on board the Wyoming at Vera Cruz.

This courtesy to foreign military officials is a part of the policy adopted by the United States toward the governments of the South American republics.

HOUSE AGAINST SUFFRAGE

WASHINGTON, May 23.—A suffrage delegation representing college women today urged Chairman Henry of the House Rules Committee to have his committee favorably report a rule to bring up at this session the woman suffrage constitutional amendment already reported by the Judiciary Committee. Mrs. Robert M. La Follette was in the delegation.

Chairman Henry told them the legislative program had been arranged by the Democratic caucus and could not be altered except by further caucus action.

Marquettes and Delmars Win in the Semi-Finals

PART OF CROWD AT BRYAN HILL—DELMAR GAME AT KULAGE PARK....

Contest at One of Big League Parks and Professional Players Will Umpire—Banner for League Winner—Keen Interest in Yesterday's Games.

BIG LEAGUE PLAYERS TO UMPIRE THE GAME

THE final game of the Post-Dispatch Public School Baseball League race, involving the league championship, will be played by the Marquette School and Delmar School teams next Saturday morning. The contest will be arranged at one of St. Louis' big league baseball parks.

As an added feature, two players from one of the St. Louis teams, the Browns or Cardinals, will umpire, giving the schoolboys an opportunity of playing the game in a big league park under the supervision of major league players.

A banner, emblematic of the championship of the league, will be awarded to the winning team, while a special banner will be presented to the school which figures as the runner-up in the race. Gold medals will be presented to the players of the championship team. The teams that won the championship in their respective divisions will also receive their banners next Saturday.

No admission will be charged at the gate. The public is invited to attend.

The championship of the Post-Dispatch Public School Baseball League rests between the Marquette School team of St. Louis and the Delmar School team of University City. These teams earned the right to play in the final games of the league season, next Saturday, by defeating their respective opponents in the semi-final round of the baseball tournament yesterday.

The Marquette team, which had won the championship of the Central Division, defeated the Garfield team, South Side champions, at Athletic Park, by the score of 9 to 3. The Delmar team, which had beaten all its rivals in the West End, eliminated the Bryan Hill team, champions of the North Side, at Kulage's Park, by the score of 7 to 4.

A crowd of 300, mostly students of the contending school teams, saw the Marquette team beat the Garfield team at Athletic Park. The game was rapidly played, Umpire "Red" Roche rushing the teams through nine innings in one hour and 35 minutes.

John Brockschmitt pitched for Marquette, against Raford Knight of Garfield. Each pitcher allowed 11 hits.

Jones Gets First on Error.

An error by Catcher Thompson in the second inning paved the way for Marquette's first run. Knight struck out Jones, the first batter in this inning, but Thompson missed the ball and Jones reached first. Singles by Cannefax and Long filled the bases. Then Knight issued a base on balls to Fox and the first Marquette run was forced over.

The second run came in the third inning, when Broughton singled and stole second and third. He tallied when Knight turned loose a wild pitch. Knight's bad inning was the fourth, when six runs were charged against him.

After one had been retired, Long reached first on an error by Hose. He stole second and third and scored when Thompson threw the ball to left field. Then followed a single by Smith, while Fox was safe when Kruse dropped Mosbacher's throw. Brockschmitt helped his side by hitting a single to left on which Smith scored. A single by Broughton filled the bases and a pass to Reno forced Fox over the plate. Successive singles by Hawthorne and Jones scored three more runs. A fast double play by Mosbacher, Thompson and Mosbacher abruptly ended the scoring.

Garfield Scores in Fifth.

It was not until the fifth that the Garfield boys scored a run. Knight started this inning with a single and advanced on Schemmer's infield demise. He scored on Thompson's single. The Marquette's also got a run in their half of the fifth on Long's single, his steal of second and third and Fox's single.

The second Garfield run came in the seventh inning. With one out, Thompson singled and went to second when Smith missed Jones' throw. He crossed the plate on Branchles' single to center. Knight was responsible for the third and final run for Garfield. He singled in the eighth and went to second when Long fumbled the ball. Knight stole third and scored when Brockschmitt turned loose a wild pitch.

Aside from Brockschmitt's good pitching with men on bases, the feature of the game was the playing of Bryon Jones at third base for the Marquette team.

DELMAR DEFEATS BRYAN HILL TEAM

Weidlich Stars in Box and at Bat—Swords Aids by Hard Hitting.

Though facing a partisan Bryan Hill School demonstration at Kulage Park, the youthful Delmar players outgamed their huskier antagonists and, after taking the pace, in the third inning, led all the way.

Godfrey Weidlich and "Toad" Brasier, the battery of the winning team, naturally come in for a large amount of credit. Both boys filled their roles to perfection.

But three hits were made off Weidlich, none after the second inning. He fanned nine and walked eight, failing to get his drop ball within the bounds prescribed for strikes until the fifth inning. He was keeping it too high and walked five Bryan Hill boys in the first four innings. After settling down strike-outs took the place of walks, reaching the top of his effectiveness in the sixth inning when he retired Ditsch, Flesch and Buechler on strikes.

Huber's Control Good.

In so far as control alone is concerned George Huber outpointed his adversary, passing four and fanning 11. He struck out at least one man in each session and two in the second and third. Huber also showed more animation than the balance of his crew, but bad baserunning nullified his aggressiveness. He twice got caught off base, once in the ninth, with his team four runs to the bad, which is considered the height of bad baseball from the expert's point of view.

The story would hardly be complete without a mention of "Bubbles" Swords, the diminutive meadowman of the winners. "Bubbles" swings a bat as big as himself but he manages to wield it with disaster to his adversaries. He connected for two yesterday and, with a walk, managed to convert them into two runs.

Delmar counted early, a walk to Swords, his steal and singles by Elder and Weidlich were the ingredients for the initial tally. Bryan Hill responded immediately and Niehaus' double, Teas' infield out and Huber's safety knotted the count.

Both counted again in the second, Delmar annexing a solitaire on Baker's walk and steal and Swords' solid single. Bryan Hill took the lead in their half of the second with a pair of counts, though the ball did not go out of the infield. Engeln was safe when his pop fly fell unmolested. Dietsch and Flesch paraded, filling the bases. Buechler tapped to Elder, who erred, permitting Engeln and Dietsch to score. Simpson then fanned, the first of three times, Niehaus forced Buechler at third and Teas tappped to Weidlich for the third out.

Delmar Tallies Two More.

Delmar made the third inning the joy ride, counting two runs on Elder's single, Weidlich's double and Pannell's single. In between hits Huber was effective as he compelled one man to pop to him and fanned the other pair. Delmar rested in the fourth, but in the fifth another pair of runs was added. Weidlich singled and took second on a passed ball. After two were retired Baker and White each received a life on errors by Flesch and Hall. Rathert's single and Swords' near-triple counted the last. Swords cut second and though his triple sent Rathert home, the youngster had his drive curtailed.

After the second inning Bryan Hill's runs were scarce as aged aviators. There was a string of zeros until the ninth when the conquered aggregation closed books. With Dietsch down, Flesch accepted his third walk and stole second. Buechler also paraded and Flesch scored on a wild pitch. Simpson ended the fray with an infield tap.

RIVAL SUBURBS AT WAR IN FIGHT ON CUPPLES CHURCH

University Heights Residents Oppose Congregation of Parkview Folks.

ARCHITECTURE INVOLVED

Objectors Say It Could Not Resemble Two Lewis Buildings as Required.

University Heights residents, who have carried into court their fight against the building of the projected Cupples Memorial Methodist Church South, most of whose members are residents of the rival residence suburb of Parkview, have risen to an architectural point of order. They contend, and will try to persuade the Court, that it is impossible to build a church which shall be "similar in character and appearance," at one and the same time, to the French Renaissance architecture of the Woman's Magazine Building and the Egyptian architecture of the Woman's National Daily building. The restrictions of the locality, they declare, require this seeming impossibility.

Circuit Judge McElhinney announced yesterday that he would take the case under advisement for an indefinite period and asked that briefs be submitted by both sides, after a hearing Friday at Clayton.

Former Judge Henry S. Caulfield, representing the Parkview faction which is trying to erect a gray stone church of English type at the corner of Washington and Trinity avenues, University City, says this structure would be similar in character and appearance to both the aforementioned structure of the St. Louis suburb. The church site is within two blocks of them.

S. T. G. Smith, representing six plaintiffs of University Heights, who are seeking an injunction on the ground that building restrictions are being violated, told Judge McElhinney that the proposed church would not conform in appearance to them. Smith also alleged that the right to construct any edifice except a residence lapsed when the University Heights Development Co. became insolvent some years ago.

Women Stay All Day.

Interest is so intense that a score women from University Heights remained in Clayton and dined at a rathskeller while Judge McElhinney declared a recess, Friday, rather than miss any of the testimony by going home for luncheon.

The injunction is sought in the names of Mrs. Adele M. Karst, Mrs. Susan P. Butts, Mrs. Antoinette G. Weidlich, Mrs. Ellen M. Kohler, Theresa Schall and Wilson H. Rowley, all owners of homes in the block on which the edifice is proposed.

Under the original stipulation filed by the corporation owning the lots in this block, it was set forth that lots should be devoted to residences costing not less than $5000 to erect, and that no such structure should extend within sixty feet of the building line. An exception was made in regard to lots 7, 8, 17, 18 and 19, on which it was stipulated a building might be erected similar in character and appearance to the French and Egyptian style publishing buildings nearby. It was provided further that in the event this plan was abandoned, the lots should be used only for residences.

Right for Church Given.

In 1909, according to the testimony before Judge McElhinney, the church congregation obtained a deed from the University Heights Development Co., of which E. G. Lewis, founder of University City, was president, conferring the right to erect a church edifice on lots 18 and 19. Caulfield represented that the congregation proposed to spend more than $150,000 on this structure, for which an excavation has been made. Smith offered testimony, through the plaintiffs, that the excavation extends within two and one-half feet of Washington boulevard and is flush with the sidewalk line of Trinity avenue, although residences are not permitted within sixty feet of the Washington boulevard line and thirty-five feet of the Trinity avenue sidewalk.

Rowley testified that the erection of the church would damage property in the immediate vicinity from 25 to 50 per cent, in proportion to its proximity. His own home is two lots west of the proposed church, and he testified that he would be substantially damaged, in that the church would obstruct his light and cut off the view both to and from his home.

Efforts by Smith to introduce, through witnesses, an old advertisement issued by Lewis, depicting a plan to erect a bank and library structure on the block, were overruled by Judge McElhinney, on the ground that such testimony was merely hearsay evidence.

Although no temporary injunction has been issued, progress on the work has been stopped pending the outcome of the suit.

RIVER IS SEARCHED IN VAIN FOR BODY OF BOY BALLOONIST

Youth Lost Life While Making Ascension Before Large Crowd at Alton.

SIGNAL PISTOL FAILED

Failure of Employer to Find Policeman With Revolver Soon Enough Caused Death.

Dynamite will be used today in an effort to find the body of Robert Voellmer, 18 years old, of Luxemburg, St. Louis County, who, making his second flight with a hot-air balloon and parachute, dropped into the Mississippi River at Alton Friday evening and was drowned in two feet of water, the folds of the collapsing bag smothering him beneath the surface.

His failure to save himself by cutting loose the parachute was ascribed to his literal obedience to the directions of his employer, Thomas Cowan, a professional parachute jumper. As hot-air balloons have only a limited lifting capacity Cowan instructed the tyro aeronaut that a revolver shot from the ground would be the signal that he had ascended as high as was safe and that he shoudl release the parachute.

When the balloon was approximately 500 feet in the air, Cowan raised his pistol and pulled the trigger. The cartridge missed fire. He snapped the hammer again and again, but there was no report. In alarm, he and his wife, followed by many spectators who sensed peril in the failure of the revolver to fire, ran through the streets in search of a policeman in order to ask him to give the signal.

Report of Pistol Too Late.

The balloon, having exhausted its motive powers and being at the mercy of the winds, began drifting towards the bluffs overtowering the river. Still the youth, clinging to his swing and presumably waiting for the promised pistol shot, made no effort to save himself by freeing the parachute, so far as the beholders could judge.

When a policeman was at last found and persuaded to fire his revolver, the balloon was already far out over the river and was staggering in the air towards Maple Island. Whether the report at that distance was heard by the boy aeronaut is not known, but it produced no movement of the parachute. It seemed for a few minutes that the bag, which was visibly shrinking as the hot air it contained cooled, would drop on Maple Island, but a gust veered it 100 yards or more away.

The balloon was falling steadily towards the river, above midstream. Voellmer, when last seen, was still upon the trapeze bar. As he struck the water the fabric of the balloon settled over him like the walls of a collapsing tent.

First Flight Wednesday.

The crew of a United States launch was the first to reach the half-submerged air bag. They had already searched the folds of the balloon and found no sign of the aeronaut when Cowan arrived in a skiff.

Cowan had the balloon concession at the Moose Lodge Carnival, which was held during the week at Feldwisch's Grove, about a mile inland from Alton. His sunset flights each day were seen not only by throngs in the grove, but by thousands who filled the housetops and hills of the city.

Voellmer was allowed to take his first flight Wednesday evening. His ascension and parachute drop were so successful that he obtained permission to repeat the feat two days later. The search for his body, in which many Alton launch and skiff owners joined, continued without intermission from Friday evening until late last night.

About two weeks ago Cowan, who was preparing for an ascension in South St. Louis, called to a youth in the crowd to help him dig a trench. The boy showed such interest that Cowan offered him a job and took him along to Alton. He knew him only as "Bob." After his helper's death, Cowan found in his belongings a clipping showing that his name was Robert Voellmer and that his father killed himself three months ago at their home, 3614 Risch avenue, Luxemburg.

HERTENSTEIN IS MADE INTERNATIONAL OFFICER

President of Local Typo Union Selected for First Vice-President by Board.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., May 23.—Charles Hertenstein of St. Louis, president of Typographical Union No. 8, was appointed today to the position of first vice-president of the International Typographical Union by President James M. Duncan, John W. Hays, secretary-treasurer, and Hugo Miller second vice-president, composing the Executive Board.

The appointment was made necessary by the resignation some time ago of James M. Lynch, as president, to become Commissioner of Labor of New York, and the elevation of Duncan from first vice-president. Hertenstein will hold office until November, when the union's officers elected in May, will take office.

SHOE PLANT HEAD DIES

Heart Disease Is Given as Cause of Sudden Taking Off.

E. F. Spalsbury, superintendent of the Brown Shoe Co.'s plant at 1201 Russell avenue, dropped dead at 1 p. m. yesterday while looking at an automobile in the salesroom of the Overland Automobile Co., 2307 Locust street.

He was accompanied by George Moeyer of the sales department of the Brown Shoe Co., who summoned a physician. The doctor said death had probably been caused by heart disease. The body was taken to the morgue. Spalsbury was 60 years old and lived at 3654 Juniata street.

MISSING PASTOR WHO SAYS HE WAS KIDNAPED

REV. LOUIS R. PATMOUNT.

Missing Leader of Drys Unable to Walk When Found

bore livid marks made by the ropes. After he had been bathed and had eaten, he was able to limp about, and to tell his story.

eHe said that, on the evening of his disappearance, four men attacked him as he was walking near the railroad track, and that after beating him over the head with a sandbag, they flung him on a handcar and ran the car a mile or two out of town. There, he said they bound and gagged him, put him in an automobile, and took him, on a ride lasting most of the night, to a house, he does not know where, and imprisoned him in the cellar. His captors, he said, were two Italians and two large men whom he thought to be Americans.

"In that cellar," he declared, "I lost all account of time. Much of the time I was unconscious from being beaten on the head, or from ether, chloroform and other stupefying drugs.

"The cellar was entered by a ladder. When I was first put there, my shoes were taken away and I was soon barefoot in that damp, unwholesome place. Bread and butter were usually placed there, but sometimes the only food was bananas, most of them decayed. I never had a warm article of food or a cup of coffee.

"Water was lowered to me in a beer bucket. I was told that if I made any attempt to call for help the house would be burned over my head.

"I never gave up hope. The night I was carried away I managed to get a little piece of lead, a fish sinker, that was in the auto, and I scrawled on a piece of paper from a memorandum book in my pocket the words 'Follow the auto.' I dropped that from the machine as we passed through some town. I thought that might bring help, but it didn't.

"When at last they took me out and started me away in the auto they drugged and beat me so that I could have no sense of time or direction. Early this morning they took me out to the lonely log house and left me tied, with the gunny sack fastened over my head by a wire twisted about my neck.

"They repeated the threat about burning the house if I made an outcry. I thought it likely they would do it, but I concluded they were about to kill me anyway, so when I heard strange voices in the field nearby, I called as loud as I could and, thank God, they heard me. If I had been compelled to remain in that house tonight I believe I would have been burned to death.

When he remonstrated with his captors, he said, they would tell him that he was getting what was "coming to" him and that if he made any trouble they would "get" him "for good." No attempt was made, so far as has been reported, to extort any ransom from Patmont's friends, and he believes the treatment given to him was solely as a punishment for his anti-liquor activity.

Sack Kept Over His Head.

He said that, for a part of the time, he was not tightly blindfolded, and that he was able to see through the gunny-sack, which was kept over his head. At these times, he said, he could see his captors dimly, and he believed he could identify two of them. He would know all their voices, he said. As many as two of the men have been with him all the time, he said, and sometimes they seemed to change.

State's Attorney Reichenbach of Monroe County was notified and went from Waterloo to Columbia and saw Patmont. He said last night that he was convinced the man's startling story was true, and that he would do all he could to punish the kidnapers for so much of their offense as was committed within Monroe County.

Sheriff Mulconnery of St. Clair County went to Columbia and consulted with the authorities there about the case.

Patmont is 30 years old, and a native of Russia. His church work has been among Polish-American people. He has a wife and two children in Milwaukee. A week before his disappearance from Westville he wrote a letter, which was found later, saying that threats to kidnap him had been made and asking that, in case these threats should be carried out, "some faithful follower of Christ" would care for his family. The family had lately given him up for dead.

SENATOR BRADLEY DEAD; HIS END WAS HASTENED BY FALL

Kentucky Republican Succumbs at Washington After Long Illness.

WASHINGTON, May 23.—William O. Bradley, Republican United States Senator from Kentucky, died here at 9:45 p. m., after a long illness, aggravated by a fall.

Two weeks ago Senator Bradley made a speech against the tolls repeal bill and was on his feet several hours. He was never well after that. Last week he fell in hurrying to catch a street car and bruised his head, broke his collar bone, but he got up and was in the Senate this week. The cause of his death was acute bladder trouble.

A Democrat, it is believed now, will succeed Senator Bradley. After June 16 the Governor of Kentucky will have the power to appoint a man to fill the unexpired term. Representative Stanley, former Gov. Beckham and Gov. McCreary are said to be candidates for the Democratic nomination for his seat.

Senator Bradley's home was in Beechmont, a suburb of Louisville. He was born near Lancaster, Ky., March 18, 1847. At the age of 14 he ran away from home to join the Union army twice, but because of his youth was taken from the army by his father.

He was licensed to practice law by a special act of the Legislature when 18 years old, provided he was found competent by two Circuit Judges. He long had been prominent in Kentucky politics. He received 105 votes for Vice-President in the national convention of 1888. In 1889 he was appointed Minister to Korea, but declined. He was elected Governor in 1895 by a plurality of 8912. The Legislature, which had a Democratic majority of eight, elected him to the United States Senate in February, 1908. He was noted as a speaker.

Senator Bradley's term would have expired in March, 1915. Recently he announced he would not be a candidate again, because of his ill health.

Senator Bradley's body will be taken Monday to Frankfort, Ky., where funeral services will be held Tuesday afternoon from the home of his daughter, Mrs. John G. South. The body will be accompanied by committees from both houses of Congress to be appointed by Vice-President Marshall and by Speaker Clark.

DEBATE BEGUN ON ANTI-TRUST BILLS IN HOUSE

Labor to Stage Its Fight Tuesday or Wednesday for Exemption Under Sherman Law.

PRESIDENT WANTS ACTION

Insists All Commercial Legislation Outlined Be Put Through Before Adjournment.

By Wire From the Washington Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, May 23.—The House this afternoon began general debate on the administration's anti-trust bill. The big fight on the bill is scheduled for next Tuesday or Wednesday, when the amendment exempting labor unions from the operations of the Sherman law will be offered.

Frank Morrison, secretary of the American Federation of Labor, has taken charge of the campaign in the absence of President Gompers. Morrison and half a dozen lesser lights in the labor world spent the afternoon in the gallery.

Labor organization representatives on the floor are working overtime in an attempt to induce a majority of Democrats to desert the President and vote for the amendment, while the labor members have announced for publication that they expect to have a majority in favor of the amendment, the House leaders have counted noses and are sanguine that a majority of the Democrats propose to follow President Wilson and vote against the amendment.

Threats From Labor Bodies.

Many communications from labor organizations insinuate that the members who vote against the amendment will be opposed by the labor organizations in the November elections. The Senate committee has agreed also to give a further hearing on the trade commission bill, Wednesday, when representatives of the Chicago trade associations will appear.

That the President will be satisfied President Wilson will be satisfied with nothing less than the passage through both houses of Congress at the present session of the anti-trust legislation recently agreed upon, was made clear today by officials close to the administration.

It was said at the White House the President is firmly of the opinion that anti-trust legislation should be enacted at this session and is not willing to make any compromise which might endanger the program determined upon by the House Democratic caucus.

Dyer Asks for Delay.

A plea that the writing of the anti-trust program into law be delayed until next session, or, if possible, until the next Congress, was made by Representative Dyer of Missouri in the debate on the Clayton bill.

"I am in favor of many of the provisions of this bill," he said, "but owing to the present conditions of business throughout the country I believe it ought to be left to the next session or until the next Congress before being enacted into law. Business conditions now existing, I believe call for this delay."

Representative Floyd of Arkansas, a member of the Judiciary Subcommittee which framed the Clayton bill, vigorously supported the measure and urged Democrats, Republicans and Progressives to vote for it. He particularly defended the section of the bill legalizing the existence and operation of labor and agricultural unions, declaring it was what labor leaders had asked for.

Republican for Trade Commission.

Representative Nelson of Wisconsin, Republican member of the Judiciary Committee, said that while he would support the administration trade commission bill, he was opposed to the Clayton measure. He reviewed the bill in detail and declared it would weaken the Sherman anti-trust law and would leave the enforcement of the law entirely in the hands of the Attorney-General instead of making it self-enforcing.

The bill, he insisted, would not dissolve holding companies now organized. In forbidding interlocking direstorates he contended, the measure did not reach the root of the evil, but would permit common stock ownership of pseudo-competing corporations to stifle competition.

$19,700,000 AGRICULTURAL BILL PASSED BY SENATE

Smoot Calls Measure Bad and Said on Separate Vote Amendments, Would Have Failed.

WASHINGTON, May 23.—The Senate tonight passed the agricultural appropriation bill which it received from committee nearly a month ago. It carries about $19,700,000 a little more than the House provided. Before its passage tonight Senator Smooth criticised it as a particularly bad measure. He declared if some of the amendments in the bill had come before the Senate in separate form, not ten Senators would have voted for them.

The bill will go to conference at once and on Monday the Senate, after its usual tolls debate, will take up the naval appropriation bill.

Although Democratic leaders expect some debate on the two battleship provision and on other features, they do no believe it will take more than ten days to reach a vote.

The bill carries no provision for cooperation between the Rockefeller Education Board and the Government in eliminating the boll weevil.

ROOSEVELT SEEKS MORE REST; SOFT PEDAL ON POLITICS

Visitors at Sagamore Hill Only Reiterate Progressives and G. O. P. Will Not Unite.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

OYSTER BAY, N. Y., May 23.—Progressive pilgrims continued to make their way to the shrine on Sagamore Hill today. What tidings they took to the oracle cannot be told; but they came from various directions.

First was Theodore Douglas Robbinson, New York State chairman. Probably there was a little conversation about grandchildren mixed up with politics in this instance, for he is Mr. Roosevelt's nephew.

Then came James A. Garfield, ex-tennis "opponent" and likewise ex-Secretary of the Interior. There might have been a few remarks about the efficiency of the McLaughlin brand of swift service interspersed with conditions in Ohio. But all the outsiders could learn was this, coming from "Jimmie:" "There is no chance of an amalgamation between the Progressives and the Republicans out our way.

Mr. Garfield brought with him from the Middle West Arthur L. Garford, a rich automobile builder, who is by way of recreation a Progressive leader in Ohio. He did not have anything to say after his talk with the big chief.

Then there was Regis H. Post of Babylon, L. I., who used to be Governor of Porto Rico. He, too, had no news.

All that the Colonel had to say was this: "I wish I could get away from talking politics until after I return from Spain, where I'm going for Kermit's wedding. I don't want to talk politics even then, if I can help it. I like to have about six weeks off to rest up and go over the manuscript and proofs of my book on the Brazilian expedition. I'm going to try to get that rest and keep away from politics."

At this there was a faint smile upon the countenance of some hearers who have known Col. Roosevelt for a few years and know how likely he is to refrain from talking politics.

There being not a great lot else to do today, dopesters in the village began to figure on the possible Progressive ticket in this State next fall. The candidacy for United States Senator was unanimously given to Oscar S. Straus, who made the unsuccessful canvass for Governor last time and who was Ambassador to Turkey and then Secretary of Commerce and Labor under the Colonel.

That sounded plausible enough. But the six-months-in-advance predictions as to the gubernatorial prospects sounded rather foolish, for they took in everybody from Bourke Cockran to Yousef Zollinger.

Colonel Will Lecture on Brazilian Trip Before Geographic Society.

WASHINGTON, May 23.—Plans for Col. Roosevelt's lecture Tuesday before the National Geographic Society on his recent tour of exploration in Brazil, were completed today. They provide for eight hours' stay in the capital into which will be crowded the Colonel's lecture, his first glimpse of his African trophies in the National Museum, a private dinner at a downtown hotel with a few friends, for which all political significance is disclaimed by its managers; and an opportunity for any one to ask him about his newly discovered river.

The Colonel plans to arrive from New York at 3:20 o'clock Tuesday afternoon and depart at midnight. George K. Cherry, Leo E. Miller and Anthony Fiala, members of his staff on the Brazilian trip, will accompany the Colonel. A special police escort will be detailed to accompany him while here.

L. D. DOZIER, PROMOTER OF AVIATION, IS DEAD

Manufacturer Who Was on World's Fair Committee Had Retired From Business.

Lewis D. Dozier, former president of the Aero Club of St. Louis and a director of the National Biscuit Co. and the Mercantile Trust Co., died at his home, 10 Westmoreland place, at 2:25 a. m. yesterday, at the age of 68. A son, L. D. Dozier Jr., and a daughter, Miss Eleanor Dozier, survive him.

"Bud" Dozier, as he was known to thousands of St. Louisans, was born in St. Charles and reared in St. Louis. He was for many years prominent in the business world. After his retirement from active business he spent much time in travel. He was a member of the Executive Committee of the World's Fair. He did a great deal to promote aviation from 1907 to 1910. He was on the Board of Trustees of the Ranken School of Mechanical Trades.

The funeral will take place at 9:30 tomorrow morning from St. Peter's Episcopal Church, Spring avenue and Lindell boulevard.

SENATORS WOULD REFUSE ROCKEFELLER'S MONEY

Lane Says It Would Exterminate Boll Weevil if Used as It Was on Colorado.

WASHINGTON, May 23.—"If the money of Rockefeller was used on the boll weevil as effectively as on the wives and children of the miners in Colorado," declared Senator Lane of Oregon, on the floor of the Senate today, "undoubtedly it would exterminate the boll weevil."

The occasion was a heated debate over the acceptance of Rockefeller's money, in the shape of a contribution from the General Education Board, for the aid of farming and the extermination of the boll weevil in the South.

Senator West of Georgia said the Rockefeller money might be obtained in ways that would not bear the light of day, but that his money would do good once it was received in the South. Henry M. Flagler obtained his money in ways similar to Rockefeller, being associated with him in business," said Senator West, "but if Florida had to erect monuments to two men, he would probably be one of them." Senator Lane told the Senate how these women and children in Colorado, who had crawled into a pit, were suffocated through the fire started by the mine guards.

"It is such little things as this that have upset the stomach of the American people," continued Senator Lane, "and have made them unwilling to enter into a partnership with John D. Rockefeller."

BOAT CLUB GIVES FROLIC

May Festival for Children Is Followed by Dance.

The annual May Festival of the Century Boat Club was given on the club's grounds, 5500 South Broadway, yesterday afternoon, from 2:30 to 6 o'clock.

Most of the afternoon was taken up with games for the youngsters, consisting of foot races, drills, potato races, three-legged races, flag races and hop-step-and-jump races. These races were for both the boys and girls, and prizes were awarded to the winners. At 6 o'clock dinner was served to the members and their 200 guests, who came for the dance which followed.

WATCHMAN FINDS BODY OF MAN FLOATING IN RIVER

The body of a man was found floating in the river at the foot of Cherokee street yesterday by John Delohe, 3446 South Broadway, a watchman employed at the United States Arsenal.

The man appeared to be about 45 years old, weighed 145 pounds, was dressed in a dark suit and had a red mustache. In a pocket was found a card bearing the name of Stanislaw Werner, a barber, of 907 O'Fallon street and a train check on the Chicago & Alton, dated May 4, from Chicago to Granite City.

STEAMER RETURNS WITH CONVENTION FROM KEOKUK TRIP

Mayor Kiel Leads Crowd in Singing Old Songs and Gives Encores Until Tired.

The floating convention of the Missouri Public Utilities Association, which was held on the Mississippi River beginning Thursday noon, returned on the steamer Quincy at 5:30 p. m. yesterday from Keokuk, Io., where the delegates inspected the dam and hydro-electric plant.

The trip was arranged by the association members, who represent various public service corporations, such as the United Railways and the Union Electric Light and Power Co. The expenses of the trip were paid by the delegates, who had as guests a number of city officials.

Among the guests were Mayor Kiel and his family, President Kinsey of the Board of Public Improvements, Water Commissioner Wall, Sewer Commissioner Hooke, Street Commissioner Talbert and Harbor and Wharf Commissioner Hellmich.

Convention Sessions on Boat.

The convention sessions were all held on board the boat. At the annual election of officers Saturday morning, A. C. Einstein, vice-president and general manager of the Union Electric Light and Power Co., and acting president of the association, was elected president; G. E. Hayler of St. Joseph, first vice-president; J. R. Woodfill of Aurora, second vice-president; Hugo Wurdack of St. Louis, third vice-president, and F. D. Beardslee of St. Louis, secretary-treasurer. Two new members elected to the Executive Committee are J. W. Van Brunt of St. Joseph, and J. M. Scott of Kansas City. S. W. Henderson of Excelsior Springs, and Herman Spoehrer of St. Louis were re-elected to the committee. The president of the association acts as chairman.

Friday the name was changed from the "Missouri Electric, Gas, Street Railway and Water Works Association" to the "Missouri Public Utilities Association," and the constitution broadened so as to extend the association's activities.

The convention next year will be held on a boat which will go either to Jefferson City or down the Mississippi.

Delegates Sit Up All Night.

Shortly after midnight Friday the Quincy left Keokuk, after a dance was given on board for Keokuk citizens. Since the Quincy was scheduled to stop near Hannibal, Mo., at 5 a. m. to allow the delegates to visit a cave made famous by Mark Twain in "Tom Sawyer," a number sat up for the rest of the night.

Bruce Cameron and Richard McCulloch of the United Railways, who managed to get a few hours' sleep, directed the entire party to the cave and also acted as "masters of amusements" on the entire trip.

"NAKED TRUTH" MEMORIAL TO BE UNVEILED TODAY

Monument Designed in Honor of Three Eminent German-American Editors.

MAYOR KIEL TO SPEAK

Misses Busch, Granddaughters of Man Who Inspired It, to Draw the Curtains.

"Naked Truth," the symbolic monument to the memory of Emil Preetorius, Carl Schurz and Carl Daenzer, German editors of St. Louis, which was designed by Herr Wandschneider, Berlin sculptor, will be unveiled in Reservoir Park this afternoon by the Misses Clara and Marie Busch, granddaughters of the late Adolphus Busch, multimillionaire brewer, who donated $20,000 of the $30,000 fund for the monument.

The statue, which recently arrived from Germany, has been placed on its foundation. The monument will be dedicated to the City of St. Louis. Addresses will be made this afternoon in both German and English and several German musical organizations will take part in the program. Dr. H. M. Starkloff, president of the Preetorius-Schurz-Daenzer Memorial Association, under whose auspices the ceremony will be held, will speak in German. Mayor Kiel will give the formal oration in acceptance, and Edwin C. Kehr and Congressman Richard Bartholdt will speak in English.

Busch Girls to Unveil It.

The program will open with an overture by Fred Schillinger's orchestra, followed by the "Shepherd Sunday Song" by a chorus of the United Singing Societies under the direction of Hugo Anshuetz.

Following Dr. Starkloff's address the monument will be unveiled by the Misses Busch. Floral wreaths will be placed upon the memorial and the formal presentation to the city made.

The memorial to the three great German editors was suggested by the late Adolphus Busch about five years ago to mark the inspiration of American ideals the German-born citizens of this country received through the lives of Preetorius, Schurz and Daenzer. Subsequently the memorial association was formed.

Carl Schurz was Senator from Missouri, served in the United States Army as Brigadier-General, served as Ambassador to Spain and as Minister of the Interior. He was identified with the civil service reform movement and was a noted editor and journalist.

Ten Sculptors Submitted Desgns.

Carl Daenzer published the Anzeiger des Westens, which later amalgamated with the Westliche Post. He returned to Germany, where he died. Carl Schurz and Emil Preetorius were the proprietors of the Westliche Post. Carl L. Schurz of New York, son of the noted editor, will attend the unveiling. Edward L. Preetorius, son of Emil Preetorius, resides in St. Louis and is president of the German-American Press Association.

Ten sculptors of note submitted designs for the monument. The subcommittee accepted Prof. Wilhelm Wandschneider's model, "Naked Truth." This design shows a naked woman sitting in front of a marble background, divided into three panels, each labeled with the name of one of the editors. On the Preetorius panel is a figure to represent Europe seated on a swimming bull and typifies beauty and culture crossing the ocean on power and strength. The Schurz panel shows a figure of St. George, representing the fight against baser instincts, and the Daenzer panel shows a relief of Pegasus, symbolizing the flight of genius. On either side are torches representing Europe and America lighting the world with culture. The "Naked Truth" symbolizes the journalistic work of the German editors.

Ten Sculptors Submitted Designs.

After the subcommittee had made the award and the sculptor had sailed for America, the entire committee met and objections were raised to the naked figure, which resulted in the design being rejected. When the sculptor and his wife reached America and learned that the design had not been finally accepted as they supposed they were greatly surprised. It was said that Busch objected on the ground that the design did not properly represent the characters of the men whose memory it was in honor of.

Another committee was selected by the memorial association and they finally decided to accept the monument. The association then held a meeting and voted to uphold the decision of the committee. This resulted in the resignation of Dr. Frederick Kolbenheyer as chairman of the Memorial Committee, after he had denounced the action of the association.

JEWISH HOME FOR INVALIDS WILL BE DEDICATED TODAY

Group of Four Buildings on the Fee-Fee Road Erected at a Cost of $100,000.

100 PATIENTS CAPACITY

Shoenberg Memorial Building Will Be Used for the Advanced Tubercular Cases.

The Jewish Home for Chronic Invalids on the Fee-Fee road, north of the Creve Coeur car line, which has been erected at a cost exceeding $100,000, will be dedicated at 2:30 p. m. today.

The opening prayer will be offered by Rabbi Spitz, followed by an address by Rabbi Sale. M. Shoenberg, J. D. Goldman and Louis Renard will speak. The services will end with an address by Rabbi Harrison and prayer by Rabbi Thurman. There will be musical numbers on the program.

The home, which will be devoted to both chronic invalids and tubercular patients, is a plant of four buildings of the latest hospital type.

In the two-story administration building will be the offices, kitchen, dining room, laundry and heating plant. Ramps have been put in instead of interior stairways for the use of invalids. Electric announcers have been installed for the use of patients in calling nurses. The interior of the building is finished in white and the exterior in red brick.

Shoenberg Memorial.

One hundred feet to the south is the Shoenberg Memorial, erected by Mose and Louis D. Shoenberg in memory of their parents. It is a fireproof structure, which will be used for the advanced tubercular patients. All the rooms in the building are open-air rooms, with means of closing by glass in case of snow or rain. A tunnel connects this building with the administration building, so that patients may pass from one to the other in bad weather without exposure.

There are two cottages for the incipient and tubercular patients, one for men and one for women. They are so constructed that the patients are bathed in air day and night.

Dr. Milton Schaie, graduate of the Columbia Medical School and formerly assistant superintendent of the Montefiore Home Country Sanitarium, Bedford Hills, N. Y., will be the medical director of the home. Miss E. S. Kaplan, formerly head nurse of the National Jewish Hospital at Denver, Colo., will be a superintendent.

Built for Hundred Patients.

The home was built for 100 patients, but only about 40 will be accommodated the first year.

The Associated Jewish Charities has made an appropriation of $25,000 a year for the maintenance of the institution, but it is expected by the board of directors that additional contributions will be necessary.

Mose Shoenberg was chairman of the Building Committee and Will Levy the architect. The officers of the home are: Louis Renard, president; Emil Nathan, first vice-president; Mrs. L. P. Rothschild, second vice-president; Mrs. M. Shoenberg, treasurer; Mrs. Jacob Friedman, secretary.

$10,000 A YEAR FAILS TO MEET GIRL'S NEEDS

Special Referee Lists Her Expenses and Recommends Allowance of $15,000.

NEW YORK, May 23.—The financial needs of a young woman who has been reared in luxury, who maintains an establishment of her own and is engaged to be married, were set forth in a report filed in the Supreme Court by Frederick I. Lockman, who was appointed referee on an application by Miss Katie Schermerhorn.

The referee reported that Miss Schermerhorn, who is now 18 years old, "has been carefully and expensively nurtured and brought up and has been maintained in elegance and luxury." The referee finds that the $10,000 allowance Miss Schermerhorn has received since 1908 is insufficient and that she should receive $15,000. Her income is $27,000.

Miss Schermerhorn maintains a home at 969 Park avenue, where she lives with a woman companion. She pays $2800 a year rent, $3348 a year as wages to her companion and servants and has an allowance of $50 a month for pin money, making a total of $6468. Her clothing costs between $1200 and $1500 a year, and she entertains frequently at dinners, luncheons and theater parties.

FARMERS MEET AT MEXICO

Dean of College of Agriculture Among Speakers.

MEXICO, Mo., May 23.—The first annual meeting of the Audrain County Farm Bureau was held here today. Fully 1000 farmers were present. Dean F. B. Mumford of the College of Agriculture; J. Kelly Wright, State lecturer of the State Board of Agriculture, and D. H. Doane, farm adviser, spoke. Audrain County Farm Adviser E. W. Rusk read his report, which showed that he had saved the county over $15,000 in his fight on hog cholera. The old officers were re-elected.

They are: President, W. W. Pollock; vice-president, F. L. Crosby; secretary, R. R. Wayne; treasurer, I. T. McCue; directors at large, J. T. Johnson, J. W. Walker, C. P. Arnold.

JUDGE HENRY BOND WOULD REVISE LAW ON ENGLISH LINES

Letter to St. Louis Bar Suggests It Would Expedite Supreme Court Work.

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., May 23.—Judge Henry W. Bond of the Missouri Supreme Court, commenting on proposed changes in the substantive law, in a letter made public today, advocates the adoption of the "English method and procedure as a pattern to be followed as closely as consistent with our constitution."

The letter was written by Judge Bond to the commission appointed by the St. Louis Bar Association to draft proposed changes in the Missouri law of procedure and reviews. The letter follows:

"Mr. James C. Jones, Chairman Committee, St. Louis Bar Association, St. Louis, Mo.:

"Dear Sir—I have not had time to examine all the changes in the substantive law proposed in the printed report of your committee, which has just been received. I feel a keen interest in the adoption of some plan for judicial reform in the trial courts and especially for shortening and simplifying appellate procedure and expediting the work of the Supreme Court and the courts of appeals.

Would Follow English Law.

"It seems to me that it would be wise to adopt, as far as it can be made applicable to our institutions, the present system conducted in England since the judiciary act of 1873. They have accomplished marvelous reforms in their judicial procedure in England and have practically done away with those delays which in less fortunate communities amount to a denial of justice. Personally, I should strongly favor taking the English method of practice and procedure as a type and pattern to be followed as closely as consistent with our Constitution.

"A matter of crying exigency, to my mind, is the necessity for abbreviating the immense records which are sent to this court. If a case could be transmitted here wherein only the pivotal points of law and fact upon which its decision hinged, are set forth in the transcript, or by stipulation of the parties or by a finding and certificate of the trial court under proper limitations, there would, in my judgment, be no delays hereafter in the work of this court.

Would Repeal One Act.

"I think it would be well also to repeal the act of the Legislature relating to a statement by this court of the contents of the records sent here. In the matter of the preparation of their opinions, this court is not bound by that act, for being constitutionally created, it cannot be deprived of any of its essential attributes by the Legislature, still it might be well to do away with the persuasive effect of the act in question. I think it would be well to substitute for it another act, of persuasive effect, requiring this court to deliver no written opinions, beyond making a decretal order, in any case pending here unless a new question is involved or a former decision overruled.

"Other states having similar constitutions to ours construe them to entitle their Supreme Court to dispense with written opinions and write the words affirmed or reversed, with the exception stated above. Of course, this would have a good effect also in relieving the book shelves of the lawyers from many reiterations of A B C law, and it would enable them still to hear from this court any question of novelty or of great importance, or when its previous rulings were reconsidered.

Would Expediate Work.

"If the idea thus suggested could be carried out, this court, I feel confident, would be able to dispose of all its appellate work and keep up with its docket.

"I have jotted these suggestions very hastily for the consideration of your committee. I regard the measure of judicial reform and simplification of procedure as one of the most vital character and trust the Legislature will take it up in that spirit. Yours truly,

"HENRY BOND."

PHOTOGRAPHER TAKES POISON IN UNION STATION

Said He Swallowed Bi-Chloride of Mercury Tablits Because He Was Drunk.

Edward J. O'Connell, a photographer, living at 3971A Cook avenue, took bichloride of mercury at 5 p. m. yesterday at Union Station to end his life.

He reached here from Sedalia at 9 a. m. and hung around the station all day. Late in the afternoon, while walking up and down the Midway, he was seen to drop by passersby. A policeman ran to his assistance and he was taken to the city hospital. He said he had swallowed seven tablets of bichloride of mercury because he was drunk and did not know what he was doing. Doctors hold out hope for his recovery because his stomach was overloaded with food and beer, which would act as an antidote.

$10 GIVEN TO BURY CHILD

Mrs. Mary Ann Walker of 1627 Morgan street, who has been seeking funds to bury her 2-year-old son, who died at the city hospital May 19, has received $10 from Post-Dispatch readers. The hospital authorities have promised to hold the body until tomorrow in the event she can raise sufficient funds for a burial. Otherwise the body will be buried in potters' field.

Those who sent money are "E. S.," who gave $3; "D. M. J.," $1; "C. M. A.," $1, and an anonymous contribution of $5.

207 BIRTHS, 200 DEATHS ARE REPORTED FOR WEEK

Studebaker SIX $1575

At The Head of Its Field in Sales and Volume and Value

Studebaker SIX sales have shot ahead of all others in every State in the Union.

The man who takes time to study values is buying the Studebaker.

He can't do anything else unless he shuts his eyes to stubborn facts.

A Volume greater than that of any other "Six" in America, has resulted in Value greater than that of any other "Six" in America.

What has actually happened is that the Studebaker SIX has fixed a new figure which represents the most that money can buy in a high class car.

Studebaker sales have forged to the head and front because you can't get as much as this SIX gives you, even by paying more.

The Life of a Car

The life of a "Six"—and, of course, its value—depends upon two things.

These two things are, first—

The quality of steel used in its construction; and second—

The number and scientific accuracy of the heat treatments.

In that respect Studebaker SIX construction may possibly be equaled by one or two cars selling for the very highest price.

It is not equaled by any car at anything like its price—or a thousand dollars higher.

Studebaker Special Steels

Studebaker metallurgists and laboratory experts furnish their own formulae for Studebaker steels.

The best that America's mills produce is not good enough.

The steels must be made on special Studebaker specifications.

Then these High Chrome Nickel and High Chrome Vanadium steels must show, under test, an ultimate strength of 150,000 pounds to the square inch.

This is the highest standard known in motor car manufacture—30 per cent higher than the highest average, even in cars costing considerably more.

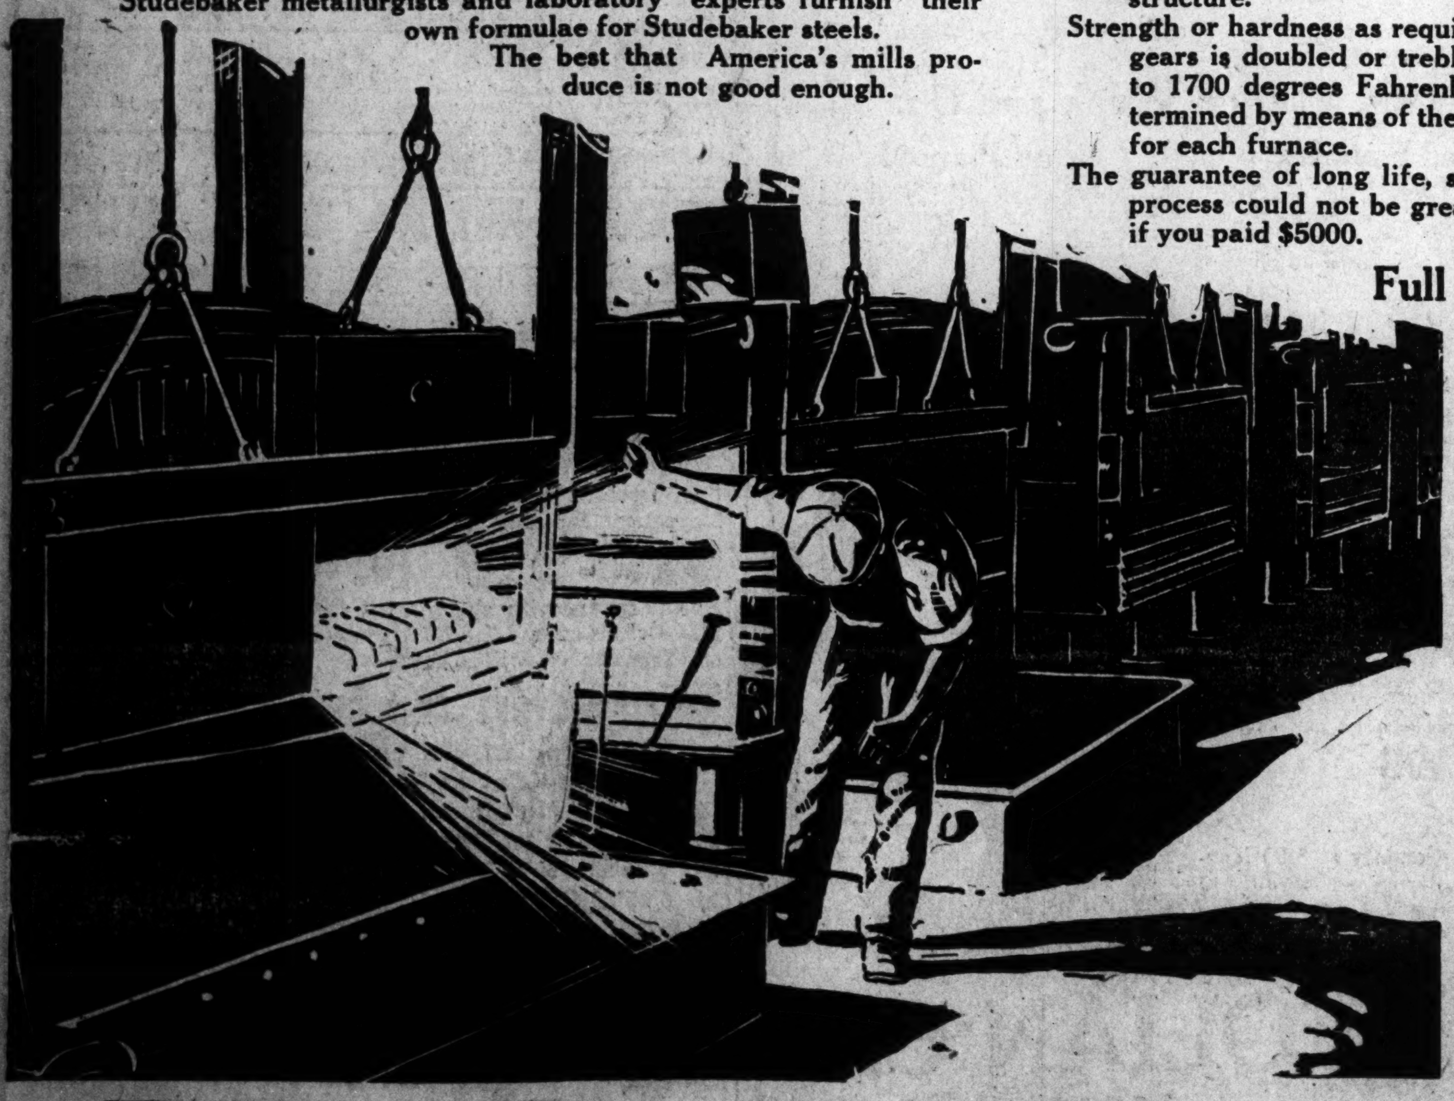
Two to Four Treatments

Having insured this standard, Studebaker steels then receive from two to four heat treatments.

These treatments refine the steel by completely changing its structure.

Strength or hardness as required in axle shafts or camshafts and gears is doubled or trebled by treatments varying from 600 to 1700 degrees Fahrenheit—their intensity accurately determined by means of the scientific pyrometer which registers for each furnace.

The guarantee of long life, safety and value insured by this process could not be greater in any car you could buy, even if you paid $5000.



Full Floating Rear Axle

Not every "Six" has a full floating rear axle.

But every "Six" needs one.

In the interests of safety, in the interests of power transmission—it is indispensable to the truly scientific "Six."

In the Studebaker SIX the axle carries the car.

The shaft only turns the wheels.

It turns freely, in a steel housing—carrying the last ounce of power TO THE WHEELS.

Without a full floating rear axle the best "Six" motor is not at its best, because the efficiency of the one is dependent upon the other.

Full Equipment of Timkens

No "Six"—no matter what price you might pay—is more thoroughly equipped with Timken bearings than the Studebaker.

Even to the hubs of the wheels this SIX is thoroughly Timkenized.

We have equipped with Timkens at every point where friction is possible—at several points overlooked by other "Sixes."

We repeat—you can't buy greater Timken value in any car.

The Starting and Lighting

Let us not mince words in regard to this Studebaker-Wagner starting and lighting system.

We seriously doubt if it has an equal.

We are certain that it has no superior.

Starting trouble is unknown to Studebaker SIX owners.

You won't—because you can't—better it at any price.

Studebaker SIX Demonstration

The Studebaker SIX will sell itself on demonstration alone.

Demonstration would convince you even if you did not know its internal superiority.

If you did not know the close, fine, accurate manufacturing processes—more than 6000 in number—embodied in this SIX.

If you did not know that these processes require the combined action of 5000 separate machines.

If you did not know that accuracy with these machines is carried to the 1-1000 part of an inch in all vital factors of the car.

If you did not know that there are 247 drop forgings in this SIX—more, we believe, than any other car possesses.

If you did not know that we make all parts in our own plants; the magnitude of Studebaker operations permitting the most complete automobile and foundry installation in the world, at the lowest cost per "Six" produced.

If you did not know any of these things, still the magnificent smoothness and superabundant power; the beauty, the ease and the luxury of this Studebaker SIX would convince you that it is indeed the king of all light-weight "Sixes."

PICKPOCKET OUT ON BOND AN HOUR AFTER HIS ARREST

Suspected of Street Car Robberies, but Gets Bail Before Police Land Him in Station.

LIQUOR MAN PROVIDES IT

Chief Allender Complains Common-Law Bond Is His Department's Greatest Handicap.

The activities of friends of "Johnny" Collins, a notorious pickpocket, who has been arrested about fifty times and served one prison term, caused his release on a common law bond one hour after his arrest, Friday, preventing the police, Friday night and yesterday, from following a lead which they believe would have cleared up a series of recent street car robberies, in which passengers were robbed of several thousans of dollars.

Collins was arrested by detectives as he was entering the Municipal Courts building at 4 p. m., and was taken to the Quick Meal Range Co.'s plant, King's highway and Daggett avenue, where he was identified as one of three men who robbed Henry F. Gellerman of 1309 Carroll street, on a Manchester car last Monday evening. The detectives then set out for police headquarters with their prisoner, intending to have other victims of pickpockets attempt to idnetify him.

Liquor Dealer Provides Bond.

In the short time, however, Collins' friends had hurried to his aid, and Samuel Epstein, a liquor dealer and professional bondsman, had provided a common law bond of $1000, and this had been promptly accepted by Judge Benjamin F. Clark of the Court of Criminal Corrections.

When the detectives reached headquarters with their charge there was nothing left for them to do but release Collins immediately, and their plan to "show up" their prisoner to persons who had been robbed recently by pickpockets was precluded. Collins now is under indictment charged with being an habitual pickpocket.

Epstein yesterday admitted to reporters he had signed bond for Collins on several different occasions, but declared in the last case he had done so gratis as a personal favor to one of his customers, who, he said, was a friend of Collins.

Hampers Police, Says Allender.

Chief of Detectives Allender complained that Collins' case offered another demonstration of how the common law bond statute could seriously hamper the police. He declared it to be the greatest handicap with which his department has to contend.

When pickpockets are arrested and immediately released on common law bonds, he explained, they do not appear in court until several days later, which gives them time to change their dress and appearance completely. Their victim, he said, whom the police and detectives gather together in the meantime, consequently are unable to make positive identifications and convictions are rare.

The Gellerman robbery was one of several on street cars, last Monday, in the same vicinity, and three more were added, Friday evening, to the long list reported in the last several weeks.

LOOTED COMPANY GETS PERMIT TO BORROW CASH

State Commission to Supervise San Francisco Corporations, President "Plundered."

SAN FRANCISCO, May 23.—Asserting that its order was made necessary by the "plundering" of the United Railroads of San Francisco of upwards of $1,000,000 by the corporation's former president, Patrick Calhoun, on the authorization of directors and stockholders, the California Railroad Commission gave reluctant consent today to the borrowing of more money by the company for the purchase of rolling stock.

The commission instructed the company to report each move made in carrying out the order, advised that dividends should be suspended, announced that because the same stockholders who had authorized the diversion of the company funds were still in control it would hereafter supervise the financial operations of the management.

Calhoun, the commission report says, withdrew in 1913 $1,096,000 ostensibly for investment in shares of the Selano Irrigated Farms, a land selling project, which afterward collapsed. The commission says, however, it has no proof that the money ever went into the Salano project. All that the United Railroads has to show for $1,096,000 is Calhoun's promissory note, which was listed in its assets at $1, by Jesse Lilienthal, who succeeded him as president.

THIRTY STEEL WORKERS ON NEW CAPITAL STRIKE

Foreman Discharges One, but Refuses Pay for Lost Time After He Reinstates Him.

JEFFERSON CITY, May 23.—The 30 steel workers employed in the construction of the new Capitol building struck, Saturday morning, because the contractors refused to pay William Trowbridge, a hoisting engineer, for two hours he says he spent arguing with the foreman.

Harry Jurker, a foreman of the steel workers, discharged Trowbridge and asked the Structural Iron Workers' Union in St. Louis to send a man in his place. The union sent Trowbridge back to succeed himself and the foreman refused to let him work. After two hours' argument, Trowbridge was put to work by the superintendent for the Gill Construction Co., but pay for the time spent in debate was refused.

David G. Aronberg, acting head of the construction company, says he has asked that a delegate from the St. Louis union confer with him Monday or Tuesday and that work will be resumed early next week.

PAGEANT WEEK, 8 DAYS OF ACTIVITY, WILL BEGIN TODAY

Pageant week, which opens today, will be eight days long, with two Sundays in it. Besides the Pageant and Masque next Thursday evening and the three evenings following, and the Conference of Cities, beginning Friday morning, there will be a number of events of public interest.

This afternoon, as announced elsewhere in this issue of the Post-Dispatch, the Preetorius-Schurz-Daenzer memorial "The Naked Truth" statue, will be unveiled in Reservior Park, Grand and Lafayette avenues.

Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday will be devoted to final preparations for the Pageant and Masque, with rehearsals, which the public will not be encouraged to attend, the management preferring that the performance first should be viewed in completed form.

Committee to Meet Envoys.

Wednesday the Entertainment Committee will begin meeting the envoys and distinguished guests at Union Station. Thursday at 11 a. m. the envoys will rehearse their parts in the Masque. From 3:30 to 5 p. m. Thursday a reception for the envoys will be given at the Wednesday Club, Westminster place and Taylor avenue.

Thursday at 6:30 p. m. the first Pageant performance will begin and the same performance will be repeated at the same hour Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

Friday at 10 a. m. the Conference of Cities will open at the Wednesday Club. After adjournment at noon, the envoys and official guests will be taken in automobiles to the Sunset Hill Country Club for lunch.

Saturday at 11 a. m. the statue of Pierre Laclede founder of St. Louis, will be unveiled near the Municipal Courts Buildings, Thirteenth and Market streets. The Conference of Cities will hold its second session Saturday morning, and in the afternoon the delegates will be taken for a ride to the Chain of Rocks.

Sunday morning, May 31, an excursion to Cahokia Mound will be conducted by Dr. H. M. Whelpley. The Conference of Cities will hold its final session that afternoon.

Paths to Be Kept Clear.

Transportation arrangements for the days of the Pageant, beginning Thursday, were announced yesterday. Arrangements have been completed by which, on the Pageant days, the footpaths from the three nearest street car entrances to the Pageant site will be kept free from automobiles, so that there will be no danger to pedestrians.

Automobiles will not be permitted in the western part of the park, or on Berlin and Lindell avenues, west of Union boulevard, at those times. Automobiles in the east part of the park must follow traffic rules, and run only in a certain direction on certain roadways. Automobiles will be parked and checked, under the direction of traffic policemen.

The car lines which will run to the three nearest entrances are the Delmar-Olive, University-Olive and Union lines, to the De Baliviere (east) entrance; the Page and Hamilton cars to the Skinker (west) entrance, and the Market cars to the Tamm avenue (south) entrance. The Laclede and Maryland cars, which run to the Lindell entrance of the park, remote from the Pageant site, will not have their routings changed, according to yesterday's announcement.

Dress Suits Out of Order.

Don't wear evening dress to the Pageant.

John H. Gundlach, chairman of the Pageant Executive Committee, said last night that, while he thought it was generally understood that the event was to be an informal one, as to dress, it might be well to make an announcement, so that no one would come in formal evening dress and feel embarrassed.

"I feel sure," said Gundlach, "that everyone will agree that in attending the Pageant and Masque, it will be best to dress for comfort, and not for style. This applies to the boxes as well as the other reserved and free seats."

A rehearsal of the Pageant throughout, and simultaneously of the music of the Pageant and Masque, both vocal and instrumental, will take place on the stage this afternoon. The chorus and band will be in the concealed pit at the rear of the stage. The music and the Pageant rehearsal wil be conducted regardless of each other and will not harmonize.

The seats will be open to the public, but those who see and hear rehearsals are requested not to judge by them what the performance will be like. Those in charge of the performance say that two or three hours' reading of the book of the Pageant and Masque is a better preparation for enjoying the final production than seeing any number of rehearsals. The books are on sale throughout the city, at 25 cents a copy, and the profits go to the Pageant.

It has been decided that the costume rehearsals, Tuesday afternoon and evening, shall not be open to the public. No one will be admitted to the seat inclosure at that time.

BELIEVES HE WAS SHOT BY MISTAKE FOR CITY MARSHAL

Maplewood Saloon Keeper Wounded by Three Burglars He Surprised Looting Grocery.

George Greiten, 3359 Oxford street, Maplewood, believes that three burglar-highwaymen mistook him for the Town Marshal when they fired five shots at him, one of which inflicted a serious wound in the right breast, as he walked to the Missouri Pacific Railway station at 4 a. m. yesterday on his way to a street car.

The three men fled, leaving behind them two hats and a revolver in which two shells had been exploded.

Greiten, who conducts a saloon at Twenty-first and Eugenia streets, says he heard one of the three say, as he approached them: "There he is. Give it to him." It developed that the men had been disturbed while robbing the grocery of J. J. Hewitt, 7433 Commonwealth avenue.

The plate glass window of the grocery had been broken and a quantity of cigars, tobacco and other stock taken. Hewitt thinks the window was broken while a passing train drowned the noise.

The attack on Greiten is the second of its kind in two days in St. Louis County. J. H. Crompton, secretary of the Weidlich Jewelry Co., 510 Locust street, was shot by one of two highwaymen near his home, 449 Newport avenue, Webster Groves, at 11 p. m., Thursday.

Greiten's description of two of his assailants corresponds to the description given by Crompton of the men who attacked him. Greiten is 47 years old. He was taken to the city hospital after arousing Maplewood residents, who summoned a physician.

STRONG FOR PEACE, CARNEGIE OFF FOR SCOTLAND MOORS

"Americans Will Not Hurt Poor Mexicans, and Wilson Will Not Let Them Hurt Good Ones."

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, May 23.—Andrew Carnegie, strong for peace and sanguine there will be peace, sailed at noon with Mrs. Carnegie and Miss Margaret Carnegie on the Oceanic for his annual visit to Skibo Castle.

Another passenger, not as strong an advocate of peace, also went away on the White Star Liner. He was "Gunboat" Smith, the prize fighter.

Carnegie said he was looking forward to wandering over the moors, through the dales and over the hills of Scotland, and also to do a little hunting and fishing.

Asked what he thought of the Mexican situation, he said:

Says There Will Be Peace.

"There will be peace. The Americans will not go down to Mexico and hurt the poor Mexicans, and Mr. Wilson will not allow them to hurt the good Mexicans.

"You cannot bring back to life those who have already died by making the Mexicans pay or by taking more lives. There must be peace at any cost."

"Does not the Bible say," he was asked, "'An eye for an eye, a tooth for a tooth?'"

Carnegie turned sharply upon his questioner. "You are a savage, sir," he said. "That's all wrong. You should think of turning the other cheek." He said he was locked out of his home Friday evening, and told how a small boy went to his rescue.

"I went into my garden to pick a few flowers for my trip," he said.

"When I was ready to return to the house I found that the garden door was latched. I sat down and thought for a while and the thought came to me that a man with brains can get out of almost any situation. I went to the garden wall and waited.

"Presently a little lad came along.

"'I am Mr. Carnegie,' I said to him.

"'Ah, gwan,' said the little lad. 'You ain't him.'

"'I am Mr. Carnegie, and this is my house,' I said. 'Now, sonny, please go around to the front door, ring the bell and tell the servants to let me in.' The little lad believed me, told the servants, and I was reached."

Carnegie also said that he had been assisting cupid.

"I was visiting one of my libraries in Pittsburg," he said, "where they train young women to be librarians and I asked several of the beautiful creatures why they did not marry. Told they might, I promised to send each one who did a present. I have been sending presents of $500 to brides from there ever since. But the time will be up in September."

POWER OF SUGGESTION BROUGHT BABY, MAN SAYS

First Child of Father Who Has Registered 300,000 Births Arrives After 11 Years.

AUSTIN, Tex., May 23.—R. P. Babcock, State Registrar of Vital Statistics, attribute the arrival of a baby at his home to the power of suggestion. He has been married for 11 years and it was not until today that the union was blessed with a child.

During the last two years he has registered the birth of 300,000 babies, and he says it was this continual thinking of babies that finally brought a happy realization of the fond hopes of himself and wife.

GRIFFMEN FATTEN HITTING MARKS AT MITCHELL'S COST

Browns Prove Easy and Lose, 6—1, When Texan and Manning Fail to Stop Nationals.

ONE RUN OFF JIM SHAW

Recruit Righthander From Tri-State League Hands Out Blanks Until Seventh.

WASHINGTON, May 23.

Washington had little trouble in defeating the Browns, 6 to 1, here this afternoon in the final game of the series. Roy Mitchell of the visitors was knocked out of the box in the fourth inning, Ernest Manning relieving him.

Jim Shaw, Washington's big right hander, a graduate of the Tri-State League, was backed by fine support and was never in serious trouble. Nine safe swats in four innings off Mitchell produced only three Washington runs, but he had nothing in his repertoire with which to fool the Senators, and Manning, who relieved him, was hit hard in the sixth, a trio of Senatorial runs coming over.

Sensational catches by Milan and Williams in the outfield proved the fielding features, Milan led the Senators with the stick, collecting a triple and three singles out of five times up.

Gandil's Triple Hurts.

Washington was the first away in the scoring line, getting a run over the plate in the initial inning. Moeller died on a grounder to Leary but Foster was given a pass and stole second. Milan then hit through Wares' waiting hands and Foster kept going for the plate. "Red" Walker was on the game and backing up Wares, got the ball to the plate ahead of Foster, Rumler putting the ball on the runner in good style.

Milan had gone to second on the throw home and had an easy time scoring when Gandil tripled over Shotton's head to the score board. Bert made a gallant effort to capture the fly, the ball striking the tips of his fingers. Austin made a nice stop and threw out Shanks, closing the inning.

Mitchell pitched great ball in the third, getting out of a big hole. After Moeller had flied to Shotton, Foster, Milan and Gandil tore off clean singles, filling the bases. Mitchell then struck out Shanks and Austin made a splendid catch of Morgan's foul fly.

With two out in the fourth, Washington again took on the scoring habit, gathering in two runs. Shaw singled to center and Moeller scored him with a triple to right. Foster's single to short center sent Moeller over the rubber.

Milan Triples, Too.

With Manning on the rubber instead of Mitchell, the local crew hung up three runs in the sixth. The result of a base on balls to Henry, a sacrifice by Shaw and singles by Moeller and Gandil, helped along by Milan's triple to the score board.

The Browns finally broke into the run column in the seventh inning on Clarence Walker's triple to left and Leary's out at first. Walker, in turning first, ran into Gandil and had to stop at second but the umpire sent him to third on the interference. It was a legitimate three bagger.

In the final two innings Shaw held the Browns scoreless.

MAHAN HOLDS TIGERS BATTERS TO ONE HIT

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., May 23.—Harvard outplayed Princeton in every stage of the game today and won, 4 to 1. Errors let in two Crimson runs in the sixth and Waterman's triple sent home two more men in the eighth. Mahan, in the box for Harvard, was generally effective, but three singles in consecutive order by Bolton, Wall and Dayo in the fifth, gave Princeton its runs. Score:

MAROON ATHLETES WIN FROM PURDUE

CHICAGO, May 23.—The University of Chicago today defeated Purdue University, 69 to 48, in a dual meet. The track events were run in good time, but the character of the mile run in 4:26 by Capt. Roy Campbell of the Maroon team was the only sensational performance. Bancker of Purdue, who won the two hurdle races, and Baranelk of Chicago, who was first in the dashes, tied for individual honors.

Germany's Tennis Team Isn't Ready.

NEW YORK, May 23.—G. T. Adee, secretary of the Davis Cup Committee, received today word from the Deutscher Tennis Bund, Hamburg, Germany, that its plans for sending a team to this country for the international challenge matches are not complete. It is explained that a definite answer to the American inquiry will be sent within three weeks and that it is hoped Germany will be able to send a team. Mr. Adee explained that, as the matches between Germany and the winning nation of the Australasia-Canada series were scheduled for July 30, 31 and Aug. 1, there was ample time for all arrangements.

Central Hitters Bat Out Victory in 14th Inning

Pitcher Stroetter of Soldan Weakens and Walker's Boys Win, 7—2.

The Central High baseball nine broke its long losing streak of seven games by defeating the Soldan team, 7—2, in a 14-inning game yesterday morning at St. Louis University campus. The game was by far the most interesting and best played prep contest of the season. Central had been returned the losers in every game of the year and as the West Enders were perched in second place the result of the game was a surprise to all. Soldan, because of its defeat, topples to third place.

The game was a pitchers' battle throughout between Stroetter of Soldan and Henderson of Central, and it was not until the fourteenth inning that one of the hurlers was hit hard. With the score 2—2, Central got to Stroetter and started a steady bombardment until five runs had been scored. Five hits and two walks, together with some slovenly fielding on the part of Williamson and Devereaux netted the midcity boys the five runs.

No Runs to Seventh.

The first seven innings were scoreless for both teams, each nine garnering but three hits off the opposing twirlers. Central broke the tie by sending two tallies over the plate in the next frame, on a walk, two well-placed hits and a pair of miscues on the part of Soldan. However, the West Enders came right back in their half of the eighth and again tied up matters. A walk to Devereaux and a double to right by Williamson sent two gold and brown hosed tossers over the plate.

After this inning Stroetter of Soldan weakened somewhat and allowed Central to get on base every inning until the close of the game. Ten Centralites got on the bags in the last six innings, but the midcity hitters did not have the punch to send a man over.

On the other hand, Henderson, Coach Walker's entry, settled down and allowed but two hits for the rest of the contest.

Cornell Varsity Eight Easily Wins From Yale and Princeton Crews

ITHACA, N. Y., May 23.—Cornell varsity and freshman eights clearly demonstrated their superiority over the Princeton and Yale crews here today by capturing both two-mile events.

The varsity race, which was started first, was delayed until almost nightfall by the choppy condition of the Cayuga Lake course. In this event, Cornell got the jump, but at 100 feet Princeton pressed into the lead. At the one-mile point Cornell drew ahead of the Tigers, leaving Princeton and Yale to fight it out for second place.

The time of the varsity race was: Cornell, 10:38 3-5, Princeton, 10:41 3-5; Yale, 10:58 4-5.

The time of the freshman race was: Cornell, 10:51 2-5; Princeton, 11:07 1-5.

PRINTER BALL TEAMS TO PLAY GAME TODAY

The seventeenth semi-annual field day of the Tammany Club will be held at Venice, Ill. Athletic events of all kinds will take place and the winners will receive prizes. The feature of the day will be the ball game between Ed Wheeler's Peerless Tubs and Ed Springmeyer's Jumbos. The Noble Order of Zing-Zings will also hold its conclave in the afternoon and initiate new members.

The Tammany fish fry is an affair given by an organization of union printers for the purpose of fostering a fraternal feeling among the printers and their friends.

Two Games at St. L. U. Park.

Two baseball games will be played at St Louis U. campus this afternoon. In the first game, starting at 12:30 o'clock, the Post-Dispatch team will play the Green Sheets while the Towers and Muellers will meet in the second game at 3 o'clock.

TEAM LACKS A PUNCH

St. Louis Federals Book Special Game With Indianapolis for Sunday.

PITTSBURG, Pa., May 23.—The St. Louis Federals did not win a game in this city, dropping two and tying one. They were helpless today before the curves and crossfire pitching of the old Boston National leaguer, Walter Dickson, and were shut out, 3 to 0.

Up to last year this pitcher could hardly win a game from any team in the National League, except the Pirates, and today he seemed to have the same stuff on the ball as when he used to perform against the present National League leaders.

Willett, the mound artist for the visitors, was seen here for the first time since the memorable games for the world championship between the Pirates and Detroits in 1909. On the home team is another of that old Tiger outfit, Davy Jones, and the old boy had quite a deal to do with the loss of the games by St Louis Thursday and today.

Willett got a bad start and for the first time this year the Rebels seemed to take advantage of the breaks presented to them. It is a fact that they have played their best ball of the year against the St. Louis team, both in the Mound City and here.

Terriers Lack the Punch.

The Terriers played good ball in the field today and had two men on the bases in the first, sixth, seventh and eighth innings, but the necessary hit was not forthcoming. Davy Jones undoubtedly spoiled a good chance of a score in the first inning when, with two men scampering around the bases, he made a phenomenal catch of Hugh Miller's bid for a homer.

In the last part of the game, after Kommers had broken the no-hit record of his team, the Terriers' attack was shifted, with better success. After Boucher had walked and Kommers had singled it looked good with Ward Miller at the bat. But he hit weakly to the pitcher and was tossed out at first.

They kept plugging away, however, and in the seventh Hugh Miller singled and Crandall was passed. Here was a rosy chance for a score, but the next two men could not get the ball out of the infield.

With one out in the eighth inning Boucher and Kommers hit safely, but the next man was thrown out by the second baseman, and Rebel Oakes made a great catch of Ward Miller's long fly.

Crowd Wanted Simon.

The crowd was disappointed at the nonappearance of Mike Simon in the game, as they were anxious to see him perform in the uniform of a Federal Leaguer. Hartley has his troubles stopping the Rebels from stealing, partly because of the long lead that Willett allowed them to take.

Hugh Miller made one of the finest catches of a foul fly ever seen at Exposition Park, and it came at a time when further scoring seemed imminent.

The St. Louis Federal team will make a long jump before they reach Baltimore on Monday. From here they go to Indianapolis for a Sunday game and then, early tomorrow night, leave there for Baltimore, arriving in the latter city about noon Monday.

SUDDUTH TO RIDE AT ST. LOUIS MOTORDOME

Next Wednesday night will see the local motor cycle riders in the first races of the season at the local Motordrome. Manager Salen intends to schedule several special events for the inaugural.

Arrangements have been made for Charles Sudduth, the lightweight champion rider, to appear here this summer. Sudduth has been racing in Atlanta all winter, and will come here direct from the Georgia city. Standen, Gibson, Martinson and all the other stars will also show in the opening races.

The races this season will be run every Wednesday, Saturday and Sunday evening.

Pikeway Freshmen Beat Sophs.

In the annual Washington University Freshman-Sophomore track and field meet, the first-year men evened an old baseball and basket ball score with the Sophs by winning 58 to 50. Pemberton of the 1917 class was individual star of the meet with 11 points. He took first place in the 440-yard run and broad jump, and third in the 220-yard dash. The meet was held yesterday afternoon on the university campus.

Midland Valley Golf Tourney Results in Tie

A. C. Reichart and E. A. Morse Tie for Richards Cup in First Meet.

The ideal golfing weather that has been on tap for the past three weeks has put the local links in such inviting shape that yesterday, the third Saturday of the current golfing season, saw record crowds on almost every one of the neighboring courses.

Midland Valley probably boasted the busiest sesion, the attraction, besides the evening's entertainment, being the men's opening tournament. Of the 260 people who visited the Valley Club, 1 made the rounds of the links in the competition for the D. P. Richards cup, and as a result of the handicaps given out exhibited some keen competition.

E. A. Morse and A. C. Reichart, whom the committee had blessed with liberal handicaps, tied for high honors with a score of 2 up on bogey, while Richard Taylor, who was made to play from scratch, ran them a close second. Other good scores were turned in by R. W. Chambers, G. H. Curry, J. L. Venas, A. L. Broderich, F. M. Canter, E. C. Sullivan and J. W. Bowman. The ladies' opening tourney is scheduled for the coming Wednesday.

Qualifying Round at Normandy.

Normandy golfers also had a busy day on the greens, playing the qualifying round for the annual club championship. Thirty-two members qualified for the tournament, H. W. Williams and F. D. Fitzgibbons dividing low score honors with 82. Bogey for the course is 80. Match play will be inaugurated next Saturday.

Out at Glen Echo, the afternoon's program was the handicap match play against blind bogey for the Horace Rumsey trophy. W. N. Bemis was low man for the afternoon's play, turning in a score of 89-18, 7 up on bogey, and second came his brother, J. W. Bemis, 78-5, 5 up on bogey. But despite these handicaps, Walter Michener gave them a run and succeeded in making the low scratch score of the day, 77, one better than bogey on the Glen Echo course. The course was exceptionally fast.

Jenkins Winner in Final Round of British Golf

Troom Star Defeats G. O. Hezlet of Ireland, 3 Up and 2, in Rainstorm.

SANDWICH, England, May 23.—J. C. L. Jenkins, representing the Troom Club of Scotland, today defeated G. O. Hezlet, of the Port Rush Club of Ireland, 3 up and 2, in the final round of the British open amateur golf championship. The match was played in a heavy rain.

Before leaving for Paris to compete in the French golf championship next week, the American players watched the final round today. Both the finalists belong to golfing families, Jenkins' sister thrice winning the ladies' Scotch championship. Hezlet's sister won the ladies' English championship twice and the Irish championship thrice.

Hezlet, who never played in a championship before, created a record by reaching the final at the first attempt. Jenkins won as much by confidence as by play. He laid Hezlet three stymies during the morning. Jenkins won on the 16th green by 4 up and 2 to play.

Rally in Ninth Inning Wins for G. B. C. Nine, 5-4

Collegians Score Two Runs in Final Round and Defeat Concordia Team.

Saving the thrills for the ninth inning the Christian Brothers College staged a two-run rally and nipped Concordia Seminary on the wire, 5—4, at C. B. C. campus yesterday afternoon.

With one out in the concluding chapter, Brady coaxed a walk and stole second and third. Corrigan also paraded and pilfered the keystone sack. Brannigan then singled, counting the pair of midway marauders.

Walsh pitched high-class ball for the purple and gold, permitting but half a dozen safeties, three being of the insipid variety. Dippold's delivery was solved for 11 hits, including three doubles and a triple, still he was found for but five runs, poor base-running diluting the value of the Collegians' attack.

The same teams will play again next Saturday on C. B. C. campus. Score:

Kirkby Defeats Walter Travis in Eastern Final

ENGLEWOOD, N. J., May 23.—The name of Oswald Kirkby of the Englewood Country Club will be the first to be engraved on the Metropolitan Golf Association's new championship trophy, the last one having become the property of Jerome D. Travers, who won it three successive times as a member of the Upper Montclair Golf Club. Kirkby defeated Walter J. Travis today by 3 up and 1 to play in the final 36 holes round for the Metropolitan title.

Kirkby outdrove Travis on the long holes in the first half of the match. He made mistakes in approaching and putting, but finished 2 up on the Garden City expert with a card of 74 to 76 for Travis on the first 10 holes.

Going out for the second time Kirkby took the first hole and was 3 up, but Travis gave him a hard fight, squaring the match by winning the next three holes cleverly. During the remainder of the contest, however, Travis was unable to take the lead from the local man, who was 3 up at the turn. The next three holes were halved in par figures, but Travis hashed the thirteenth, which went to Kirkby a par 4 to 6. Travis playing pluckily, took the next two and when the seventeenth was halved in fours Kirkby became dormie and won on the seventeenth green, 3 up and 1.

Each match won in singles or doubles, scores one point for the winner.

By winning the finals in both the singles and doubles of the annual Missouri Valley conference tennis tournament, played on the Triple A courts yesterday, Washington University won for the second time in three years the tennis championship of the valley conference. Incidentally, the Pikers won for their alma mater, along with the titles, four of a possible five cups.

Washington's total was nine points, with Kansas and Missouri following with 6 and 3 points respectively. Nebraska and Ames Aggies failed to score.

To Roland Hoerr, Washington owes the greater part of her honors. The Triple A star not only won his way to the championship through the four rounds of singles, but shared with Gallenkamp the honors of winning the doubles title for his school.

Hoerr Wins on the Bit.

Throughout the tourney, the local star played a brilliant game, and with one possible exception, won his match without a great deal of exertion. The only close round was with Smith of Kansas in the semi-finals, when the champion was pushed 6—2, 7—5, 5—7 and 6—3, to win. It was the best round of singles of the tournament, and showed that the local boy is easily the just holder of the valley title.

Gallenkamp, Hoerr's teammate, although not in his best form, worked his way up to the semi-finals, winning two points for W. U. besides playing a mighty good game with Hoerr throughout the rounds of doubles.

In yesterday morning's play for the singles championship, Hoerr met Teachenor of Kansas, who is reputed to be one of the college racquet stars of the West. The Jayhawker had previously won his way to the finals with ease, defeating each of his opponents handily. However, he fell before the local boy in four sets, 5—7, 6—2, 6—4, 6—0. In the first set Hoerr's service was very poor and consequently many points went to Teachenor on double faults. In the second set "Rollie" improved in this department and besides changed his entire system of play. Instead of hitting lobbing he played a smashing game, putting his opponent at his mercy. As the match progressed, Hoerr seemed to strengthen, while Teachenor weakened. At the close of play, the Piker entry had things pretty much his own way.

Doubles Easy for Locals.

In yesterday afternoon's play Hoerr and Gallenkamp won the doubles title by defeating Woods and Loomis, the Missouri team, in successive sets, 6—2, 6—1 and 10—8. For the first two sets the Piker team had their own way, but the local boys were forced to work to gain the final set-to.

Hoerr and Gallenkamp's record equals that of Adkins and Brodix, the Washington team of 1912, when they brought back four out of five cups from the annual conference tourney at Columbia, Mo.

TIGERS WIN CLOSE MEET FROM KANSAS AGGIES

MANHATTAN, Kan., May 23.—The University of Missouri track team, aided by the work of Captain Thatcher in the weight events, defeated the Kansas State Agricultural College in a dual track meet here today, 59 to 50.

The relay race decided the meet. Porter, the first Missouri runner in this event, practically won the race when he sprang into a quick lead and gained 30 yards on Collins the Aggie runner, in the first lap.

Summaries:

100-yard dash—Moore, Missouri, first; Holt, K. A. C., second. Time, 10 2-5s.

Mile run—Collins, K. A. C., first; Hogan, Missouri, second. Time, 4m. 42 1-5s.

CATCHER ENZENROTH RELEASED TO ATLANTA

ATLANTA, Ga., May 23.—The release of Catcher Jack Enzenroth of the Browns has been purchased by the Atlanta (Southern League) team. He is expected here Monday. Enzenroth is a former Michigan University player. If he prospers here, he will be recalled by the Browns in the fall.

Enzenroth's release to Atlanta leaves Manager Rickey with Catchers Sam Agnew, Frank Crossin, Joe Jenkins and Bill Rumler, the outfielder-backstop.

MATTY OUTPITCHES SALLEE BUT LOSES TO "DOTS" MILLER

Timely Single and a Wonderful Fielding Play by Cards' First Sacker Helps Locals Beat Giants.

By W. J. O'Connor.

OLD Ironsides Mathewson, daddy of 'em all, yielded after a bitter struggle, to Harry Sallee, 4-3, in the third game of the current series between the Giants and Cardinals at Robison Field, yesterday afternoon.

It was a free-hitting battle with two of the most erudite athletes of the noble profession opposing each other on the hurling hill. They do say, those ballyard gossips, that Old Ironsides has arms like Venus de Milo. He pitches with his head, 'tis said, since his right-arm withered away.

If this is true, if it is a fact that Matty "thinks" his way to victory, we earnestly suggest that the arms of every Cardinal pitcher forthwith be cut off and an operation performed on their beans.

Matty had lots of stuff yesterday, a fast ball and a fadeaway and control that was almost uncanny. Indeed, he outpitched Sallee, 8 hits to 11, one pass to three, and one strike-out against one. But Matty didn't get the support that the Cards afforded their "Old Master" so he bit the dust for the second time this season. He had won five in a row.

Vieing with Sallee for honors in the local camp was Jack Miller, who speared Stock's liner on the wing in the eighth inning and completed, unassisted, a double play that effaced a Giant rally. Jack also prodded a single in the early rounds that consigned a run to the plate and that run could be taken as the one which represented the Cardinal margin of victory at the close.

The breaks were with the Cardinals. But to the credit of Hug's men it must be said that they fought hard and punished Matty unmercifully when they had him on the ropes.

Hug's men concentrated their attack in the early rounds and it was well that they did. After the third inning, Matty yielded only two hits and only two men reached third base. But in the second and third innings there was a break in the Giant defense and the Cardinals pounded away until they had amassed enough runs to carry them through the periods when Sallee tottered and almost fell.

Stock Out at Plate.

A double by Merkle, a bounder that cleared Dolan's bean and rolled off into foul territory, developed into a Giant run in the second inning. Cruise's return to the infield was fumbled by Beck and Merkle rested on third. Doyle's sacrifice fly to Magee brought him home. A subsequent double by Stock and his steal of third was wasted when Sallee cut him down at the plate on an attempted steal.

The Cardinals went after Matty in their half of the second. Miller gone, Wilson singled sharply to right. Cruise raised to Bescher for the second out, whereupon Wilson made a clean steal of second. Wingo, who supplanted Snyder, injured in this inning, then broke off what appeared to be a line single to center. Bescher started late, tripped and fell and the ball went to the fence for a home run. Wilson scored ahead of Wingo.

Cards Work Double Steal.

In the next round the Cardinals rallied after two were out and tacked on two more runs. Sallee and Hug died easily before Magee salted a single in center. Dolan caught the hit-and-run sign and delivered a single to right, Magee high-tailing for third. A double steal went through, Doyle muffing Meyers' short throw, Magee scoring. Dolan rested at second until Jack Miller whipped a single to center, letting Cozy come home.

Sallee went along swimmingly until the sixth. Burns bounced a triple off the right field fence to start this inning and scored on Doyle's out, Beck to Miller. Merkle mauled a triple to center and scored on Snodgrass' single. Wingo then flagged Snodgrass on a steal just before Stock singled. Meyers rang down the curtain with a strike-out.

I. Wingo Flags Runners at Crucial Periods; His Homer Nets Two Runs

IVEY WINGO, the Titian-haired tenor from Norcross, S. C., broke into the score box in the second inning after Frank Snyder was spiked in the knee by Milton Stock, and proved a militant factor in bringing home the Cardinal bacon.

His home-run drive in the second netted two runs, but his defensive work was more praiseworthy. He flagged Larry Doyle on an attempted steal in the fourth. A minute later Snodgrass singled. Doyle, had he made second, would have scored on the drive.

In the sixth, after the Giants had scored two runs, Wingo turned Snodgrass back on an attempted steal. Then Stock singled. It would have scored Snodgrass from the keystone station.

The Cardinals were more fortunate on the tow-paths, stealing three bases, two of which came in a double-headed theft, netting a run. Chief Meyers is said to be notoriously weak on blocking the two-play steal but it was not altogether his fault. Doyle dropped a short throw making it possible for Magee to score standing up.

Grandstand managers questioned Mathewson's judgment in letting Wingo hit in the second inning. With two out and Beck next up, they thought it better policy to pass the Cardinal catcher. It was in this inning that Ivey delivered a home run. Beck didn't get a hit off Big Six.

With Stock on first in the sixth inning, Meyers up and Dyer next, Sallee got himself in the hole, three balls and one strike. Then he curved one over the outside corner for a called strike. Meyers looked to the bench and evidently got the "office" from McGraw to hit the next ball. He swung at a wide one and missed. McGraw probably figured Meyers his best hitter and wanted him to die swinging.

There were two sensational plays in the eighth that saved Sallee's neck. Beck, from deep short, whipped out Merkle with the greatest throw of the game. Then Snodgrass singled, his third successive blow. Stock's shot at Miller, had all the earmarks of a triple, but Jack jumped and speared the ball with his gloved fin. Snodgrass was rounding second and a double play was easy. The crowd cheered for a full minute.

It's getting to be a habit for the Cardinals to conquer a star pitcher on Saturday. A week ago Willie Doak subjugated Alexander and the hard-hitting Phils, 1—0. Yesterday Mathewson fell, 4—3. Pretty soft for Sky Britton. Big crowds on Sunday.

Anybody who thinks Jim Thorpe can't run is ready for the squirrels. Jim apeared in lieu of Grant in the ninth and wheeled a single over second. He went to first in "nothing." Murray, hitting for Matty, popped to Magee while Bescher forced Thorpe. Lovely billiards!

For the final with the Giants, Hugg will use John Henry Robinson, a southpaw. McGraw may use Tesreau, the Ozark Bear, in hope of getting an even break.

Today's game at 3 o'clock.

Frank Snyder's injury isn't serious, physicians say, but he will be out for probably a week. He suffered a three-inch cut just above his knee.

Newark Boy Sets New World's Interscholastic Record for 2-Mile Run

PRINCETON, N. J., May 23.—Charles Boughton of the Newark Central and Commercial High School, set a new world's interscholastic record for the two-mile run today in Princeton's annual interscholastic track meet, finishing in 9m. 51 3-5s. The previous mark was 9m. 52s. held by E. Humphreys of the Philadelphia Central High School.

WESTERN CREWS MAKE GOOD START UNDER NEW COACH

South Side Oarsmen Have Won Three Events in Spring Regattas.

Quincy Double Sculls Meet Local Oarsmen in Central R. C. Opening

A DOUBLE scull race between Harry Floerke and R. Widman of the Central Rowing Club, and Will Zimmerman and D. Eberle of the North Side Boat Club of Quincy, Ill. will feature the opening of the rowing season at the Central Rowing Club, foot of Palm street, this afternoon.

The race is the first double scull event ever decided on the river and is the outcome of keen rivalry between the oarsmen of the two clubs. Two silver cups will be awarded to the winners. The race is a mile and a half with turn, the start and finish being at the Central Club. The crews will get away at 4 o'clock.

By Clarence F. Lloyd.

Members of the Western Rowing Club have tired of having their crews finish among the also-rans in the races on the Mississippi and the annual regattas hereabouts. That's the reason Sam Wright of Worcester, Mass., is on the job at 5000 South Broadway these days.

Wright is a New Englander who has gained much fame as a coach of oarsmen and swimmers. His task at the Western Rowing Club is to convert losing crews into winners. The W. R. C. members who were instrumental in bringing Wright to St. Louis claim they can see the good in Wright's work already. And he's been here only a couple of weeks.

Wright is something like the dog that was picked out of the street, fed and housed and then turned and bit a meal out of his master's leg. The new Western coach almost a quarter of a century ago turned out as an oarsman under Jim Ten Eyck, the famous coach of the Syracuse University crews.

Turned on His Master.

Wright, after absorbing much knowledge from Ten Eyck, turned on Ten Eyck in 1912 and defeated the crews coached by the veteran. In 1912, coaching the Britannia Boat Club of Ottawa, Canada, Wright succeeded in winning four eight-oared races and two four-oared races in the Royal Canadian Henley Regatta. The following year, Wright's crew won the Junior four-oared championship of Canada.

Wright has had more than his share of success as coach of the Britannia Club, and only a liberal offer from the Western club, which demands winning crews, coaxed him away from his Canadian job.

Wright's crews have won three races in the opening day regattas of different local rowing clubs this spring, after working only a short time with his new charges.

No More "Joy Rides."

He is showing the oarsmen something entirely new about the game. The big difference in their training of today and heretofore is that they are working now whereas formerly they looked upon the evening shell outings as "joy rides."

Wright is of the opinion that an oarsman, like a sprinter, swimmer or ball player must prepare for a season's campaign. For that reason the Western oarsmen are taking trial spins of from six to seven miles nightly as against jaunts of a mile or two before the arrival of the New Englander. The effect of this is that the W. R. C. crews are speeding along better. There is also a noted absence of extra averdupois about the girth of the different sweeps and scullers.

The arrival of Wright has caused quite an increase in enthusiasm at the club. The rowing squad now includes upwards of 30 men. From this group, Wright has hopes of choosing crews that will have bagged their shares of medals and trophies when the season ends.

A change has been made in the club's junior four. The Ferdina brothers are still on the job along with Lang but Dobler is now pulling in Koopman's place.

Among the new prospects are, Gruber, Toos, Weinheimer, Held and Kirchoff. Most of the 1913 squad is again in training.

Machine Still on the Job.

Among others who are taking nightly workouts on the Mississippi is John Joachim, who is probably St. Louis' best known oarsman. Joachim is a veteran but still sticks to the game and intends to pull for the Westerns in the singles. Arthur Schreiber will compete in the junior singles events for the Westerns.

Wright will not be called on to teach the Western members how to swim. At this specialty however, he is a maker of champions. He turned his attention from rowing to swimming in 1905 and made a champion of young Jim Ten Eyck, son of Wright's rowing tutor. Young Jim won the New England championship at 100 and 220 yards in 1905 and 1906.

THREE FOR ED KONEY; PIRATES SPANK PHILS

PITTSBURG, Pa., May 23.—Pittsburg made a clean sweep of the series with Philadelphia by taking the third game, 7 to 2. The locals hit Oeschger and Marshall hard, while McQuillan, for Pittsburg, was in fine form.

Manager Dooin and Magee of Philadelphia were put off the field by Umpire Rigler in the third for disputing a decision. A one-handed catch by Mitchell off Luderus' bat in the third was the fielding feature. Koney, with a perfect batting average, Wagner and Gibson, led the Pirates at bat. Luderus hit a homer in the first. Score:

BROOKLYN PITCHERS ARE EASY FOR REDS

CINCINNATI, O., May 23.—Cincinnati overwhelmed Brooklyn by hitting two of the visiting pitchers hard, and won easily, 11 to 3.

Reulbach started for Brooklyn, but his wildness, coupled with four hits, proved his undoing, and he did not finish out the first inning, Aitchison relieving him. Aitchison lasted until the end of the seventh, when another bombardment of four hits sent him from the mound, and Brown finished up the other inning in good style. Ames always had the visitors well in hand, Brooklyn scoring two runs in the sixth after Daubert had singled and Riggert's drive bounded off Bates' shins into deep center field for a home run. ERRORS BY BISLAND GIVE GAME TO YANKEES

NEW YORK, May 23.—New York made it two out of three games from Cleveland by taking today's game in the eleventh, 10 to 9.

Jackson's home run, into the right field fence, off Caldwell with two men on bases in the eighth put Cleveland ahead, but a single by Maisel drove in the tying New York run in the ninth. A bare-handed stop by Lajoie on Holden prevented New York from winning in that inning.

New York won in the eleventh when two fumbles by Bisland and an infield single by Caldwell filled the bases with none out. Truesdale scored the winning run on Hartzell's sacrifice fly. Seven pitchers and five catchers took part in the game, 29 players in all. The various pitchers gave 16 bases on balls while four batters were hit. Thirteen bases were stolen.

RED SOX BEAT FOUR WHITE SOX HURLERS

BOSTON, May 23.—Four Chicago twirlers pitched wildly to Boston today and gave the Red Sox an easy victory, 6 to 2. Leonard, who won his fourth straight game, kept the visitors' hits scattered. His two-base drive sent in Boston's first two runs.

MACKMEN BEAT TIGERS IN FINAL GAME, 8 TO 5

PHILADELPHIA, May 3.—Philadelphia won from Detroit 8 to 5, thereby capturing the series from the league leaders, two games to one.

Plank was taken off the rubber after the sixth and Joe Bush held the visitors without a hit or run in the last three innings. Dauss weakened after the fifth and was given poor support, his team mates piling up six errors, five of which figured in the scoring. Daley made a triple and two singles in five times at bat. Score:

FEDERAL

BUFFEDS GET THREE AND WIN IN NINTH

BUFFALO, N. Y., May 23.—The Buffalo Federals came from behind and won today's game from the Indianapolis Hoosiers, scoring three runs in the last inning, 6 to 5.

Hits by Blair, Downey and Louden and a base on balls to Schlafly, batting for Moore gave the Buffeds their three tallies in the last round. Louden also drove in the three previous runs for Buffalo.

Earl Moore pitched the full game for the locals, while Kaiserling twirled for the visitors, being taken out in the ninth inning after he had walked Schlafly and Blair hit. Cy Falkenberg relieved him and allowed the two hits which won the game for Buffalo.

OLYMPIC TIMBER AMONG ATHLETES IN BIG MEET HERE

Many Valley Conference Stars Have Performed Close to Record Marks.

Many of the athletes entered in the Missouri Valley Conference meet which will be staged here next Saturday morning at Francis Field, Washington University, are good enough to make the trip with the elect of Uncle Sam to the Olympic championships at Berlin in 1916, according to local men who competed at Stockholm.

There are about eight men entered in the meet who have made records which are of a sufficiently high standard to take them to the world's games, if a team were picked today; and if these men can hold their form or improve a little, there is no doubt that they will make the trip in 1916.

Four of these men who look good from a national viewpoint belong to the great track team of Stanford University. They are Bonnett, the half miler on the team, Murray, the hurdler, Wilson, the miler, and Krohn, the pole vaulter.

Bonnett Runs Great Race.

Bonnett is one of the greatest half milers the country has produced—the only man of his class in the college world are Meredith of Pennsylvania, and Brown of Yale. Bonnett did the half-mile in 1 minute 54 3-5 seconds in the Stanford U.—California U. dual meet April 18. This is good enough to make any team picked by James E. Sullivan.

Wilson of Stanford also looks good enough to represent the flag at Berlin in the mile run, if he continues his good work. He showed a 4 minute 20 1-5 second mile in the same meet where Bonnett made his record breaking race. Wilson's mark is the best made in the country this year.

The hurdling of Murray is also Class A. Murray has done two 15 2-5 races in the high hurdles, this year—and hurdlers with worse marks than this made the team which went to Stockholm in 1912. Ward of Chicago also has the class to bear the starry shield at Berlin for he is also done two 15 2-5 performances in the high sticks this season.

The high hurdles will be a great race to watch with at the meet, next Saturday, for there are three or four other men entered who will take the hurdles with these men to fight for the inches at the tape.

Thatcher an All-Around Star.

Thatcher of Missouri U. looks as if he might make the Olympic honor, if not in the discus throw, he surely ought to go as an entry in the Pentathlon. Thatcher, although he has not been doing very well this year, has thrown close to the world's record with the Greek missle in practice, and last year he showed up the bona fide college man at the Penn Relay games at Philadelphia. He is good in the javelin throw also, is fast in the 220-yard dash, and is good enough as an all-round man to compete creditably in the five-event classic of the Greek games revival.

Although there is no reason why the sport world should get coquettish over the registering of good time by watches in the hands of men out in Colorado, still it comes from very good authority that Cline of Colorado University is a wonderful sprinter. He is said to have done 9 4-5 seconds this year, and even though the timers out in Colorado might fib a fifth of a second, a good ten-second man is desirable Olympic timber.

Cowman Beaten by Greenness.

Cowman, of Rolla School of Mines, although his records do not show he is a wonderful man, is undoubtedly a great runner in the quarter mile. Last year all that stopped the miner from copping the two furlong event at the Missouri Valley meet, here was inexperience. Cowman was 10 yards ahead of the field, after taking a sizzling clip, and fell exhausted to the track with home, victory and a great mark in sight, 10 yards away. The lad had run himself out the day before, qualifying in the 100 yards, 220 yards and quarter mile run, and his slight frame could not quite recuperate from the strain, especially as he did not sleep the night before from nervousness at the prospect of appearing in his first big race.

This year Cowman has the experience to guide him, and there will be a sorry bunch of theory miners in Rolla if he does not cop the classic quarter.

Many of these men may not win, as track men are more fickle than great southpaws; but if they continue to show the form they have in the past they will surely go to Berlin with the pride of the nation to Berlin.

GOLFERS PLAY 31 MATCHES IN MEET ON PUBLIC LINKS

All Favorites Win in Second Round of Match Play at Forest Park.

Yesterday afternoon was a busy one on the municipal links where 31 of the 48 matches in the second round of the opening city golf tourney were played. The Class A matches brought forth mighty good golf, four scores coming within five of bogey, but developed few surprises, as practically all the favorites came out winners by easy margins.

Arthur Pfarrer, who won the qualifying round with a score of 80, equaling bogey, won his second round from J. H. Self, 3 up and 2 to play.

Carl Piepho, Tim Murphy, M. Keogh and E. C. Hamel, all of whom turned in low cards last Saturday, had little trouble winning. Of the 48 matches scheduled for yesterday, 17 were won on defaults. The scores follow:

Class A—R. B. Barnhart defeated A. M. Graves, 1 up in 20 holes; Tim Murphy defeated W. McAdams, 4 up, 3 to play; Carl Piepho defeated E. A. Downey, 6 up, 5 to play; E. C. Hamel defeated M. RICH KENTUCKY HANDICAP WON BY LUKE M'LUKE

Son of Ultimus and Midge Clips Three Seconds Off Douglas Park Record.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 23.—Clipping three seconds off the track record for the distance, Luke McLuke, the fleet 3-year-old son of Ultimus and Midge, and owned by J. W. Schorr of Memphis, won the Kentucky handicap at a mile and a quarter by half a length at Douglas Park track here this afternoon. Rudolfo was second and Solar Star, a field horse, third. The winner's time was 2:02 4-5, three seconds faster than the record set by Rudolfo, which won the event last year.

Ten speedy thoroughbreds of all ages faced the starter and the race was keenly contested throughout. Luke McLuke, in rare form, was a slight favorite in the betting, notwithstanding this was only his third start, but almost all the entries were liberally supported, the winner paying 3 to 1.

Solar Star set the pace and led to the half-mile post, with Luke McLuke close up and Hodge third, Rudolfo trailing in fifth position. At the half Jockey Neylon, astride the son of Ultimus, urged the colt forward and he had a three-lengths lead when the three-quarters was reached. As the horses turned into the stretch Rudolfo came up with a rush from out of the field and Neylon placed the lash to his mount, passing under the wire with Rudolfo lapped on the Schorr colt's saddle girths.

The purse, with the $10,000 added money, amounted to approximately $14,000, of which the winner received $11,500. Gowell, Donrail, Clubs, Bellero, G. M. Miller and Samuel R. Meyer also ran.

CHIFEDS FILE APPEAL IN KILLIFER CASE

CINCINNATI, May 23.—Attorneys for the Chicago Federal League Baseball Club today filed their brief in the appeal of the suit to enjoin William H. Killifer Jr. from playing with the Philadelphia National League team. The brief was filed in the United States Circuit Court of Appeals here.

United States Judge Sessions, at Grand Rapids, Mich., refused to grant the injunction, on the ground that the plaintiff did not come into court "with clean hands." The attorneys for the Chicago club, who are asking the higher court for a reversal of this decision, devoted their entire attention to prove the figurative cleanliness of their clients' hands.

PENSY GETS ONE HIT BUT BEATS MICHIGAN

PHILADELPHIA, May 23.—The University of Pennsylvania defeated Michigan, 4 to 2, today. Pennsylvania got her four runs in the sixth. Two men walked and Pitcher Quintance threw wild on two bunts, two runs scoring. A stolen base and two outs scored the other two runs. Michigan made seven hits off Sayre. Score:

NOX PLANT REFINANCED

The recent sale of the property and ant of the Knox Automobile Co., to
O. Sutton of Springfield, Mass.,
ich has been confirmed by the court, s placed it in the hands of parties plan to take up the active promotion of the company's business and extend it on a much wider scope of national standing than it has ever enjoyed before.

It is Mr. Sutton's intention to continue the active manufacture of pleasure cars, tractors and fire apparatus.

The company is now selling out all its present limited stock of pleasure cars and trucks to make room for the new product which will shortly be manufactured, and the factory has been carefully systematized and rearranged to carry forward an enlarged production along the most approved manufacturing methods.

ELIMINATION TO START MONDAY AT SPEEDWAY

Interest in the great 500-mile race at Indianapolis, on Memorial Day, May 30, is very great in St. Louis, and practically every dealer and a large number of owners will be in the grand stand when the race starts. Two special trains will take several hundred St. Louisans to Indianapolis and at least a score of enthusiasts will drive through, via Terre Haute.

George C. Brinkman, for the benefit of friends and patrons, will have installed a direct telegraph service from the track at his place of business, 2818 Locust street, which will give instantaneous news of the progress of the race.

At the track the busy hum of motors "trying out" is drowning all other sounds. All of the drivers are tuning up and getting ready for the elimination trial which is to put out of the final race all but 30 cars.

Some Previous Records.

Interesting figures of previous races have been issued by the National Motor Vehicle Co. The table shows the graduation of times made by those cars that "finished within the money" in the three 500-mile races that have been run. The cars shown are only those finishing 500 miles under seven hours' time.

National, 6:21:06, first in 1912; Fiat, 6:31:29, second in 1912; Mercer, 6:34:56, third in 1912; Peugeot, 6:35:05, first in 1913; Stutz 6:36:36, fourth in 1912; Marmon, 6:42:08, first in 1911; Lozier, 6:43:51, second in 1911; Schacht, 6:46:28, fifth in 1912; Mercer, 6:48:13:40, second in 1913; Stutz, 6:48:49:25, third in 1913; Stutz, 6:50:28, sixth in 1912; Fiat, 6:52:29, third in 1911; Mercedes, 6:52:57, fourth in 1911; White,, 6:52:58, seventh in 1912; Marmon, 6:54:53, fifth in 1911; Lozier, 6:59:37, eighth in 1912. The National was not entered in 1913.

Of the first ten cars that finished in each of these three and only 500-mile races there are 16 with time better than seven hours; five in 1911, eight in 1912 and three in 1913. This shows that the race the National won was much harder to win because it was so much faster and the competition harder. Thirty-nine cars finished in the three races.

The largest crowd that ever assembled within a paid inclosure to witness a sporting event is predicted for the 500-mile race, over 100,000 being the estimated attendance. Special trains and Pullmans are booked from all parts of the United States, smaller delegations hailing from as far away as London and Paris. Several cities, such as Detroit and Chicago, will send four and five train loads themselves.

Special arrangements, naturally, are under way for the accommodation of visitors. All those failing to make hotel arrangements, which, incidentally, are much more ample this year than ever before, will be taken care of through room bureaus conducted by the Speedway management and Indianapolis newspapers. The old-time sight of people sleeping in the streets at the wheel of their automobiles, the night before the race, will be comparatively rare, therefore, it is thought.

That there will be a new Speedway record established in the 500-mile race on Memorial day is the firm belief of Edwin Pullen, one of the members of the Mercer trio entered for that event. Not only does Pullen believe that Dawson's mark of 78.72 miles an hour made in the race of 1912 will go by the boards, but he claims that the new record will be over 80 miles per hour.

Pullen won the Grand Prize road race at Santa Monica, Cal., last February in a Mercer that covered the 403.24 miles at an average speed of 77.2 miles an hour and therefore is qualified to judge the speed possible by the entrants in the five-century grind.

With the shipment of the third Maxwell racer to Indianapolis on Tuesday, Ray Harroun officially completed the assignment given him by President Walter E. Flanders of the Maxwell company, last January. Dame Rumor, however, now comes to the front and broadly hints that so far from being through with the racing game, Harroun intends to drive the third car built under his supervision in the 500-mile race.

While Harroun will neither deny or affirm the statement, it is known that no driver has been selected for the third Maxwell racer, with the day of the race only a short distance away. Close friends of the man who won the first 500-mile race, claim that rather than turn over the mount to a second or third rate pilot, Ray would much prefer to take the wheel himself.

Connected with the arrival at the track of the Duesenbergs, incidentally, is one of the heartthrobs of the game. Fred Duesenberg, the entrant, is on the sick bed, unable to more than barely move about. Rather than withdraw his cars, however, he sent them on in charge of his brother, hoping they would do as well as if he were present. Some sport!

No motor car had ever traveled at as high a rate of speed on the Indianapolis Speedway as did Joe Dawson in the Marmon last Friday, when he traversed the two and one-half miles oval in the record-breaking time of 1:36 2-5, lowering the track record made by Louis Strang in 1910, when he hurled his 200 horse powered Fiat around the course in 1:37 flat.

Elimination trials for the race on the Indianapolis motor speedway will start Monday, May 25, instead of the Wednesday following, as originally announced. The extra two days have been added to give some of the contestants time to readjust their machines for endurance, after they have been especially prepared for speed. Only the 30 fastest cars surviving, it is imperative that each entrant be accorded the utmost leeway.

What Every Owner Knows

What engenders the exceptional loyalty and intense enthusiasm Hup owners display for their cars?

Why do Hup owners go out of their way—as they actually are doing—to convince their friends and neighbors that a Hup investment is best?

Because every one of them knows his car renders more continuous service at lesser cost.

Because he knows his Hup, at any time or season, holds a cash value far above the average for second hand cars.

All In His Favor

Because he knows he is justified in rating depreciation extremely low—some put it as low as a cent a mile.

Because he is getting long mileage on tires, gasoline and oil.

Because he knows his Hup is as serviceable today, as full of "pep", as worthy and ready for rough roads and tough loads, as when he bought it six months, a year or two years ago.

Because he knows its durability; its sturdy, costly build, that makes repairs few and far between, of minor character and small cost.

Is it strange, then, that men should be enthusiastic about the Hup?

We think not; and any Hup owner or dealer you talk to will bear us out.

$1200 worth for $950

—And a better car in the bargain

ALL values are judged by comparison. You size up the worth and quality of any one article, by comparing it with several other similar articles. Then, and only then, you are in a position to make the most practical, intelligent and economical choice.

Therefore, before you choose your automobile, carefully compare the specifications, quality and equipment of the $950 Overland with the description of any of the $1200 cars. You'll find no material difference.

For instance:

The $950 Overland has a wheel base of 114 inches. A good many $1200 cars have even a shorter wheel base than this.

The $950 Overland has a thirty-five horsepower motor. Do you know of any $1200 car that can give you more power?

The $950 Overland has 33 inch x 4 inch tires. Again the same—in both size and quality—that you find on most $1200 cars.

The $950 Overland has electric lights throughout—exactly the same as any of the highest priced cars.

The $950 Overland is as roomy, comfortable and as luxuriously finished as any $1200 car.

The Overland equipment is just as complete, and of just as high a quality as the equipment of any $1200 car.

The steels used in the Overland are of the very highest grade; in fact the metals and materials used in the Overland are of the same quality as those found in the most costly cars in the world.

The Overland is just as accurately and precisely produced as any car on the market—regardless of price.

The more you compare this $950 car with cars costing 30% and even 40% more—the more you are brought to realize that to pay more than $950 for this type of car is absolutely unnecessary.

The Overland costs you less, because of our greater production.

Other manufacturers must charge you more, because of their smaller production.

And that is why the Overland is outselling every other similar car made. We are delivering 5000 Overlands a month right now.

Telephone our dealer for your appointment.

MOTOR CAR SELLING CONTINUES BRISK

Busy activity continued last week in St. Louis automobile circles and many sales were closed. Much attention is being attracted by the arrival of several of the 1915 models. Among the sales reported were 17 Oakland cars, disposed of at retail between May 13 and 20 by the Oakland Automobile Co. of which H. G. Sperreng is president.

T. J. Moss, a former automobile dealer, has purchased a Krit for Mrs. Moss from Albert Sterne, local agent.

The Peerless Motor Sales Co. sold three Peerless cars last week to St. Louis people.

Franklin cars were sold last week to E. C. Klipstein, 6244 Washington place, and A. Schafer, 4413 Pennsylvania avenue, by the Franklin Auto and Supply Co.

The Cabany Motor Car Co. sold a two-ton Indiana truck to the Carter Bros. Moving and Storage Co., East St. Louis, and a three-ton Indiana to the Commercial Acid Co. of St. Louis.

Meteor cars were sold last week by the Ideal Motor Sales Co. to Richard Crane, Eyrnesville, Mo.; Andrew Crane, same town; Rev. J. O'Leary, same town; John McMahon, 1909 Madison street. St. Louis; George Aff, 3539 Utah street; R. A. Peck, 6049 Cates avenue; H. Hillenkoetter, 1951 Warren street, and to C. T. Barr, Elkville, Ill., a shipment as sub agent.

The sales of Moon cars by the Moon Motor Car Co. were a light six to M. M. Cohen, 4418 Morgan street; a light six to W. C. D'Arcy of the D'Arcy Advertising Co.; a light six to S. W. Crawford, 3200 N. Broadway; a four to E. Sebastian of the Brown Paper Co.; a four to Carl Fritz, 3900 N. Broadway; a four to Louis Straub of the Loose-Wiles Biscuit Co., and a four to J. A. Marooney of Webster Groves.

The Post-Dispatch is the only evening newspaper in St. Louis that receives or publishes news gathered by the Associated Press.

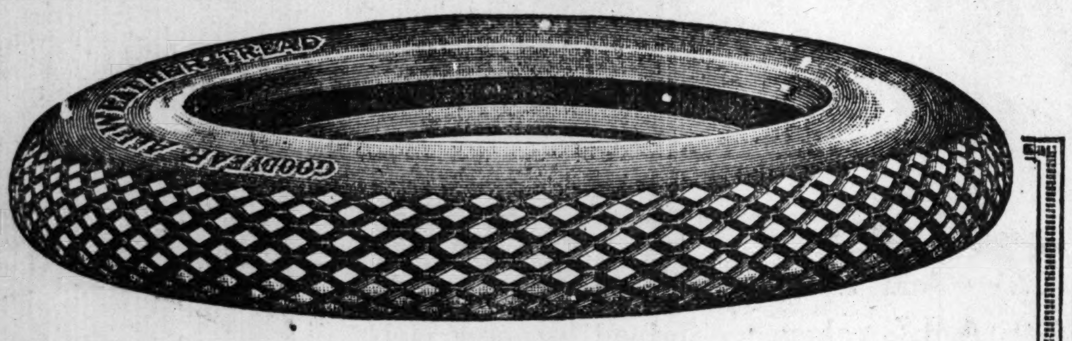
TELLS OF TIRE ABUSES

Everything that can happen to an automobile tire is vividly depicted by photographs and words in a series of pamphlets put out by the B. F. Goodrich company, Akron, O.

These pamphlets show the tire user what will happen to his tires if he persists in some forms of usage which are shown to be ruinous to the "show."

The bad effects of under-inflation excessive speeding (especially on truck tires), skidding because of locked brakes, faulty alignment, overloading and many other abuses are set forth in these pamphlets.

These little aids to tire care include a full line of information on truck tires, as well as pneumatics, so that they are of value to the business man who uses motor trucks as well as to the driver of pleasure cars. The pamphlets are sent to all motorists who ask the Goodrich company for them, and sets of them also are in the hands of the local branches.



Tires at One-Half

The One-Time Price for Goodyears

In 1909, No-Rim-Cut tires sold at nearly twice the prices of today.

Rubber cost has dropped since. But the great fact is that last year we made eleven times as many tires. In some single days we now build more than 10,000 motor tires.

This great demand has cut factory cost immensely. And our profit last year averaged only 6½ per cent.

16 Higher Prices

Now 16 makes of tires will cost you more than Goodyear prices—up to one-half more. And you are told, of course, that they are "quality tires."

But what is a quality tire?

It must, in these days, be a tire that can't rim-cut. And we control the only way to make a satisfactory tire of that type.

It must minimize blow-outs. We alone use the "On-Air" cure—at an extra cost of $1,500 daily. That's the only way to save the countless blow-outs due to wrinkled fabric.

It must resist tread separation. We alone use a patent method which reduces this danger 60 per cent.

And it must be efficient as an anti-skid. The most efficient is our double-thick All-Weather tread. And that alone gives an anti-skid all the smoothness of a plain tread.

This is Really the Quality Tire

Because of these features, No-Rim-Cut tires used to sell much higher than other standard tires. Because of these features, they have come to outsell any rival.

They hold top place in Tiredom. And this matchless prestige, after all these years, marks them the quality tire.

No tire is worth more than a Goodyear. In four ways—the four we mention—no tire is worth as much. Ask any user—he'll gladly confirm this.

World's Record TIRES

Increased demand in St. Louis and vicinity for Miller tires has resulted in the Phoenix Auto Supply Company carrying a complete stock of Miller tires in all sizes, as well as accessories and repair materials at the following addresses:

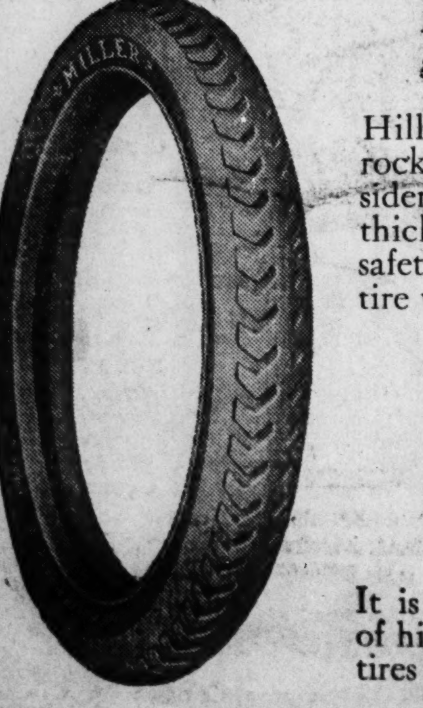
3974 Olive St., 3124 Locust St., 5887 Delmar Bl.

Miller Tire users experience no misgivings at entering rough country—

Hills, declines, mires, sands, ruts and rocky ways have all been amply considered, and the Miller geared tread with thick solid bars that bite their way to safety, makes a lasting all-the-year-round tire with perfect traction.

Some of the speed demons entered for the Indianapolis races May 30th, have pinned their faith in Millers, as these veterans of the road have not been misjudged so far, having carried to victory over many a hard-fought course.

It is the superior wear-resisting powers of high-grade rubber that makes Miller tires the best consideration for motorists.



EXPECT CONGRESS TO PASS SOME HIGHWAY LAW

A. A. A. Officials Confident Session Will Not End Without Some Measure for Federal Aid on Highways.

"That Congress will come through at this session with a good roads bill framed along practical lines seems highly probable. Congress is overwhelmingly in favor of good roads legislation. This is election year, and the members of Congress from rural districts fully realize that no single measure would endear them to their constituents to quite the same extent as an appropriation from the Federal treasury to help in the building of good roads."

This is the comment of George C. Diehl, chairman of the National Good Roads Board of the American Automobile Association, which is an active factor throughout the country in highways progress. Continuing, Mr. Diehl says:

"Out of the wilderness of good roads bills, the confusing array of statistics, the torrent of good roads oratory (intended primarily for home consumption), certain basic features have been evolved which will undoubtedly be incorporated in the legislation to be enacted this year.

Deals With States Only.

"The first essential feature is that the Federal Government shall deal with no political unit smaller than the state. There are nearly 3000 counties and 30,000 townships in the United States, thus making 33,000 units which the Federal Government must deal with if it undertakes to give Federal aid on a local basis. This, from an administrative standpoint, would be almost impossible, and certainly enormously expensive. From a political standpoint, the pressure which would be exerted upon the individual Congressman by the counties and townships in his district, each trying to get a hand into the Federal treasury, would be so persistent and so relentless that self-respecting men would throw up the job, leaving the field open to the political wire-pullers. The realization of these fatal defects in any plan of extreme localization renders absolutely certain the adoption of the state as the smallest unit.

"It may be accepted as equally certain that no Federal aid plan will receive the stamp of congressional approval unless it provides some measure of self-help on the part of the state. There are more than 2,250,000 miles of public road in the United States, and less than 10 per cent of this mileage can be dignified with the tilte, 'improved roads.'

Problem One of Selection.

"If the Federal Government should attempt to pay the entire cost of such construction or maintenance as it might undertake, it would be confronted with the problem of selecting from 2,000,000 miles of unimproved roads such small percentage as could be constructed or maintained without bankrupting the Federal treasury; or it would have to make its contribution for each mile of road so small as to accomplish no tangible results, and leave the roads at the end of a term of years no better than they were at the beginning of Federal aid.

"The present sentiment in congressional circles is for an automatic check upon Federal aid in the form of a state contribution; and this feature will undoubtedly be incorporated in legislation to be adopted. Gradually, the dangers of political abuse under the 'road rental' plan, to say nothing of its weakness as a means of bringing about tangible road improvements, have so impressed our legislators as to incline many former rental adherents to the 'co-operative' plan."

JUDGE WINS $5 BET

Judge Henry Pfeffle of the Second District Police Court forgot the rules of legal practice long enough last week to win a $5 wager from M. L. Weber of the Imperial Motor Co. Judge Pfeffle recently purchased an Imperial seven-passenger six and an Imperial roadster and presented himself for driving instructions. He had never driven a car before. He changed to the driving seat after 10 minutes' watching Weber operate the levers and wagered Weber that he could drive to Clayton without assistance. He won the bet easily and is exceedingly proud of it. He will use the small car for driving to his farm in Jefferson County during the summer season.

DEALERS "RAID" FACTORY

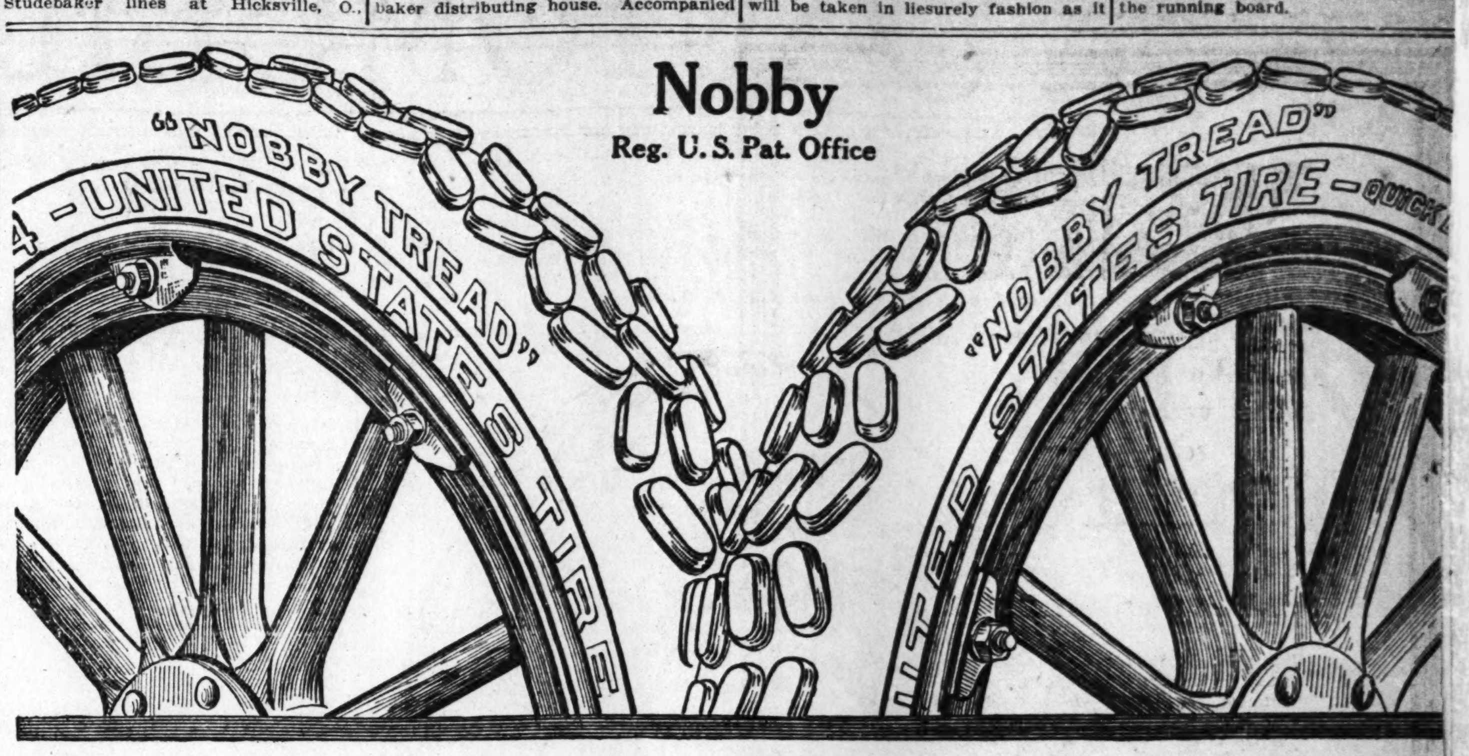
Next Wednesday the Overland factory will be the scene of an organized raid which will be unique in the history of the motor car industry. Some 300 Indiana dealers and their customers who have placed orders will descend upon the big plant and personally take delivery of 200 or more cars and drive them to their respective homes in the Hoosier State. Although the Overland factory is turning out 230 cars daily with clock-like regularity, the Hoosier dealers, led by representatives of the Gibson Automobile Co. of Indianapolis, State distributers for the Overland, decided not to wait until their allotments came through by freight, but to take delivery right at the factory and to drive the cars home over the roads.

VULCAN LINE ARRIVES

The Mogul Truck Sales Co., 1426 North King's Highway, distributors for the Vulcan pleasure cars, received their first carload of Vulcan roadsters the first of this week. This shipment consisted of four speedsters and immediately went to the subdealers in the tributary territory to be used as demonstrators. They expect the touring cars in within the next few days. The Vulcan Manufacturing Co. recently came out with the change in their specifications, stating that the touring cars will be equipped with a 3¾x5-inch motor and have 118-inch wheelbase, as well as the streamline body and one-man top.

LONG TOUR FOR HEALTH

D. Frank Bricker, agent for the Studebaker lines at Hicksville, O., stopped in St. Louis all day Thursday and visited the Weber Motor Car Co. and Carl G. Simon of the local Studebaker distributing house. Accompanied by Mrs. Bricker and their young son, he is enroute in a Studebaker six to New Mexico, via Kansas City. The trip will be taken in liesurely fashion as it is for the benefit of Mrs. Bricker's health. A complete camping outfit including tent is carried in the car and the running board.



Put Any Other Tire on the Other Wheel

Here is a simple, practical tire cost test.

It was suggested by one of the world's largest automobile manufacturers:

Buy two new tires—one a "Nobby Tread"—the other any make of tire you choose.

Put both on your rear wheels and check the tire cost of each wheel.

"Nobby Tread" Tires will solve any automobile owner's tire problems the day he decides to buy tires the way experts do, viz:—

On a Business Basis

Automobile owners everywhere are rapidly learning to buy tires on a real business basis, viz:—the basis of ultimate economy.

And remember this—investigations prove that with "Nobby Tread" Tires punctures are 90% less than with the average tire.

These are the reasons why "Nobby Tread" Tires are today the largest selling high-grade anti-skid tires in the world.

Based upon their remarkable mileage records

"Nobby Tread" Tires

are now sold under our regular warranty—perfect workmanship and material—BUT any adjustments are on a basis of

5,000 Miles

Thousands upon thousands of veteran motorists now use "Nobby Tread" Tires on their front and rear wheels through all seasons, because they give real anti-skid protection and the lowest cost per mile.

Winner of 500-Mile Race—1912

The National's winning of the 500-mile race at Indianapolis in 1912 was the climax of victory after victory—every one of them demonstrated under the severest conditions imaginable the perfection of National construction and the dependability of the National's excellence.

Since that time the National has not been entered in a race, and the car which won last year, and which will win this year will be the International Champion, but

No American or Foreign Car Has Equaled the Record Established by the National in 1912

Actual Running Average 81.72 Miles Per Hour
Breaking Previous Records 4.11 Miles Per Hour

The winning National broke competition records for 300 miles, and both time and competition records for every other distance up to and including 500 miles.

Clifford Garrison of the Phoenix Auto Supply Co. will start Sunday afternoon for Indianapolis, accompanied by William Frizzell, a Bosch magneto expert. They will make 10 stops in Illinois and Indiana to install Bosch outfits in Ford cars, reaching Indianapolis in time for the races.

L. M. Richmond of Houston, Tex., is spending a few days with the Mogul Truck Sales Co., sales agents for the Mogul truck, familiarizing himself with the heavy lumber trucks, with a view of taking charge of the trucks being put into service by the National Lumber and Creosoting Co., operating throughout Louisiana, Texas and Arkansas.

MOTORING EXPENSE IS COMING DOWN

That sales conditions in the automobile field have been widely affected by the recent cuts in the price of gasoline, oil, tires and other supplies is the declaration of Fred Weber of the Weber Motor Car Co., Studebaker representatives, who says that many recent Studebaker buyers are persons who have heretofore remained out of the market, due to their former belief that maintenance expense was greater than they could afford.

"I had this increased efficiency brought home to me quite forcibly by a personal friend," said Mr. Weber. "This man owned a heavy, costly car last year. He decided that the cost of maintenance was too high, and changed last winter to a Studebaker light 'six.'

"The change resulted in a greatly increased mileage for each gallon of fuel. This saving was rendered all the more emphatic by the fact that he is now paying 12 cents per gallon for gasoline, instead of 20.

"Though he has not yet bought any new tires, and expects to get much more than the guaranteed mileage out of his present set, he knows that, when the occasion arises, he can secure tires for his Studebaker 'six' at less than half the cost of those he bought for his last year's car.

"A satisfactory grade of lubricating oil can be bought for 25 per cent less than he paid a year ago, and goes infinitely further in supplying the needs of his car.

"And a feature of which he is not yet aware is the lowered cost of winter overhauling, adjustment and possible installation of repairs.

"His Studebaker 'six' is so designed that the owner himself, if he chooses, can take down any unit needing adjustment. If he has the work done at a garage, this merit is just as strong, as the amount of labor involved is comparatively small, delivery is prompt and the bill is accordingly reasonable."

SIOUX CITY EXPECTS FAST MOTOR RACING

The characteristic dare-devil-try of motor drivers will be modified by the restraining hand of caution when the speed boys of the rubber tire go on the fast two-mile dirt track of the Sioux City speedway the first four days of next July. While not presuming to set any speed limits on the entrants in the classic 300-mile event of July 4, the speedway association will join the Indianapolis speedway management in insisting on an enforcement of the rule that motor parts particularly subject to wear and tear must be new within two days before the event is run. While this is easily and readily done by the American drivers, foreigners are disposed to take the rule rather lightly and to hope it will not be enforced. They are likely this time to be required to submit to exactly the same requirements in this connection that Americans do.

The foreigners, however, will get some consolation if the arrangements can be made that are being proposed to get from the European racing authorities permission for drivers to use their European numbers in the racing here, as well as the numbers assigned by the A. A. A. If this is arranged, the records made on the Sioux City track will stand also in continental circles.

While a few entries have already been made for the July races, the Sioux City speedway management does not expect forfeits to be posted in any large number until after the Indianapolis races the last of this month.

SHOWING 1915 MODELS

The Lewis Automobile Co., Washington and Walton avenues, is showing the 1915 Stevens-Duryea, a model D touring car. Among the new features are one-man top, three-passenger front seat electric starter, adjustable rear seat, headlight dimmer, electric carburetor heater, left drive and left control and electric buzzer to warn of trouble in lighting circuit.

A Supreme Court to Judge Automobiles

If we had a supreme court of unprejudiced automobile engineers to pass down a decision on ideal specifications, you'd get a list about like this:

High speed, high efficiency motor of the continental type, Vanadium steel axles and drive shafts, imported annular ball bearings, electric starting and lighting system, Daimler leather couplings, Spicer universals, Rayfield carburetor, Bosch Duplex ignition, full floating rear axle, Rothschild body, and so on down the list.

These are the giants of the accessory world; no one questions that. They represent 100%.

Until the Jeffery Four appeared this year no moderate price car offered you such a combination of absolutely high grade materials and specifications. The Jeffery, at $1550, is America's first high grade car of quality and economy at a moderate price.

JAPAN AGREES TO ARBITRATION PACT OF UNITED STATES

Negotiations of Agreement Approved by Senate in February Are Completed.

TOKIO, May 23.—Japan has ratified the arbitration treaty with the United States, according to the official announcements made today.

The treaty ratified by Japan today is one of a number of similar tenor that have been negotiated by the State Department. The treaties were ratified by the United States Senate Feb. 22. The treaty pledges the contracting governments to arbitrate all questions excepting only those affecting vital interests, independence or national honor and the rights of third parties.

Bryan and French Ambassador Virtually Agree on Peace Treaty.

WASHINGTON, May 23.—Secretary Bryan and Ambassador Jusserand today virtually agreed upon terms of a peace treaty which shortly will be signed by the United States and France.

This convention will provide that all questions which cannot be settled by diplomacy shall be submitted to an international commission for investigation during a period of at least one year, during which hostilities shall not be entered into.

NEGROES TO SAIL TO FOUND AFRICAN COLONY

Party Made Up of Followers of "Chief" Sam and Skipper Is "Holy and Us" Member.

PORTLAND, Me., May 25.—The party of negroes assembled by "Chief" Alfred Charles Sam will sail next week to establish a colony on the Gold Coast of Africa, according to announcement made today. The steamer Curityba, chartered by Sam Laswir and brought here for overhauling, has been changed from Cuban to British entry, and now bears the name Liberia.

"We will first go to Norfolk to take on our bunker coal," said Sam, "and we will then head for Galveston, where many of the colonists are waiting for us. We will have accommodations for a few over 60."

Capt. McKenzie of the Holy Ghost and Us Society will be master of the steamer.

FOREST FIRES IN WASHINGTON DO HEAVY DAMAGE

Several Sections Burned Over in One County and Fish Hatchery Is Destroyed.

SEATTLE, Wash., May 23.—Fifty State rangers and others are combating a big forest fire near Twin, a little town west of Port Angeles, on the strait of Juan de Fuca, according to reports received by George C. Joy, chief warden of the association today.

Fire in Western Callam County, near Solduc, burned over more than five sections before it was controlled. There is prospect of rain tonight.

Fish Hatchery and Logging Camps Burned Near Bellingham, Wash.

BELLINGHAM, Wash., May 23.—Two forest fires which started today in this county have caused much damage. At Baker Lake the State fish hatchery was destroyed and many acres of timber burned. Two logging camps near Glacier suffered heavily. It was believed tonight, however, that the fires were under control.

VESSEL BURNS, CREW SAVED

Blaze Follows Wrecking of Greek Boat by Enemies.

KEY WEST, Fla., May 23.—The Greek schooner Amelia, a small vessel engaged in sponge fishing, was destroyed by fire seven miles from here today. The four members of the crew were taken off by a launch. The origin of the fire is not known.

The burning of the Amelia followed the earlier wrecking and sinking of a small Greek sponging vessel by sympathizers of a native sponge fisherman as a result of the activities of the Greeks.

LIVERPOOL HONORS DEAD AMERICAN OFFICIAL

Body of Former Consul General Lies in State in City Hall As Mayor Gaynor's Did.

LIVERPOOL, May 23.—Mrs. John Lewis Griffiths, widow of the late American Consul-General in London sailed for New York on the steamship Carmania today with her husband's body, which is to be buried in Brooklyn. On leaving London today she was accompanied to the boat train at Euston Station by American Ambassador Page and the staffs of the embassy and consulate. Arriving here, where Mr. Griffiths was Consul-General for four years before being promoted to London, the widow was received by town officials.

The body had preceded her and since yesterday had lain in state in the town hall, an honor never before accorded in the case of a foreigner except that of Mayor Gaynor of New York. Today the Lord Mayor escorted the body to the Carmania's docks.

The procession, headed by a large force of police, included, besides the foreign consular corps, many prominent representatives of London society and business.

LUDLOW WOMEN TELL SENATORS OF MINE BATTLE

One Says Guards Shot at Her as She Dragged Bodies of Three Dead Babies,

WASHINGTON, May 23.—Senators Kern, Kenyon and Martine gave an informal audience today to the three women who came to Washington in company with Judge Ben B. Lindsey, and who told the Senators of the tragedies of the battle of Ludlow on April 20.

Mrs. Holland, wife of a miner, said that as she was dragging the bodies of her three children out of the burning ruins of the tent colony, "men in uniform shot at the ground around her feet, "to make her dance," she thought.

Mrs. Pearl Jollie, also a miner's wife, who went through the Ludlow battle, said:

"I saw men in uniform dip brushes in buckets and swash something on the tents. I think it was oil."

"I did not see the men put oil on the tents," said Mrs. M. H. Thomson, another miner's wife, "but I did see men in uniform touch fire to the tents."

Senator Kern said after the hearing that, inasmuch as a committee of the House had investigated the strike, little remains for the Senate to do. Senator Martine said he might repeat the women's testimony to the Senate.

Two More Dead in Colorado Strike.

DENVER, Colo., May 23.—The death toll of the rioting and battles between the strikers and militia last month has been increased by two, according to reports today. The bodies of two men, supposed at first to be militia members, were found mutilated in the hills near Walsenburg. They have not been identified.

BOB FITZSIMMONS SUED; WIFE CHARGES CRUELTY

Declares Former Ring Champion Beat, Cursed and Failed to Suport Her.

CHICAGO, May 23.—Mrs. Julia Fitzsimmons today sued for divorce from Robert Fitzsimmons, former world's champion heavyweight pugilist. Her bill, filed in the Circuit Court, asks an injunction to restrain "Ruby Robert" from carrying out threats to kill her.

The suit comes as the culmination of a long series of difficulties, beginning shortly after their marriage, July 25, 1903, at San Francisco. They parted July 24, 1910, according to the divorce bill.

The differences of the Fitzsimmonses was aired in Chicago two years ago, when the irate husband beat a young University of Chicago student because he believed the boy too attentive to Mrs. Fitzsimmons. Mrs. Fitzsimmons charges that her husband kicked, beat, choked, cursed her and failed to provide for her. She is in Saginaw, Mich., playing in vaudeville.

Ex-Partner Attaches Fitzsimons' Property.

NEW YORK, May 23.—Bob Fitzsimmons, in a clash in the Supreme Court with John Meek, lost, as Meek got an order of attachment on the pugilist's property for $2100. Meek alleges that in December last he became Fitzsimmons' business partner in a theatrical venture.

After expending $1500 Meek declares Fitzsimmons got an engagement with a burlesque show in which he was to receive $600 a week, and Meek was to get half. Meek said Fitzsimmons turned over $300 each week to him until March 19, then cut off his remittances. Meek declares Fitzsimmons is seven weeks in arrears.

GIRL'S DEFENDERS IN FIGHT ON CAR, ARRESTED

Two Youths Resent Another's Allusion to Her as "Red Head" and Passengers Flee.

Two youths who, according to witnesses, went to the aid of a girl whom another boy was teasing by calling her "red head," were rewarded last night by being arrested on a charge of disturbing the peace on a Grand avenue car at Arsenal street.

Miss Anna Fry and Miss Lee Mistler, both of 3303 Meramec street, were passengers on the car. A youth whom they did not know, and who afterward said he was Chester Ford, 20 years old, of 4603 Labadie avenue, made audible allusions to Miss Fry's auburn locks.

He was commanded to desist by Cornelius Krone, 19, of 3126 Vine Grove avenue, and Raymond Kellerman, 16, 4563 St. Louis avenue, as they described themselves to the police. A fight resulted, many passengers fled from the car and the screams of the girls attracted policemen.

REED SCORES ZOO KEEPER FOR KILLING WILD MONKEY

Missouri Senator Ridicules Dr. Hornaday Who Criticised Him for Bird-Law Stand.

WASHINGTON, May 23.—The idea of Wm. T. Hornaday, director of the New York Zoo, as a protector of wild animals, was held up to ridicule by Senator Reed, of Missouri, in the Senate today, the Senator reciting extracts from Dr. Hornaday's book on his hunt for specimens in Borneo.

"Oh, Hornaday, why didn't you lower your gun then, as you would had you a spark of human feeling," Senator Reed commented after reading a description of his shooting and wounding the mother Orangoutang and of the flight of the terrified monkey with its almost human babe in its arms.

Senator Reed attacked Hornaday because the latter had criticized him for his stand against an appropriation to enforce the law to protect migratory birds, which Reed declared was unconstitutional, and could not be enforced.

BODY FOUND ON TRACKS

A few minutes after a Rock Island train passed Florissant avenue at 2 p. m. yesterday a body was found on the tracks. From papers in the pocket the body is supposed to be that of Burt Drewer of Forest, Ind. When the engine entered the yards at the Union Station a gray cap was found on the fender, and no hat or cap was found near the body.

It appeared that he was a workman employed nearby, as he was dressed in heavy working clothes. He was about 25 years old and wore a black mustache.

FALLS DEAD BEFORE WIFE

George Sayers, 52 years old, a photo-engraver for the Republic, died last night at 11 o'clock in his home at 5608 Garfield avenue. His wife was giving him a drink of water when he choked and fell to the floor dead. A doctor who was summoned diagnosed it as heart disease. About a month ago Sayers fell at work and suffered from a slight concussion of the brain and he had not worked since. He leaves a wife and a daughter 6 years old.

THOUSANDS GATHER AT W. U. PUBLIC RECEPTION

Noel Poepping's Band Plays Official March for Pageant Wins Applause.

The annual public reception given by the Washington University Association on the campus yesterday from 2:30 to 6:30 p. m., attracted a crowd of several thousands.

Dr. F. A. Hall, Acting Chancellor, had a strenuous day as chairman of the Reception Committee, and a constant group of visitors surrounded him as he stood in the archway of the main entrance dispensing hospitalities.

A diversified entertainment, consisting of a concert, musicale and athletic contests, furnished special features of the occasion.

Noel Poepping's band in the Quadrangle in front of the library building gave a program from 3 to 5 o'clock. An interesting number was the "Souvenir Pageant," which is to be the official march for the St. Louis Pageant. It was given its first public hearing and evoked enthusiastic applause.

Following a concert by the Glee and Mandolin Clubs and University Quartette in the Old Chapel, a number of athletic games were played, the feature of the greatest interest being the Freshmen-Sophomore Track Meet, for the Drosten Cup. This was captured by the Freshmen, the score standing 53 to 50.

The proposed Missouri Valley Championship tournament was transferred to the Triple A Grounds, and many of the guests followed the contestants.

One of the most enjoyable offerings of the afternoon was the musicale in Graham Memorial Chapel by Charles Galloway. He was assisted by Mrs. Morris Spyer, harpist, and Charles Kaub, violinist, as soloists.

JEFFERSON STATUE TO BE UNVEILED IN NEW YORK TUESDAY

Gift of Late Joseph Pulitzer Will Stand in Front of School of Journalism.

WORK OF W. O. PARTRIDGE

Columbia U.'s Alumni Weekly Pays High Tribute to Sculptor's Visualization.

y Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, May 23.—Impressive eremony will mark the unveiling, uesday afternoon, at 5 o'clock, of the tatue of Thomas Jefferson, for which oseph Pulitzer made provision in his ill. It was his desire that the statue hould "adorn some public place in ew York, the foremost democratic ity of this new republic," and as a ocation peculiarly adapted to the purose, the site chosen is before the chool of Journalism that Mr. Pulitzer stablished at Columbia. The day of he unveiling is the University's comnencement day.

The statue is the work of William Ordway Partridge. The figure is 9 feet in height, to which the pedestal and plinth will add 6 feet more.

On the front of the pedestal appears the single word.

JEFFERSON.

On the rear will be the equally simple inscription:

Presented by
JOSEPH PULITZER
To the City of New York.

It was Jefferson the thinker that Mr. Partridge set himself to portray. Nearly half of the two years that have elapsed since the commission was given to him was devoted to the study of his subject and to the search of the portraits that would give him the visualization he desired. His achievement has deeply impressed those who have seen it.

In the current issue of Columbia's Alumni Weekly, B. O. Flower says of the statue:

"Jefferson was, from early youth, noted for his courtesy, grace of bearing and delicate consideration for the feelings of others. And here the sculptor has subtly emphasized these fine qualities. One instinctively feels that this man could appear with ease and grace before the court of France without offending the most punctilious or showing the slightest evidence of servility, or in any way sacrificing the dignity or noble simplicity of the cult democratic.

"I think no one can fail to feel that Mr. Partridge has caught the true spirit of the great commoner. His bronze embodies the thinker, the practical idealist and the philosophical statesman, adequately shadowing forth the elements of greatness that made Thomas Jefferson one of the most commanding figures in one of the greatest epochs of modern history."

Contrast With Hamilton Statue.

When the statue has been unveiled it will stand in striking contrast with the figure of Hamilton, just across Southfield, which also was the work of Mr. Partridge. Hamilton reveals all the fire of the orator, as Jefferson shows reflective repose. There will then be four illustrations of Mr. Partridge's art at Columbia, for inside Hamilton Hall there is his engaging bust of Dean Van Amringe, while the decoration for the campus sun dial is his work.

Himself a product of Columbia, Mr. Partridge finds especial satisfaction in the selection of the site at the school of journalism. The Jefferson statue is the 137th of his works. The models for it were passed upon by Ralph Pulitzer and George L. Rives when the commission was given. The execution of the work was under the direction of the executors of Joseph Pulitzer's will—Messrs. Ralph Pulitzer, J. Angus Shaw, Frederick N. Judson and Carroll C. Rawlings.

800 KNIGHTS TEMPLARS EXPECTED AT CONCLAVE

Delegates Will Be Here From 66 State Commanderies and From Other States.

The fifty-third annual conclave of the Grand Commandry of the Knights Templar of Missouri will be held at the Planters Hotel Tuesday and Wednesday. Delegates are expected from 66 commanderies in Missouri, as well as delegates from other grand jurisdictions of the United States, which will probably make the total attendance about eight hundred.

Right Eminent Sir Gib. W. Carson, past grand commander of Missouri, and the Eminent Sir W. Y. Bean, grand inspector and instructor, will have charge of the reception and entertainment of the visitors.

Sessions will begin at 10 a. m. Tuesday. Right Eminent Sir William H. Glancy, grand commander of Missouri, will preside and will deliver his annual report and address.

Full dress Knights Templar ball will be given as the closing event of the day, at the Planters Hotel, at 9 o'clock.

Among the officers who will attend the meeting are William T. Durbin, former Governor of Indiana, who will represent the grand commandry of his state; L. B. Newby, former Judge of the Supreme Court of Indiana and grand junior warden of the Grand Encampment of the Knights Templar, and Stuart I. Pierson, grand commander of the Knights Templar of Illinois.

The Knights Templar have a membership of about 5000 in the State, 2500 of which is in St. Louis.

Band Concert at Barracks Today.

The Depot Band of Jefferson Barracks will give a concert on the parade grounds, today, commencing at 3 p. m. Concerts will be given on Monday and Wednesday evenings at 7 o'clock throughout the summer.

GENTLENESS AND BEAUTY LURE THE COCHIN BREEDERS

Partridge Variety Is Difficult to Bring to Type of Remarkable Plumage.

The Cochins are, next to the Brahmas, the largest of all chickens. They belong to the Asiatic class, as do the Brahmas and Langshans. The Cochin weights are, cocks, 11 pounds; cockerels, 9 pounds; hens, 8½ poungs; pullets, 7 pounds.

There are four varieties of the Cochin breed: Buff, partridge, white and black The buff and partridge are most common. The white and black cochins are rarely seen.

Cochins furnish a splendid illustration of the fancier's art. When first brought to this country, instead of being close to the ground as they now are, they were long in legs and scantily feathered. They could, we are told, eat off of a three-foot table and their giraffe-like proclivities furnished material for the cartoonist. The partridge Cochin hen illustration shows what the Cochin has become. This hen is a wonderful specimen of her breed. She approaches perfection in Cochin shape. She has the full round breast—it might be a trifle fuller and lower—the small, neat head and comb, the cushioned back, the slightly drooping, short tail, the fluffiness of feather all over, the abundance of fluff proper, the great development of leg and toe feathering and the short legs. You can hardly see under a specimen like this.

I have seen this hen. She was a winner of first prize at Chicago and at other shows. I never saw a finer Cochin in the partridge variety, though I have seen a few buffs that were somewhat better in Cochin characteristics. In the Cochin you want all the characteristics of the breed as named above exaggerated, especially the soft, abundant feathering—the more of it the better. Other things being equal, the more heavily feathered specimen wins.

Feathers Go With Cochins.

Some persons may object that they don't want a bird with so much feathers, that it is not desirable on various grounds. Very well, in that case you do not like the Cochin. These qualities may not be to your liking but they make up the Cochin and they are the qualities Cochin breeders are seeking.

A Cochin that is "right" is a wonderful show bird. Their abundance of long, soft feathering makes them appear to be even larger than they are. They often appear to fill completely a coop of regulation size in the showroom. They appear sometimes to be larger than the Brahmas because the Brahma is more closely feathered.

The Cochins have merit as a useful fowl. It is rarely claimed that they are as good a fowl for the farmer as some others. They stand cold weather well. They are confined by a three-foot fence. They bear close confinement. They are gentle and are superior table fowls. I read the statement recently that the flesh of the Cochin is coarse. That is far from the truth.

It must be admitted that the extreme feathering sought, together with the shortening of the body, has decreased the utility value of the cochin to come extent. The Cochin can no longer be said to be a popular fowl. It is not so popular as its merits demand. It would just suit the requirements of some suburban poultry raisers.

"Original Patridge" Fowl.

The color of the black and white Cochins is indicated by their names. The buff Cochin, as all other buff fowls, is a soft, bright, even, golden buff throughout.

The partridge color is a complex color, seen in the "partridges" of different breeds, though the partridge cochin is the original "partridge" fowl. The color of the male and female is quite unlike. The plumage of the male's head is bright red. The eyes are bay or reddish bay. The plumage of the neck is bright red with a black strip running down the middle of each feather. The wings are complex in color. The bows are red, black in front. The main wing feathers, or primaries, are black with bag on the lower edge of each feather. The secondaries are black, with the outside web red ending in black at end of each feather. There is a "bar" of greenish black across the outside of the wing when folded. The back is red. The saddle feathers are similar to the neck or hackle feathers. The main tail feathers are black. The breast is a glossy, greenish black. The shank plumage is black or brownish-black. The plumage of the toes is the same.

The plumage of the head of the female is mahogany or mahogany brown. the neck is similar to the neck of the male. Of the plumage in general, especially back and breast and surface of wing, it may be said that it is mahogany pencilled with black. The under color throughout is slate. The tail is black, the two top feathers being penciled with mahogany. No color is more beautiful than the partridge color, but it's not an easy color to breed.

Poultry Problems Solved.

Book on Turkeys.

Will you please tell me where I can obtain a book on raising turkeys? J. F., East St. Louis.

The U. S. Department of Argriculture publishes several phamplets on raising turkeys which you can obtain through your congressman or on application to the Superintendent of Documents, Washington. Also the general poultry supply dealers of St. Louis handle books of this kind. The advantage of buying through a house of this kind is that they sell only such books which they know to be worthy.

White Rock Eggs.

Can you tell me where to obtain white rock eggs for hatchings ? Mrs. W. S. Ottumwa, Io.

The advertising columns usually carry ads from white rock growers. If not, several of the advertisers offer any kind of eggs, guaranteed. Any reliable poultry supply house will furnish standard eggs that they know to be from approved strains.

Eggbound Chicks.

Can you tell me why my chicks do not come out of the shell? I set eggs under hens that were one to three weeks old. The hens apparently did their duty well, leaving the nest only four to seven times during the three weeks. I placed 52 eggs under four hens. I have nine chicks. Four eggs were rotten, eight infertile. The rest could not get out of the shell. I broke them on the 22nd day. Some were alive. Others seemed too weak to help themselves out of the shell. In my flock I have a hen that doesn't have scaly legs and yet she limps. The male bird cannot bear the sight of her.—J. R., St. Louis.

Failure of chicks to come out of the shell appears to be more common than usual this spring. This is due to so many causes that I cannot tell what the difficulty is in your case. Eggs three weeks old are a little stale for sitting. The fresher the better. Still I do not think this is the chief difficulty. Your feeding system appears excellent. Some would maintain that your hens sat too closely and that they should have come off the nest every day and yet I doubt whether this caused the poor hatch. It was doubtless due to a weakness of the germs but to tell what caused this weakness is not easy. The male bird often appears vigorous and yet he may not fertilize the eggs strongly enough, due to constitutional weakness which cannot be cured. Some of the most experienced and successful poultry raisers I know of have had the same trouble this spring and they cannot locate the difficulty.

With regard to the lame hen, it is impossible for me even to guess the cause of the regard to the lame hen, it is impossible for me even to guess the cause of the male bird. Many fowls do not like other fowls that are abormal. Males sometimes manifest a dislike for a hen without any apparent cause.

Nonsitting Flock.

I have 24 Plymouth Rock hens and 12 Minorcas penned in a scratching shed 7 by 50 feet. They average 22 eggs per day. Is that a fair average? I feed about two bushel boxes of lettuce each day, two quarts of mixed grain at five in the morning and two quarts at three in the afternoon in deep straw litter. also three quarts of dry mash. They eat it all but still appear hungry. Do I feed enough? Do I feed too much lettuce? They are all in good health. I have not had a sitting hen all spring. Can you tell why?—C. M., St. Louis.

Your are feeding liberally and well and you are getting good, fair results. I assume you are supplying plenty of grit. As to failure of the hens to sit, that is to be expected from the Minorcas. They are poor sitters. I do not know why the Plymouth Rocks do not sit. I should judge that they laid little or none in the winter and that they are making up for it now. Often hens that have not laid during the winter have a long siege of laying in the spring before they become broody. I think you cannot feed too much lettuce. Still I should think half the amount you are feeding would be sufficient.

Head Twitching.

I have had chicks hatched from both incubator and hens that threw their heads back as soon as they are hatched. My rooster is a black minorca, mated to black minorca hens. My hens' droppings are very soft, sometimes nearly all water. I feed oats, a little corn, commercial chicken feed, beef scrap, and plenty of table scraps.—E. T. B., St. Louis.

The first question is quite indefinite. You don't say what the chickens do besides throw their heads back. Do they recover? I assume that they do not. I wish I could tell you what to do for such chicks, but I cannot. The difficulty is not uncommon. The remedy must be preventive and must lie in correct feeding and care of the breeding stock. There is some weakness somewhere that causes the trouble, but I cannot say what it is. As to the droppings, there may be here some cause not mentioned in your letter—I mean some conditions in the care, housing or water. Chickens that are confined are not kept in a natural condition. Chickens that have the run of a farm largely choose and balance their own ration. Under confinement we must do that for them. You may feed enough meat, but you may be not. Try a little more. Perhaps you are feeding too heavily. Try cutting down the ration somewhat. Keep charcoal before the fowls all the time.

P. H. M., Greenville, S. C., and Mrs. A. H. D., Yates City, Ill., see answer to Mrs. W. S., Ottumwa, Io.

Soft-Shelled Eggs.

I have six hens and a cockerel about a year old. One of the hens lays soft-shelled eggs, mostly with yolks alone, no shell nor white. She is determined to eat the egg. I have a brood of chicks seven weeks old. They never had a mother. I cannot keep them covered. How old must they be to roost?—Mrs. G. W., St. Louis.

This doesn't seem to be a case of merely laying soft-shelled eggs. Are you sure she does not lay a complete egg, minus the shell? May be you are mistaken about that. If it is not a complete egg aside from the shell, there is some diseased condition which cannot be cured. Soft shell eggs are caused by overfat condition or by a deficiency of mineral matter in the ration. Vary the ration. Feed plenty of oyster shell, grit, and broken egg shells. If the bird is not valuable, I should dispose of her, for the other hens will learn the egg-eating habit from her. Keep porcelain eggs in the nest, or try an egg shell on this hen stuffed with meal heavily mixed with red pepper. Your little chicks do not need to be covered at this season, and at that age. Don't cover them if they don't want to be covered. There is no precise age when chicks roost. It depends largely on the variety. Asiatics, for instance, do not roost so early as leghorns. Don't hurry them about roosting.

Tongue Tips.

Nearly all my grown chickens have a hard white tip or "pip" under their tongues. They look well and don't seem to be sick, but they don't eat well. If I do not pull the pip off the tongue they die. As soon as I find a chicken refuses to eat, I catch her and find this pip under and on the point of the tongue. Sometimes it will come on again. Pulling it off makes her tongue blunt, and the bird cannot pick grain very fast. I feed my chickens on table scraps from three families.—Mrs. M. F. G., Pine Bluff, Ark.

I am inclined to think you have not gotten at the reason for the trouble. Perhaps you over feed. It is easy to do this when you feed table scraps. I feed them myself, but I do not like to have as much as half the feed made up of table scraps. I wonder if you are not in error about that tip on the tongue. Are you sure it is not the natural tip that is put there to protect the fowl's tongue? This natural hard tip can, at any rate, be pulled off quite easily. I have known of cases in which the breeder pulled this tip off thinking it didn't belong there. I believe something else is the cause of your trouble. Try a little lighter ration of the table scraps.

Lame Pigeon.

Can you tell me what is the matter with my pigeon's leg? It has turned black and is so stiff that it cannot bend the toes and must walk on the middle one.—P. A. E., St. Louis.

This is a case where one should have to see the pigeon to form an opinion as to the cause of the difficulty. I suppose it is either an injury or rheumatism. From the description I believe it has gone so far that there is now no remedy. Try confining the pigeon in a small coop, keep the leg clean, rub with some good liniment, feed generously with green stuff.

Feather Pulling.

I have same Hamburgs that are losing feathers from their necks, breasts and tails, just as though something had bitten them off. Can you tell me anything that will stop this?—Mrs. D. R. P., Hutchinson, Kan.

The birds pull each other's feathers. Several of them may be guilty, or it may be one only. If it is the latter, separate it from the flock. Small fowls, like Hamburgs and Leghorns, are likely to fall into this habit when confined and when not properly fed. Feed more meat, green stuff, grit, oyster shell. Feed a greater variety. Give your birds more exercise if you can. Be sure they are as free from lice as possible.

FOWLS DESERVE A COMFORTABLE ROOST FOR NIGHT

Plenty of Air and an Absence of Mites Aids Both the Chickens and Owner.

To do their best, birds should be comfortable by night as well as by day. It is at night that the bloodthirsty mites come from their hiding places and attack the fowls while on the roosts. Lice are at work continuously, but they are hardly as much to be feared as the mites which get in most of their deadly work during roosting hours. Clean, whitewashed quarters, frequently fimigated with sulphur, will solve the mite problem.

It is a very common sight in the country to see an entire farm flock roosting in the trees or elsewhere outside of buildings. In most cases this simply means that the chickens are better judges of proper roosting conditions than their keepers. The winter quarters, in many instances, are bad enough, but when warm weather comes, there are thousands of farm poultry houses that become nothing more than pestholes. Deep in filth, stuffy and unventilated, with walls, roosts and nestboxes uncleaned, and all kinds of vermin running riot. It is no wonder the birds seek roosting quarters elsewhere.

Aside from cleanliness there are a number of things that can be done to make the quarters more comfortable at night. Roosting poles should all be on a level so as to prevent overcrowding, as the birds will always hunt for the highest perch. Be sure there is enough roosting room. There is no necessity of having the perches up high. Eighteen inches above the floor or dropping-board is high enough. High roosts are a very common cause of the ailment known bumble-foot. In jumping to the floor from a high perch a bird will frequently receive a bruise in the sole of the foot, which, in turn, is the beginning of most cases of bumble-foot.

Then there is the lack of ventilation There is no need of being afraid there will be too much ventilation in the summer time. Take out the windows and the doors, if necessary, and let the wind blow through. If there is danger of thieves or prowling animals, bar the windows, and have an inside frame of bars or heavy woven wire to replace the door in case that opening is needed for ventilation.

All these considerations thus far have been merely for the fowls. But whatever is done for the comfort of the flock, is, at the same time, done for the comfort and convenience of the attendant as well. And when one reflects that the women folks are the sole care-takers of nine-tenths of the flocks, it is plain that many a man is shirking a two-fold duty.

WHERE TO TAKE MY BEST GIRL.

Poultry Notes

Do not open the door of the incubator at hatching time. Better let the little fellows gasp a little for breath. It will not hurt them, but a direct draft of air will hurt them at this time.

In order to succeed with poultry as with anything else, you must be on the job.

If you feed the old hen just enough to keep her alive and kicking, she will not lay eggs, and you don't deserve to get any. Feed well and generously. The hen lays eggs through her mouth.

The worst robbers of hen roosts are lice and vermin.

Crop Suggestions for Chickens' Green Feed

Cabbage and Roots Are Appreciated as Well as the Grain Forage.

If the ground is available it will pay well to plant a few crops especially for poultry feed next winter. Some of these crops may be planted now and others a little later.

Cabbage and mangels can be started now and root crops like turnips and ruta bagas should be started about the middle of the summer or a little earlier. It is also a good plan to put out a few seeds of large, tame sunflower. Many poultrymen feed these at moulting time and believe them to be especially adapted for the birds' needs at that period. Plant them along the garden fence.

Good crops for green feed in summer and fall, when poultry must be kept confined, are oats, rye, rape, lettuce and similar succulent forage plants. A succession of these crops will furnish a constant supply of green picking. Rye is perhaps best when sown in early fall to furnish green picking for winter. Rape and oats may be sown almost any time. Rape is no doubt the best crop for summer as it can stand a lot of dry weather and will grow rapidly in spite of adverse conditions. It is good feed for poultry, too, on account of its succulence and flavor which the chickens seem to like.

Change the Scratching Litter Often in Summer

Refuse Taken From Pens of Confined Chickens Should Be Burned.

If scratching litter is still used at this time of year (and it should be unless the flock has plenty of free range) it needs to be changed more frequently than during cold weather. Dampness and filth will soon contaminate the litter these warm days, affording a breeding place for vermin and favorable conditions for disease germs to develop and infect the birds at work in the litter.

It is a good plan to sprinkle a small quantity of some good disinfectant over the litter occasionally, which will help to keep it sanitary. But the important thing is, not to let the straw remain too long and when it is removed burning or plowing it under is the safest disposition to make of it.

THE MOST POPULAR FEATURE IN TOWN

In the "movie" line is the "Moving Picture" column, first page, today's POST-DISPATCH big Real Estate and Want Directory.

Boiled Rice Is an Excellent Diarrhea Preventive.

Perhaps the best preventive of diarrhea in chicks, so far as feeds are concerned, is boiled rice. It acts as a regulator for the bowels and in so doing the diarrhea germ is not given an opportunity to get in its work. The best way to prepare the rice is to boil it until the water has all been absorbed or boiled out. Enough water should be put on the rice so that by the time it has boiled away the kernels of rice will have been softened. A feed of this once or twice a week is sufficient. Give it to the chicks in a clean vessel, not on the ground, and remove the remainder after the chicks have had all they wanted of it.

Swat the surplus rooster. He is eating his head off, keeping down the laying of the hens and fertilizing market eggs that will spoil long before they ought to spoil.

If the henhouse is convenient there is a saving of labor in caring for the flock and there is greater pleasure in poultry keeping.

GERMOZONE'S Big Value

is not so much in its great efficiency as a remedy for roup, canker, chicken pox and other diseases of poultry, but it is the greatest bowel regulator in the world for either poultry or stock (including pet stock), counteracting, especially, bowel troubles due to musty, spoiled or improper food. With man, fowls or animals, regular bowels means health. Continued irregularity means some sickness, difficult to cure if not fatal. Thousands give Germozone regularly twice a week to chickens, young and old, at the same time having it ever handy as a ready remedy for other diseases. Sold by dealers or postpaid. One size only, 50 cents.

SUNDAY POST-DISPATCH'S REVIEW OF MARKET CONDITIONS

GOLD EXPORTS TO EUROPE FAIL TO DEPRESS STOCK VALUES IN WALL STREET

Active Traders Also Ignore the New Haven Investigation.

LONDON TRADE IS QUIET

Foreigners Are Not Certain Over Future of Money Market.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, May 23.—The Evening Post, in its copyrighted weekly financial review today, says:

"It is to be hoped that Mr. Mellen's testimony, as to what got the New Haven into trouble, may be supplemented by the testimony of some one else. Mr. Mellen's narrative of some extraordinary things that were done with the New Haven's money was so undoubtedly interesting that most people have not observed how little light his explanations threw on why certain "deals" and purchases were contemplated at all.

"The general result of his testimony was to present a picture, which might easily appear to show concerted and deliberate plundering of the property by other people, while Mr. Mellen, as its president, looked on with mild disapproval, shook his head when he heard of the misuse of the corporation's money, and sometimes went so far as to ask the reason for it.

"Perhaps there is nothing to be added to this picture; but it must be described as somehow giving a sense of incompleteness. It is quite impossible to gather what Mr. Mellen really thought of the whole performance.

"So far as his testimony threw any light on how the New Haven's money had been wasted and its credit shaken, it was careful to place the full burden of blame on Mr. Morgan. Yet, having explained with great circumstantiality and detail, how some fifty millions was, in his judgment as the president of the road, entirely thrown away under Mr. Morgan's auspices, Mr. Mellen rounded up his testimony by declaring that the troubles of the company were due to Mr. Morgan's death, and that had he lived and continued to control its policy, the New Haven would still be paying dividends.

The New Haven Problem.

"But this is manifestly nonsense. Either Mr. Mellen's testimony as to facts, or his inference from the facts, is unworthy of respect; for the two are wholly incompatible.

"If it is meant that, had Mr. Morgan lived, the New Haven presidency would have remained in Mellen's hands, and that Mr. Mellen, in the presidency, would have gone on paying dividends, that at least would have been intelligible.

"During the last six years in which the company paid dividends, the annual reports confessed some $10,000,000 deficit, and the expert accountant who examined its books for the Interstate State Commission held that, in all, $60,000,000 unearned dividends had been paid. Undoubtedly Mellen, with a longer term, might have continued to increase that deficit.

"This, however, would scarcely have solved the New Haven's problem. Nor would the funding into bonds, of what Mr. Mellen calls the New Haven's $375,000,000 floating debt, have helped, if the policy of reckless extravagance in capital expenditure, which had been the characteristic of his whole regime, had been continued.

"What is most evident, at this juncture in the inquiry, is that the whole story of the wrecking of the New Haven property has not yet been told. When the full details of the transactions, partly dragged already into public view, are known, we shall be able to see even more clearly than before, what was the real nature of that 'new financial era' which began in 1901.

Gold Exports Are Heavy.

"That the continuing large outflow of gold is itself primarily an index to the reduced activity of general trade at home, is plain enough. To that extent, it merely illustrates conditions, which were fully known before. This is one reason why the financial markets have thus far discussed the movement with comparative indifference.

"There are two other reasons for that attitude—the market's knowledge that our total home supply of gold is not actually decreased by the movement, but only that the rate of annual increase is made smaller, and the further knowledged that when the gold sent out is hereafter actually needed, to provide reserves against reviving activity in finance and trade, it will speedily be brought home.

"A large gold export movement has not, in fact, excited any real apprehension in financial circles, since our currency was safeguarded, on the basis of certain gold redemption, by the act of 1900.

"Before that legislation—which is properly supplemented by the terms of the new banking and currency act, persistent gold outflow often meant: First, that our currency supply was itself improperly regulated, and, second, and of more importance, that the Government's redemption facilities were threatened.

"The outward movement of this season in no respect presents that possibility. It is more normal, from a strict economic point of view, than the fact that England's April gold export movement was $11,500,000 greater than in 1913.

"In this country the outflow would be very promptly checked, if request for capital to use in trade should increase. The real phenomenon of the moment is the absence of such demand, and the inactivity of trade that causes it.

"Prices on leading shares were fractionally higher on the week. Yesterday's market was firm."

MONEY OUTLOOK IS FACTOR IN LONDON

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

LONDON, May 23.—Considerable interest has been taken this week in the unusually high rates reached by your exchange market. Until a comparatively recent date your market appeared to have abnormally large credit balances here, attracted by our relatively higher money market. It was also believed that your bankers were keeping large liquidation resources at home, against the subscription of capital to the new Federal reserve banks.

Recently, however, you seem to have drawn the foreign balances almost dry. The movement of exchange against New York, is also due to absence of your usual finance bills, drawn in anticipation of your autumn harvest requirements.

Unless these drafts on London presently put in an appearance it is believed that your market must continue losing gold. As to the question whether you can spare the gold without inconvenience, experts differ rather curiously. Anglo-American houses assert that you can lose £5,000,000 sterling comfortably, but English banks think differently, and argue that, while the tendency to your new bank act will undoubtedly be to effect economies in the use of gold, really heavy loss just now would not be a good prelude to the inauguration of the system.

On the other hand, if New York were to ship gold freely to London, it would undoubtedly help our market's position. But our troubles are not primarily monetary, but financial and political. The financing involved by recent stock exchange embarrassments is becoming complicated.

Continental markets are pessimistic, so far as sentiment goes, and the bears are active.

Therefore, while any favorable developments might occasion a sharp spurt in prices, the numerous really aggravating causes would remain. Brazilian and Mexican uncertainties keep Paris weak, and we are unpleasantly affected by home politics.

Both English parties no doubt really desire to keep the peace in Ireland, but the Ulster situation comes repeatedly near to actual danger of an armed collision. Moreover, economic factors, such as slackening trade, even if they help our money situation, have some inevitable adverse effects on the Stock Exchange.

The question what influence your expected abundant crops will have is complicated in our view by doubt as to how far the liquidation caused by poor business and the prolonged era of new security issues must go. It is also naturally the disposition here to lay stress on the influence of social unrest fomented by professional agitators.

MARKET IS SLOW ON BEST QUALITY OF BEEF CATTLE

Big Run of Texas Grassers Affects the Entire Line of Higher Grade Stock.

Receipts National Stock Yards.

	This week.	Year Ago.
Cattle	11,516	9,998
Hogs	30,330	35,125
Sheep	16,110	15,067

Receipts of native cattle for the current week show very little change from the preceding week or from a year ago. An increase in the aggregate offerings, however, was caused by heavy Texas receipts. General quality of native fat steer and heifer offerings this week was hardly up to the recent standard, although several droves of good cattle were included. The market on heavy finished steers, also on medium grades of cattle, ruled quite sluggish, with buyers bearish in the extreme. It took a right nice class of fat, heavy steers to command $8.75, while pretty good kinds were selling at $8.50. Buyers were partial to yearlings and gave strong prices for the trim light weights, which sold in many instances at $9.

The butcher cattle market, except for very choice, handy weight heifers, was affected by the larger runs of Texas grassers. Medium-fleshed and heavy, fat heifers were slow sale and 10c to 15c lower. Prime light-weight heifers held strong, with a top on straight loads of heifers at $8.75.

Cows in Sharp Slump.

Cows came in for more punishment at the hands of buyers this week than any other class of cattle, dropping 15c to 25c on general runs and 25c to 40c in extremes. This applies to fleshy grades of cows that come in competition with southern grass steers. Canners' cows held about steady.

Bulls were steady to 10c lower.

Veal calves opened strong, but dropped 25c to 50c late Tuesday. Wednesday they held steady.

The stock cattle trade was on a 15c to 25c lower basis this week, it taking a right good grade of stockers to bring $8. The dry weather throughout Missouri and Southern Illinois the past three weeks has played havoc with the stock cattle demand. General rains would greatly relieve the condition of the market.

For the first half of this week right at 175 cars of Southern cattle have come to market, mostly South Texas grassers. These sold largely at $7 to $7.65, with fed steers from that State bringing $7.85. Market ruled steady to a dime lower. The offering out of canner territory, or the southeastern states, has been very light. Market on a nominal basis. One lot of Texas gross steers made a high record for prices at $8.25@8.40.

The receipts of hogs were a little better than for a long time, with the exception of the previous week. The market was on a steady basis all week and was a dime higher than the previous week. The top hovered pretty close to $8.60 all week, while the bulk of the hogs that classed as reasonably good went at 8.45@8.55, and they found ready sale.

Shippers and city butchers were right good buyers for the good quality hogs weighing 180 lbs. and over, but they would not so much as even make an offer for the plain kinds. They paid $8.45 and up as a rule for their hogs, but took the pick. Packers were inclined to be a little bearish most of the week, but still obtained a good share of the offerings.

Packers paid $8.25@8.50 for the plain and mixed grades as a rule, while they took the rough throwout old sows and stags at $7.85@8.10, but they paid well up around the top of the market for good stags. Best lights under 165 lbs. sold at $8.30@8.55, fair grades $8@8.25, best pigs under 125 lbs. $7.85@8.15, fair to medium grades $7.25@7.75, and the poor kinds $6.50@7.

Sheep Lower at Week-End.

A right good supply of sheep was received each day and there was a larger proportion of them spring lambs than any week so far this year and from now on the number will increase. Several loads of native fed Western lambs were received and there were a few received from Colorado, but it is likely that but few more will be received this year from this part of the country.

Good fat spring lambs found ready sale at $9.35@9.90; fair to medium kinds, $8.50@9.25, and the culls and other poor stock, $7@8. Clipped lambs sold largely at $7.85@8.25, if good, and others $7.35@7.75. Most of the mutton sheep went at $5.50, but some of the best the fore part of the week brought as much as $5.75. The latter part of the week heavy offerings went at $5@5.25.

Choppers and good stockers were ready sellers at $3.75@4.35; fair kinds, $3@3.65, and the good fat bucks at $4.50@4.75, the same as the two previous weeks. The close of the week was not on quite as good a basis as the opening, but the offerings were well cleaned up each day.

COTTON SUFFERS A SEVERE SETBACK FROM COOL NIGHTS

East of the River District, Previously in Fine Shape, Is Getting Late.

The weather during the week has been decidedly unfavorable for cotton over the entire belt. The excellent conditions that existed in the Atlantic and Gulf states were reassuring and rather tended to neutralize, as far as prices were concerned, the very poor condition of cotton in Texas and Oklahoma. But now come reports from all these states of temperatures that are too cool for germination and growth and in some states serious lack of moisture.

These reports are from Washington and are unbiased. The weekly United States report, under date of May 19, may be referred to without question because the weather since that time has been almost exactly a continuation of that existing prior to the report.

North Carolina is not in bad condition, but needs rain and slightly warmer nights. In South Carolina there have been a few showers, but general rains are badly needed and seed has not properly germinated either in the case of the first planting or of replanting. Alabama reports "dry and unusually cool weather, with abundant sunshine. Cotton generally shows a good stand, but cool nights retard its growth."

Mississippi Needs Warmth.

Mississippi: "Crop growth was retarded by cold, dry weather, but not permanently injured if warm weather and rain follow. Late planted cotton is not coming up.": Louisiana: "Cotton is doing fair in the south, but is from two to four weeks late in the north and dying in some localities on account of cold." Texas: "The week was wet and cool, delaying cultivation and planting. Cotton is decidedly late and thick with weeds; some planting is not yet done in northern sections. It is beginning to bloom in the Rio Grande Valley, but the boll weevil is appearing there and in the Southwest."

In Arkansas and Tennessee the weather was said to be too cold and dry for cotton. Oklahoma: "It was too cold and wet for cotton and some must be replanted."

Under such conditions, unless speedily corrected, much acreage will of necessity be abandoned because it is doubtful if sufficient fertile seed for a second replanting is easily obtained.

Prices in the future markets have advanced from $3 to $4 a bale for the new crop positions, the difference between the summer and winter months narrowing sharply. Spot markets have advanced quotations all the way up to half a cent a pound and there is a decidedly better demand for cotton.

Sales Are Heavier.

Sales have been quite large and sellers are not making concessions to effect sales even on the lower grades, while the good grades are taken with avidity. As is usually the rule, the advancing market is a great stimulus to buyers and the demand is increasing as the market goes higher. It may be noted that quotations in Liverpool extend well into next summer. This in the past few years has indicated increased interest in the market.

Mills in this country have not been cheerful over the business outlook, but in Europe things have been better, especially in Great Britain. The pessimism of domestic mills, however, is at times misleading and it would seem that the acquisition of a mill and an unhappy disposition is simultaneous.

In the export end of the dry goods market there is nothing doing, but stocks of goods are not large and a better demand from exporters would permit considerable activity among the mills.

Spinners have had to reduce the price of their yarns, but are now thought to be where there can be no further reduction; the sharp advance in the price of cotton absolutely forbids it. Stocks of cotton in the mills are not large and a better demand for yarn would put spinners in a position to buy cotton freely. At present they are buying for immediate needs only.

The stock certificated cotton in New York is unusually even running in grade and might prove an attractive proposition to large dealers, who are able to take care of big blocks of it, and it makes going short of the summer months a dangerous business.

As an example—of the stock of 88,000 bales, 59,571 bales consist of fully low middling, low middling, and strict good ordinary (only three grades), only 13,424 bales average middling tinged.

Theer are 8083 bales strict low middling, 2745 bales of middling and barely middling, 1630 good ordinary, and the balance scattered lots of good grades.

It is an impracticable proposition to attempt to ship cotton to New York at present differences; that market being below a parity with spots, generally, and in July contracts particularly; the latter are about 135 points under July-August in Liverpool.

There was a crop scare in the wheat market last week, but it failed to last. Prices rose 2½ cents in the early trading, only to lose it all as the week closed. Final quotations showed only small changes from the preceding week's close.

Hessian fly damage reports were the force back of the advance and if one read the commission house wires it was easy to imagine that the wheat crop of Missouri, Illinois and Kansas would be devoured overnight by these industrious speculative pests.

As is usual in crop scares, especially on fly damage, when the authentic crop reports began to come in, it was apparent that the damage had been materially magnified for speculative purposes. And the sum total of the week's crop news, looked at from an unbiased standpoint, is that the crop has been damaged 30 to 40 per cent in a few localities in Missouri and Illinois, has minor areas of scattered fly damage in Kansas and Nebraska, but on the whole promises a crop never before equaled in the winter wheat belt, provided that seasonable weather is maintained until harvest.

On May 1 the Government crop estimate placed the winter wheat yield at 632,000,000 bu, which would permit of a shrinkage from fly damage and dry weather of over 100,000,000 bu, and still leave the crop the same as a year ago, or 523,000,000 bu, which was a record-breaking yield.

There is, of course, the possibility of further damage to winter wheat, if the weather continues dry and temperatures rise abnormally in the next two weeks. In Kansas and the Southwest, however, reports indicate that the soil contains sufficient moisture to carry the crop close to harvest, and only seasonable showers are needed to bring it to maturity.

Spring wheat reports have been universally good and the crop is starting the actual growing season under very favorable conditions.

A year ago the spring wheat crop was short by 100,000,000 bu, but the deficiency was more than made up in winter wheat; so this factor must necessarily be taken into careful consideration when looking at the crop from the ultimate standpoint of the speculator.

The visible supply of wheat in Europe this week amounts to 76,824,000 bu, against 73,860,000 bu last week, showing an increase of 2,900,000 bu. Last week there was an increase of 52,000 bu and last year a decrease of 1,300,000 bu, when the total amounted to 86,100,000 bu.

The Price Current said: "There are persistent reports of damage to winter wheat by Hessian fly in Illinois, Missouri and Kansas, but the extent of the damage done is uncertain. We do not believe that the total production is materially reduced as yet, although the situation appears to be somewhat critical. We estimate the winter wheat crop of the principal surplus producing states as follows: Ohio, 45,276,000 bu; Indiana, 45,384,000; Illinois, 49,754,000; Missouri, 43,363,000; Iowa, 8,838,000; Nebraska, 63,954,000; Kansas, 114,722,000; Oklahoma, 30,344,000; total, 401,344,000. Same states last year, 329,019,000; increase, 72,616,000."

Milling and Grain News says: "Correspondents' reports indicate that Hessian flies have appeared in increased numbers in Missouri and Illinois with the area of infection greatest in Missouri. In Carroll, Ray, Chariton and Pike counties considerable damage has already been done. Saline, Cooper and Lafayette counties have a trace of fly, but so far the damage has been small. Weather conditions during the week were rather favorable for the further development of the fly. Generally speaking the red winter wheat crop is in fair condition, and soil conditions remain satisfactory, except in Illinois, where some moisture is needed."

Floating quantities wheat and flour this week total 45,192,000 bu; last week, 41,000,000; last year, 56,904,000; increase, 4,192,000. Corn, this week, 13,668,000; last week, 13,770,000; last year, 16,252,000; decrease, 102,000. Last year wheat decreased 2,704,000 bu and corn increased 2,805,000.

According to an official report the wheat crop of the United Provinces amounts to 82,904,000, against 110,736,000 last year. Central provinces: Wheat, 25,120,000, against 40,120,000 bu last year.

There are serious complaints from the Volga region in Russia on drouth and hot weather. In the Azoff districts light rains have fallen. In the Southwest there have been scattered rains and the crop outlook is fairly satisfactory.

Corn futures were strong a higher on the week, and the Ch cago May option sold at 70c for t first time in months. Corn has be the subject of as rank a speculati game as has ever been pulled off the Chicago Board of Trade.

There is admittedly an actu shortage in corn, and high pric were and are justifiable, but severa weeks ago Chicago commissio houses decided that the mark should have a violent shakeout be fore values advanced.

Commission house wires therefor were flooded daily with message telling of the keen competition o Argentine corn and how America markets were being flooded with th Southern grain. All told about 10,000,000 bu. were brought into th United States, but the reports did th work. Every mother's son who ha corn sold it on a break that carrie the price close to 63c. When th market was cleaned up, the report of competition with Argentine sud denly ceased and since have not bee a factor in the market.

The truth of the matter is that the Argentine crop never was a factor in American markets, but was used to pull off one of the rankest speculative coups that have been engineered on the grain exchanges in many years.

WELTS ON WHIPPED SCHOOLBOY'S BACK SHOWN BY PHOTO

A photograph showing numerous welts on the back of Benjamin Kramer, 13-year-old son of Abraham Kramer of 1012 North Eleventh street, will be an exhibit in an investigation that has been begun by Assistant Superintendent Rathmann into a charge that Miss Sarah A. McGuire of 4569A Oakland avenue punished the boy Thursday with undue severity.

The photographer to whom the boy was taken called up the newspapers to tell about it and investigation brought to light the circumstances in connection with the case.

The father says that a city dispensary physician who examined the boy's back counted 29 welts. The boy says two wooden rulers were broken over his back. Miss McGuire to a reporter denied using rulers but admitted that she punished the boy severely with a rattan. The punishment, she says, was for cumulative offenses extending over two years and every blow that the boy received was coming to him.

Benjamin is a pupil in the room of Miss Sadie Meyers of 4607 McPherson avenue. There are many children of foreign parents in the school and Miss McGuire says the boy has found delight in slapping and fighting and stoning children smaller than himself. For these and many other offenses he was often sent to the principal. She had punished him severely two years ago, but tried to avoid repeating the penalty. She says he has admitted that she has let him off about forty times in two years with warning.

One day last week, when 1500 children were gathered in the school, Benjamin, according to Miss McGuire, set fire to another boy's clothing and came near starting a panic. Later on the way to the picnic he mistreated smaller children on a car until the janitor put him off. He intercepted a letter of complaint sent to his father, she says.

Thursday, Miss Meyers sent Benjamin to Miss McGuire's room and she made him remain there. His father called to see about it and Miss McGuire told him some of the things that Benjamin had done. His father struck the boy a heavy blow on the side of the head and knocked him across the corridor, Miss McGuire says, and authorized her to punish Benjamin "nearly to death," as he expressed it.

After Miss Meyers had seen the boy throw a book at a pupil who was handing him papers to be taken home, Miss McGuire summoned him to her office, and, in the presence of Miss Meyers, as the School Board rules require, punished him. She feels that she was justified by the boy's persistent misconduct and expresses no regret. The rattan, she explains, always leaves marks, if adequate punishment is administered.

Kramer denies that he authorized Miss McGuire to beat his son. He says that after punishing the boy himself in Miss McGuire's office he told her that if he violated any more rules she should send a note to him by one of the little girls in the school.

SHOT WITH PISTOL GIVEN TO HIM FOR PROTECTION

John C. White was shot in the right leg yesterday, when his employer, Herman Schleuter of the Schleuter Manufacturing Co., 4616 North Broadway, dropped a revolver that he was handing to White for protection while drawing the payroll money from the Lowell Bank.

Because of recent payroll robberies, Schleuter thought it advisable for White to visit the bank with a revolver. White was sent to the Christian Hospital. He is 35 years old, and lives at 5346 Wells avenue.

MRS. W. L. WILLIAMS AND CHILDREN.

Card of Thanks.

We wish to express our heartfelt thanks to all our kind friends and neighbors, the pallbearers and the kind Rev. Balzer for his consoling words, and for the many beautiful floral offerings in the sad bereavement at the loss of a beloved and darling daughter, Edna Irene Berger.

BEREAVED HUSBAND AND FAMILY.

Card of Thanks.

We desire to extend our heartfelt thanks to Rev. Father O'Connor of the Immaculate Conception Church for his kind words of consolation, his grand sermon and eulogy of the departed; also to Sheridan Council No. 1122, Knights of Columbus; Compton Hill Council No. 555, Royal Arcanum; Compton Hill Council No. 10, Brotherhood of Railway Carmen; Missouri Pacific Railway employes at Twenty-first street, and other friends of the family for their many and beautiful floral offerings and kindness and sympathy towards us in our sad hour of bereavement.

Widow and sons of the departed Frank N. Goodrich.

THE BEREAVED FAMILY.

DEATHS

In Memoriam.

In loving remembrance of my dear husband, Walter R. Crowder, who departed this life one year ago, May 23, 1913.

In the sad year just gone by
No one missed you more than I.

His loving wife.
KATHERINE C. CROWDER (nee Heimberger), 1046 Park avenue.

In Memoriam.

In loving memory of my dear sister, Mrs. Christiana Williams (nee Kegel), who passed into eternal life on May 24, 1913. Her loving sister.

MRS. LIZZIE SMITH.

In Memoriam.

In memory of my dear father, William Mentz, who departed this life two years ago, May 20, 1912. Sadly missed by his daughter.

MRS. S. OELLERMANN.

In Memoriam.

In loving remembrance of our only son and brother, Robert C. Wilson, who departed this life May 26, 1912. His ever true and tender kindness will always be cherished by his parents, sisters and relatives. Sadly missed by

PARENTS AND SISTERS. (c)

In Memoriam.

In loving memory of our dear mother, Josephine Duchon, who departed this life May 21, 1913.

A precious one from us has gone,
A voice we loved is stilled,
A place is vacant in our home
Which never can be filled.
We miss her coming footsteps,
We miss her everywhere,
Home is not what it used to be
Since dear mother is not there.

Sadly missed by CHILDREN.

In Memoriam.

In memory of Vince Browner, who died May 27, 1906. May his soul rest in peace. Sadly missed by

WIFE, CHILDREN AND FRIEND, MR. OTT.

In Memoriam.

In memory of my dear husband, Eugene Fried, who departed this life two years ago, May 26, 1912. Gone, but not forgotten. Sadly missed by his wife.

MRS. AUGUSTA FRIED.

In Memoriam.

In sad remembrance of our dear father, A. H. Daniel, who was called to rest one year ago, May 21, 1913. May he rest through God's endless years. Thou are not dead, the good live on. FAMILY.

In Memoriam.

In loving remembrance of our dear daughter and sister, Laura J. Sandler, who departed this life three years ago, May 21, 1911. Gone, but not forgotten. Sadly missed by

HER PARENTS, SISTER AND BROTHER.

In Memoriam.

In memory of dear mother and my sister, Marie Zelle (nee Hoppe), who died on the anniversary of mother's death, one year ago today, May 24, 1913.

Weep thou no more my heart for those that rest
Below the sod so deep, for they are blest;
No more the sorrow here to know in life,
God called them home, away from every strife.
Now all is well, rest thee in peace,
Here work is o'er, and all your troubles cease;
You'll know no more of pain and suffering,
The sadness, which the heart here fills;
A sweet repose and rest, of all life's ills,
At home at last, asleep and slumbering.
A last farewell to thee, but we again shall meet
When at God's throne we worship at His feet.

Written to your memory from your daughter and sister,
BERTHA M. HOPPE.

Dear Sir and Madam,- May 24th, 1914.

Why Today's LETTER merits your attention: The LOW PRICE of my bungalow-sites. The VALUE of choosing location early. My plan to BUILD for you. The inevitable ADVANCE in price. The diminishing OPPORTUNITY to buy.

No sites like these ANYWHERE. Easy of access. Sloping to the South. Rich of Soil. Above the City. Carefully restricted. Excellent neighbors. Fully improved. Generous Allotment. Without gamble, hazard or RAFFLE.

Each site LOWER IN PRICE by $200.00 than rest (except 3) of Sub-division.

The University Car to WEST PORTLAND PLACE where red stakes and yellow cards give details.

Respectfully,

J. Burt Gildersleeve

The Road to Glen Echo Park No. 2

The Hunt Road, showing tracks of Electric Car Line skirting the property its entire length, and the Magnificent Maple Trees that make this road famous for its beauty.

Great Sale of Lots in Glen Echo Park No. 2

Saturday, June 6
AT 2 P. M.

Grand Free Lunch will be served on the grounds beneath the great forest trees. Come right out from your work, get your lunch on the grounds and select your lot.

THIS IS YOUR OPPORTUNITY to achieve independence. The terms of sale are so liberal that you will not feel paying for your lot.

Lots in Glen Echo Park No. 2 will be sold on a cash payment of from $5.00 to $10.00, the balance in weekly installments of from $1.50 to $3.00 per week.

UNUSUAL TERMS
No Interest or Taxes for Two Years.

There is a non-forfeiture clause in the contracts. If you are sick for ten weeks, your weekly payments will be suspended for this period. If you pay 10% of the value of your lot in cash, you will be given a contract in your Deed, whereby if you die before your lot is paid for your wife and children will not lose the benefit of your savings and economy, but will receive a clear Deed to the property without further payments or all the money you have paid in on it will be returned. It is the purpose of the owners of the property to aid you in establishing your independence and owning your own home.

HOW TO GET THERE

Glen Echo Park No. 2 is on the Hunt Road immediately opposite Glen Echo Country Club. It is reached from Wellston by the St. Charles Car—St. Peter's Cemetery Division—in five minutes, fare five cents, also by the Kirkwood-Ferguson Division of the United Railways. Get off at Hunt Road and walk south two blocks.

Don't wait until Saturday, June 6th, to select your lot. COME OUT THIS AFTERNOON, Sunday, or any day, there are salesmen on the ground all the time who will furnish you information and help you in any way possible.

Of Real Estate Buyers

The most discriminating are the real estate men and speculators; we ask them to call at Penrose Park Addition any afternoon and have our representative on the ground show them the lots and give them the prices and we feel positive that they will purchase. Take Natural Bridge cars to Euclid av., and walk north or take the Bellefontaine cars to Marcus av., and walk south. This is the real estate sensation of the year.

WARNING! WARNING!

Speculators! Investors! Homeseekers!

THIS one hundred per cent (100%) investment has appealed to 123 subscribers in the past eight days. Why? Because they are paying $24 per foot, which is the amount of the indebtedness. Now we have 48 lots, 50x150, left to close out Today, then the property will be turned over to the subscribers, among whom are Archbishop John J. Glennon and Dr. W. J. Williamson of the Third Baptist Church, who, acting with a committee of other subscribers, will then divide this property. Everyone pays $24 per foot. Just think, adjoining property south is held at $70 per foot; property north worth $70 per foot; property east, $150 per foot. Now why are we selling so cheap? To raise money

H. D. GLASS, Harrison, Ark., Box 393. (98)

United States Government Land Free

The United States Government has 400,000 acres of land in Arkansas that any male citizen 21 years old and over, and female citizens, unmarried, of legal age, also widows, can have free of cost, in tracts not to exceed 160 acres, by residing on the lands 3 years and complying with the homestead laws. Sailors and soldiers of the Federal army who have served in the Rebellion, Spanish-American or Philippine wars are entitled to credit on the three-year residence for the time of service in the army.

Most of these lands are covered with fine pine and oak timber, worth from hundreds to thousands of dollars on each 160-acre tract, and are located in the most elevated portions of the State, where climate and health conditions are excellent (no swamps or overflow lands).

The country is well watered with fine springs and clear running streams. A few thousand acres can be located within ten miles radius of railroads and near good towns with good schools and churches.

We are locating engineers and have been selecting suitable lands for homesteads and timber lands in Arkansas since 1897, and during the past 17 years have located many citizens on valuable Government homestead lands.

Our field men are constantly engaged in selecting lands suitable for homesteads and make full detailed, sworn reports on each homestead, for which we charge a nominal fee. We also take the applicant to the land and aid him in procuring his homestead.

For 25 cents we will send you our proposition, which will enable you to locate a homestead at a nominal fee. Address

A. V. ALEXANDER,
Box 38 U. S. Bldg., Little Rock, Ark.

P. S.—Aid a worthy friend to get a home free. He may miss this opportunity except for your thoughtfulness in sending him this ad. All our ads are filed with the United States Land Office before publication.

CONFLICTING STYLES SEEN IN PARIS

PARIS is holding a contest in clothes. Masculine severity is fighting feminine frippery; long, straight lines are opposing the curves of frills and furbelows. Stiff and upstanding feathers, graceful, sweeping plumes, dainty flowers and flowing ribbons are all in the race for the championship in millinery. And backing each is a house guaranteed for good taste and progressivism in styles.

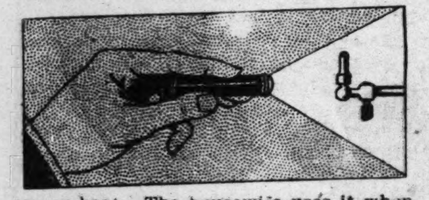
One of the first frocks in the field is that which occupies the center of this page. It has the long apron tunic favored by the house of Cheruit, but it has none of the feminine frills for which this name generally stands. Severity is its keynote. Besides it on the left is a gown in which pekine taffeta overlays muslin taffeta and muslin taffeta overlays pekine taffeta in soft, undulating waves of silk—feminine to the last degree. Another, from the Maison Bernard, stands out in pert little curves like the comb of a haughty rooster.

NOVEL THINGS WORTH KNOWING

Safe Method of Finding Gas Leaks

LOOKING for a gas leak with a lighted match is a most unsatisfactory method of discovering this common trouble. An electric flashlight is more illuminating and cannot cause an explosion.

This is only one of a multitude of uses to which the electric flashlight is put nowadays. It can be inserted without danger into the gasoline fumes of a motor car or boat. The housewife uses it when she goes in the dark to seek something in a cupboard where linen and inflammable garments are hanging.



We are all familiar with the way the ushers in theaters read the tickets and find the proper seats. The night watchman and the man who reads gas and electric meters uses the searchlight in the same way. The dentist and the throat and nose specialist find it indispensable for illuminating the dark corners of the mouth, pharynx and larynx.

Since miniature tungsten lamps were introduced in manufacturing flashlights, along with a long-life battery, the watchman's electric lantern is made to burn 14 hours steadily, or about forty hours intermittently.

When Davies discovered that he could make a lamp to burn oil in safety for use in coal mines, he little dreamed it was possible to invent a contrivance that would be such a vast improvement over his own invention; but the electric miner's head torch is a very important factor in any modern mine.

Perhaps the most common type in use now is the vest pocket size, little larger than a cigarette case. This is one more item that has been added to the watch under the pillow case.

Manila Harbor to Be Deepened

THE inner habor at Manila is to be deepened to 32 feet at low tide, the Government having bought a huge suction dredge with a capacity of 1000 cubic yards per hour for that purpose. A difference of five feet between high and low tide in the harbor makes it possible for the mammoth freighter, Minnesota, the largest ship navigating the Pacific, heavily loaded, to dock at the Government piers, as after the deepening of the harbor 37 feet will be provided. At present work is being done nearest the piers, where the churning of the screw propellers has accumulated much mud, making navigation difficult and rendering the docking of large vessels almost impossible. After the Manila job is completed the dredge will be sent to Iloilo to deepen the harbor there.

Pulls Teeth to Music

AN enterprising French dentist who practices in the Montmartre district of Paris has just published the following tariff for the extraction of teeth:

Ordinary extractions	$ .60
Painless "	1.00
With music	4.00

The patient may choose the selections he wishes to hear, Wagner, Beethoven, or, as the circular adds, Fragson.

Earthquake-Proof Homes

EARTHQUAKE construction has now reached a very practical stage in the seismic districts of Italy, where all new buildings are being erected under strict supervision with respect to their ability to resist earthquake shocks. Prof. Omori, the Japanese authority, has estimated that 99.8 per cent of the deaths in the great Messina earthquake of 1908 would have been prevented if the buildings had been properly constructed.

Best Way to Open Boils

A CORRESPONDENT writes that the best way to open a boil is to paint a ring of collodion (which can be purchased in any drug store) around it, being careful not to put any directly over the boil. As the alcohol evaporates, the collodion in drying will exert a gentle but firm pressure all around the boil, not only opening it, but forcing out its contents, which should be absorbed by a perfectly clean handkerchief or piece of sterilized cotton.

Making an Electric Current Transformer at Home

IT is often necessary to employ a small transformer for the purpose of lowering the tension of an alternating current in order to use this for operating low-voltage electric lamps, electric bells, etc. Such transformers can be bought at any electric supply store, but as they are not cheap it may be useful to amateur electricians to know how easily they can be made at home.

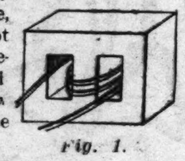


Fig. 1.

It is just as easy to make a transformer that will increase the voltage, but this is not nearly so often needed, besides involving considerable danger except in the hands of experts.

The dimensions of the little apparatus described and illustrated here may be varied according to circumstances, but the amateur would better stick fairly close to those given if he desires to have a transformer that does just the work he lays out for it.

Suppose we have an alternating current of 110 volts and 42 periods, and want to lower the tension to 28 or to 22 volts. The transformer consists of an iron frame carrying two windings. This frame may have any one of several different forms, but that illustrated in Fig. 1 is the most convenient. Cut from iron (not steel) plate, about 0.25 millimeter in thickness, pieces having the form and dimensions shown in Fig. 2, the figures on which are in millimeters. Cut enough pieces to make when they are piled one upon another a block 102 millimeters thick, with two square holes of 40x35 millimeters running through.

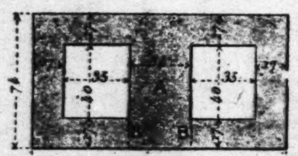

Fig. 2.

It is on the central part A of this block that the windings are to be made. But it would be impossible to wind directly upon the block, so the job must be done on a rectangular cardboard spool, which is then placed upon the block in a way to be described further on.

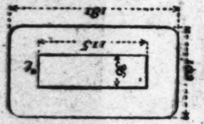

Fig. 4.

The spool must have the form shown in Fig. 3, and its dimensions must be as follows: Length of the interior hole, B—C, 115 millimeters; width of same, 36 mm.; height A—D, 30 mm.; uniform width of flanges E—F, 33 mm. It can easily be made in three parts, of thin card: a strip folded to make the central part and two flat flanges with the form and dimensions shown in Fig. 4. To prevent crumpling it is well to make this spool around a core of wood cut to the right size and projecting far enough to permit of easy handling. Having glued this together, it must be covered inside and out with an insulating varnish made by dissolving 10 or 15 parts of white flake shellac in 100 parts of wood alcohol. As soon as this is quite dry the wood core must be replaced or the spool will become deformed.

Now it is ready for winding. As the wire for the secondary circuit is the larger, this is the one with which we begin. It should be of two millimeters diameter and insulated with two layers of cotton. Begin by inserting the end of the wire through the hole t (Fig. 4), leaving 30 or 40 centimeters of it for making connections. Now wind it evenly around the body of the spool, pressing each turn against its neighbor. As soon as one layer is finished varnish it well. Continue winding and varnishing each layer until you have made 87 turns of wire if the secondary current is to be 27 volts, or 71 turns if the current is to be 22 volts. Pass the extremity of the wire through another hole in the flange of the spool. Bind the winding tightly with several turns of thin ribbon soaked in varnish.

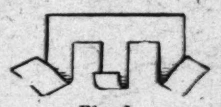

Fig. 5.

This is to separate it from the wires carrying the primary current, which are now to be wound in the same way. For this purpose use 334 turns of copper wire eight-tenths of a millimeter in diameter, insulated with two layers of cotton, and varnish each layer as before.

If the wires have been wound carefully they should just fill the spool, after they have been wrapped in several turns of ribbon and varnished. You will need from 30 to 35 meters of the thick wire and from 180 to 200 meters of the fine.

To place the spool upon the metal block, cut each piece of plate along the dotted lines BB in Fig. 2, and bend these back as shown in Fig. 5. This will permit the insertion of each plate. It is necessary to put the cut side of the plates alternately at the top and at the bottom of the spool. In addition, the plates must be separated by thin paper, varnished. This can be stuck upon the plates before they are cut and bent. As each plate is put in place its bent tongues must be pressed back flat.

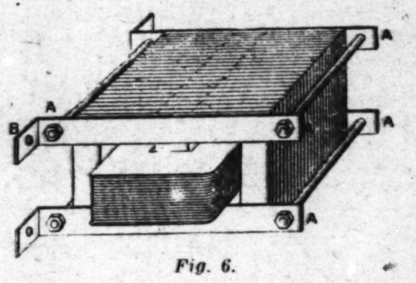

Fig. 6.

When all the plates are in place the apparatus must be made rigid by pressing the upper and lower parts together between strips of iron joined by rods and bolts, as shown in Fig. 6. The bent ends of these strips are to be screwed down to a plate of marble, slate or even of asbestos-covered wood.

The transformer is now finished and all you have to do is to connect the wires, not forgetting to insert in the thick wire a circuit-breaker fusible for two amperes and an interrupter that will enable you to cut off the transformer. The ends of the fine wire will carry the low-voltage current to the lamps or other apparatus, and the intensity delivered can run up to six or eight amperes.

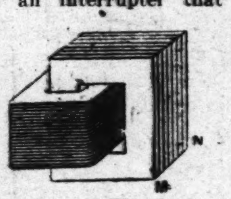

Fig. 7.

In making transformers for other voltages the method is the same, but the form and dimensions vary. To transform a 27 volt current to five volts it is better to use an instrument like that shown in Fig. 7. Enough iron plates should be used to make the metal block 27 millimeters thick. The outer dimensions should be 130x85 millimeters and the central hole should be 50x25 millimeters. For the secondary winding use 35 turns of 0.88 millimeter wire and for the primary winding 680 turns of 0.4 millimeter wire.

New Violins Best

PARIS music lovers recently heard a number of violins of various ages and values, including a Stradivarius that had been sold for $15,000, played in a darkened room so that the experts might judge the tone quality of each without predispositions. The instrument that was voted to be of the finest tone was made this year in Belgium. The second place was awarded to a French instrument of 1911, and the Stradivarius came third. This evidently means that the violin making industry is as efficient today as in the days of "Strad."

$2,200,000 in Broken Eggs

PART of the high cost of eggs must be charged up to breakage at all seasons. The United States Department of Agriculture figures this at 7 per cent of the crop. In New York City there is a breakage of two dozen eggs in every 30-dozen cases. As 4,666,117 such egg crates were received in New York last year, this meant a loss of more than 9,300,000 dozen, conciderably more than 110,000,000 eggs!

FLORIDA buttonwood is highly prized for cooking on ships, as it burns slowly with an even heat and makes little smoke or ash.

John Wesley as a Physician

WRITING of John Wesley's medical works, Dr. George Dock says: "In the extraordinarily busy life of John Wesley, medicine had an important part. As an Oxford undergraduate Wesley adopted habits of living in accordance with the advice given by the celebrated Dr. George Cheyne. As his religious activities increased he opened dispensaries in several cities where the sick could be treated by physicians, and in 1747, at the age of 44 years, he published a little book on domestic medicine entitled "Primitive Physic." No less than 32 editions were published in England; seven in America and several others in other countries. The book shows a striking combination of sound common sense, with a belief in therapeutic methods varying from the most ancient superstition to the use of relatively complicated herb medicines. Soot and treacle for ague; hog's lard to the feet for whooping cough; cow heel broth for consumption and boiled nettle poultice for sciatica are some of the prescriptions. Many charms were recommended and, along with these, sensible suggestions about diet, including the use of whole wheat bread, long before the time of Graham. Cold baths are also recommended for many conditions in which we now know they are useful although in Wesley's time they were wholly neglected by the medical profession. Wesley's therapeutic methods in many respects were far ahead of his time. Of the 160 drugs he recommended, half of them are still in the U. S. Pharmacopeia and a number of others were there until a few years ago. Most of the remainder are mentioned in the standard medicas at present. He was singularly ahead of his time in the important matter of pathology of itch; his proverb, "cleanliness is next to Godliness," is still needed. Wesley's failure to improve methods of medical practice seem possible to explain by deep-seated mental tendencies. It is interesting that notwithstanding his thorough belief in the efficiency of prayer, he did not recommend methods such as those that were proposed after the time of Darwin. On the whole, his works may be read with some interest not only in relation with the practice of the eighteenth century, but as a warning to the future.

Hatching Chickens in Tubs of Hot Rice

AN enterprising American firm, knowing the fondness for eggs and chickens which lurks in the heart of every denizen of far Cathay, recently sent a shipment of incubators to China and thought to sell them like hot cakes. Instead, the henless hatchers were a drug on the market at Amoy, the spot chosen to break in with the Yankee goods. And a little inquiry brought forth the reason—John Chinaman has his own peculiar way of hatching eggs without hens or incubators, and an unusually large percentage of his eggs produce husky chicks.

His method is derived from the hoariest antiquity.

He first takes a quantity of unhusked rice and roasts it, cooling it down by fanning or by allowing the wind to blow through until it is lukewarm. He then spreads a three-inch layer of the rice in a wooden tub and places about 100 eggs thereon; another layer of rice, this second and subsequent layers of rice being but two inches in thickness, is spread over the eggs. Each tub will have six layers of rice and five layers of eggs, so that there will be 500 eggs in each tub. The rice is heated again once every 24 hours, the eggs being taken out at such times. When the eggs are again put in the rice, the bottom layer is placed on top and each of the other layers one row lower down, while the eggs previously in the center of the tub or placed at the edge. The entire tub is covered with a cotton mattress. The chicks and ducklings are produced in twenty to thirty days and are quite as lively and able to scratch as if they had been mothered by a real hen, or at least one of those new-fangled machines made in the United States of America.

NEW AND ODD THINGS IN SCIENCE

Short-Circuiting the Colon

THAT distressing and often fatal trouble which physicians call intestinal stasis is, according to Sir Arbuthnot Lane, a great English surgeon, due to a kink in the intestine. This kink causes a stoppage.

These kinks are due to the abnormal growth of certain bands of tissue that nature has placed in the abdomen for the support of the organs it contains. The abnormal growth may be a result of many causes—tight clothing, strains, improper living.

The bands, instead of supporting the intestines, draw them tightly at some points and loosely at others. The effect of this is a kink. A common point for such a kink is just above where the small intestine joins the large. This causes a sort of strangulation: the vermiform appendix is caught in the band and the caecum becomes dilated. The band that causes this kink has been called Lane's band, after the discoverer of the disorders for which it is blamed.

Such kinks are treated in many ways and the doctors have not yet decided which is the best. Sometimes efforts are made to straighten them out by special exercises and massage. Sometimes the offending bands are cut. When the condition is really serious the small intestine is cut and grafted to the lower part of the large intestine, thus cutting this off entirely.

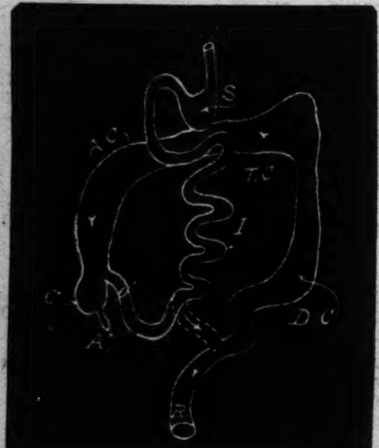

Diagram of Lane's method of short-circuiting out the entire colon from the alimentary tract. S, stomach; I, small intestine; C, caecum; A, appendix; AC, ascending colon; TC, transverse colon; DC, descending colon; R, rectum. The broken lines indicate artificial connection made by operation.

Making Electricity With Tip of Tongue

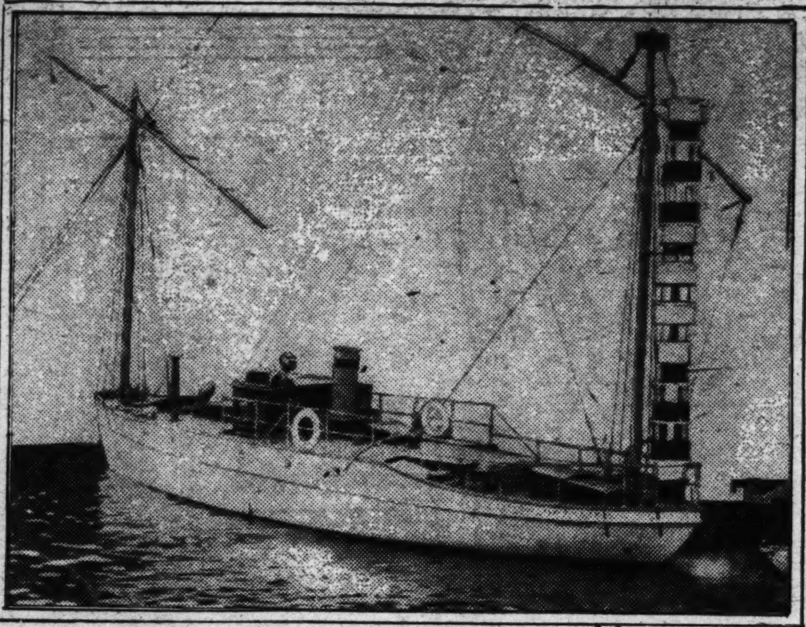
MOST people know it is possible to produce electricity by the chemical action of various acids upon minerals. Yet few would believe that such a current can be produced by the chemical action of the saliva upon such metals as copper, nickel, silver, etc.

"I chanced," writes a correspondent, "to make this discovery one day while carrying on experiments in my laboratory. Having a pair of telephone receivers on my head, I took the terminal of one and moistened it with saliva. Upon bringing the other terminal in contact with the moistened one, a faint click was heard in the receivers. This continued until the saliva had become dry. The chemical action of the saliva upon the copper terminals of the receivers without any doubt produced the electric pressure, which, upon flowing through the wire conductors of the receivers created magnetism, thus attracting the diaphragm of the receivers, which caused the sound."

Took Cyanide and Lives

ROBERT RENDELL, a Brooklyn salesman, took a five-grain capsule of cyanide of potassium by mistake, instead of quinine, and is alive to tell the tale, because the gelatine covering did not dissolve before a stomach pump could be used. Mr Rendell quickly discovered his mistake, aroused his boy, and the two, without dressing, ran to a drug store. The druggist administered an emetic after calling a doctor. The emetic failed to work, but the physician was quickly on hand with his stomach pump. This did the business, and the removal of the capsule before the gelatine became much worn prevented the cyanide from getting in its deadly work. It had been in the stomach about [illegible]0 minutes, which shows that all hands made quick time. Mr. Rendell had been using the cyanide in photographic work. Hereafter it will not be kept in the family medicine chest.

Wireless-Controlled Boat Operated From the Shore



© by Boston Photo News Co.

JOHN HAYS HAMMOND JR., son of a celebrated mining engineer, erected on the shore of Gloucester (Mass.) harbor a wireless station with two enormous masts 360 feet high, on a granite base. No higher wood masts have ever been erected, and they have been insured at Lloyd's for $10,000. From his lookout station on the cliff, by touching a key, he can steer and start or stop his wireless-controlled boat, out and back along an eight-mile course filled with rocks, shoals and harbor craft, at the speed of the swiftest cruiser.

This boat has 40-horsepower gasoline motors, which propel the craft, the wireless being used to start and stop her and to guide her in whatever course the operator elects. She has two masts, each [illegible] feet high, one with alternate black and white painted cylinders on it. By these masts in the daytime he sights the craft at any distances. At night these are illuminated with clusters of electric lights so that the boat can be guided as well as by daylight.

The steering operator on the lookout platform touches a key that a child could press to release the energy emanating from the wireless antennae of the aerials, supplied by a private power house near by. Mr. Hammond says that only a millionth part of the power released from the aerials ever reached the boat. The rest is dissipated into space. A powerful searchlight with a five-foot parabolic mirror, more powerful than that of any battleship and the brilliancy of 186,000,000 candle power seven miles at sea, follows with its beam at night the boat as she zigzags about Gloucester harbor, uncanny in her avoidance of obstructions sometimes with several experts aboard of her, and at others without a soul aboard.

With a turn of his hand the expert operator on shore directs this immense light. A little crank lifts or lowers it; another moves it to left or right, these cranks being electrically connected with motors in the searchlight house. Its beams do not cross the lookout platform at all. A tiny beam alone illuminates his record pages. While at the same time, with the gentlest touch of his fingers he can turn a vessel weighing five or six tons to any point of the compass, at a distance of three to eight miles out at sea.

The control is accomplished by allowing wireless waves from a shore station to act upon a system of receivers, relays and motors in vessels, each motor exercising some control over engine or rudder. One turns the rudder to the left, another to the right. Another sets the engine at half speed, another at full speed, and a third stops them. The current operating these motors comes from generators carried by the vessel itself. The wireless station ashore sends power to start the motors or stop them, by a delicate receiving apparatus. There are about five main controls, working on a dial, the wireless impulses working on these controls like invisible fingers. As the sending key is pressed in one way or another, the moving hand stops at different places on the dial, actuating one motor after another, each move performing some definite piece of work.

With the help of his laboratory staff (for this young man has money enough to experiment to his heart's content, with expert paid assistants, regardless of expense), and an expert from Harvard, he worked an entire year devising a reliable detector, to take the place of the Marconi coherers that had failed him when he had proven his ability to steer the boat for two miles, and victory was almost in sight. He guards the secret of this detector carefully. He next gained greater efficiency by supplying his power house with the fastest electric generators in the world, turning at the rate of 700 miles an hour. To realize what this means, put the generators (mentally) on tracks. In four hours they would run from New York across the Atlantic, or from Boston to Chicago. He then replaced his 150-foot aerials with ones 360 feet high. Thus he had a sending station that would transmit ordinary radiograms over a radius of 2000 miles, the most powerful private sending station in the world. He also is building a new boat, called the Radio, with a length of 40 feet and engines of 180 horspower, having a guaranteed speed of 33 miles an hour.

The only reason the guidance of the boat covers only a radius of between seven and eight miles is the limitations of the lookout, who can see only seven miles. The sending station will send out efficient impulses of about fifty miles. So that from a military point of view, one sending station is sufficient to guard 100 miles of coast line, after the coast has been fully equipped with lookout station, in addition to the sending station. It may be that with the powerful range finders used in coast defense works the radius may be increased, as the effectiveness of gun fire has been increased. If necessary the sending station can be equipped with disappearing aerials, a device for which young Hammond has a patent.

The Law of Chance in Gambling

WHAT we call chance is nothing but our own ignorance of the causes of things and of the links which bind these causes to their effects. Anyone wishing to pursue this idea further can be recommended to read "Le Jeu, la Chance et le Hasard," by Dr. Bachelier, whose investigations into the subject received the high approval of the late Henri Poincare.

The laws of probability would offer to all an equal chance in such matters were it not for the expense of playing. If we speculate on the Stock Exchange, we have to pay broker's commission; if on the turf, the bookmaker's commission on winnings and the short prices he lays to make his book even; if in gambling places, the cognotte or pull of the table. Directly we consider these expenses we get on the horns of a dilemma. If the play be not continued for a long time, the laws of probability have not time to assert themselves, as in the familiar case of tossing a coin which will come up heads as often as tails, if tossed frequently enough. If the play is so continued, the longer it lasts the nearer the player is to being ruined, and the larger is the stake he must win in order to recoup the expenses of his former play. Thus is explained, says Dr. Bachelier, the observed fact that the richest player at a game of chance always wins in the long run. His stakes form such a small proportion of his income, compared with those of the poorer player, that he can continue to play longer without serious injury to himself, can give time to the chances to mature, and is not forced to take any risks but those of his own choosing.

BAL LE SOIR
THE ONLY GENUINE
RIZ LA+.

TOUJOURS GAI!

"Always gay!" Such is the motto of Paris, from the dance mill on the hill (the Moulin de la Galette on Montmartre) to aristocracy in the Bois; and part and parcel of that gaiety, light, fugacious, aromatic, is the Parisian's cigarette—the cigarette rolled by his deft fingers in the paper Riz La Croix.

Mais oui! Who could not be gay with his sweetheart on his arm, and between his lips such a cigarette?

RIZ LA+.

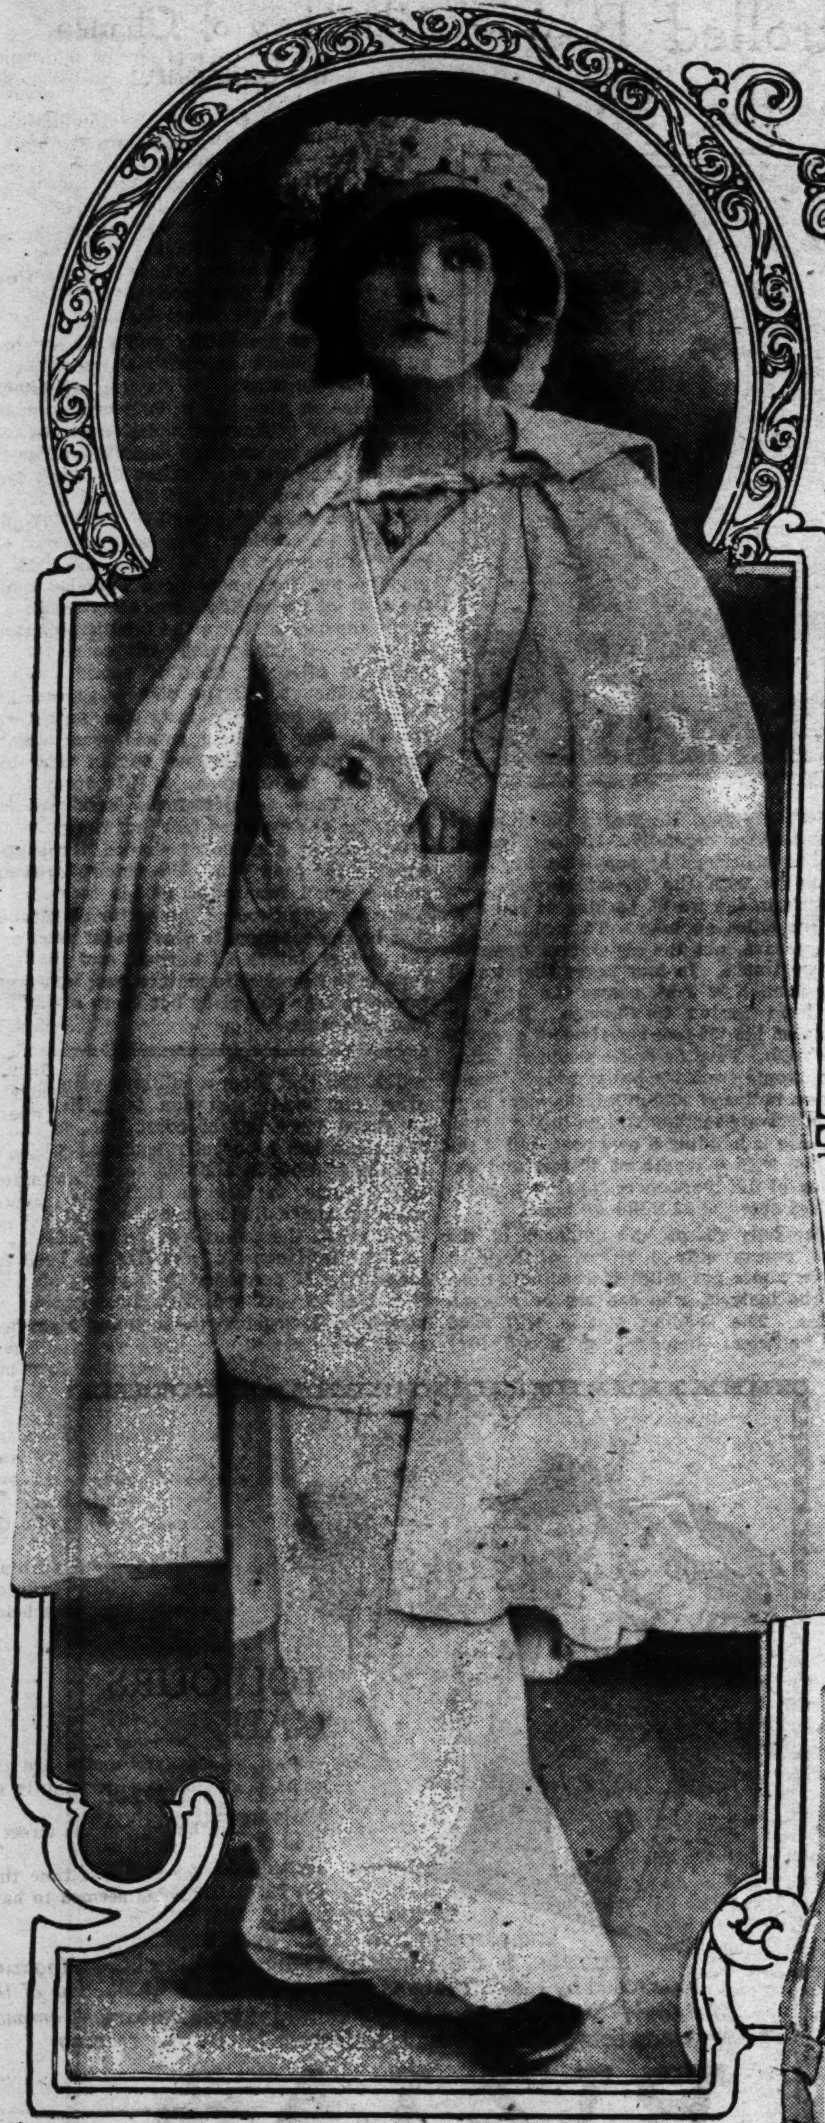
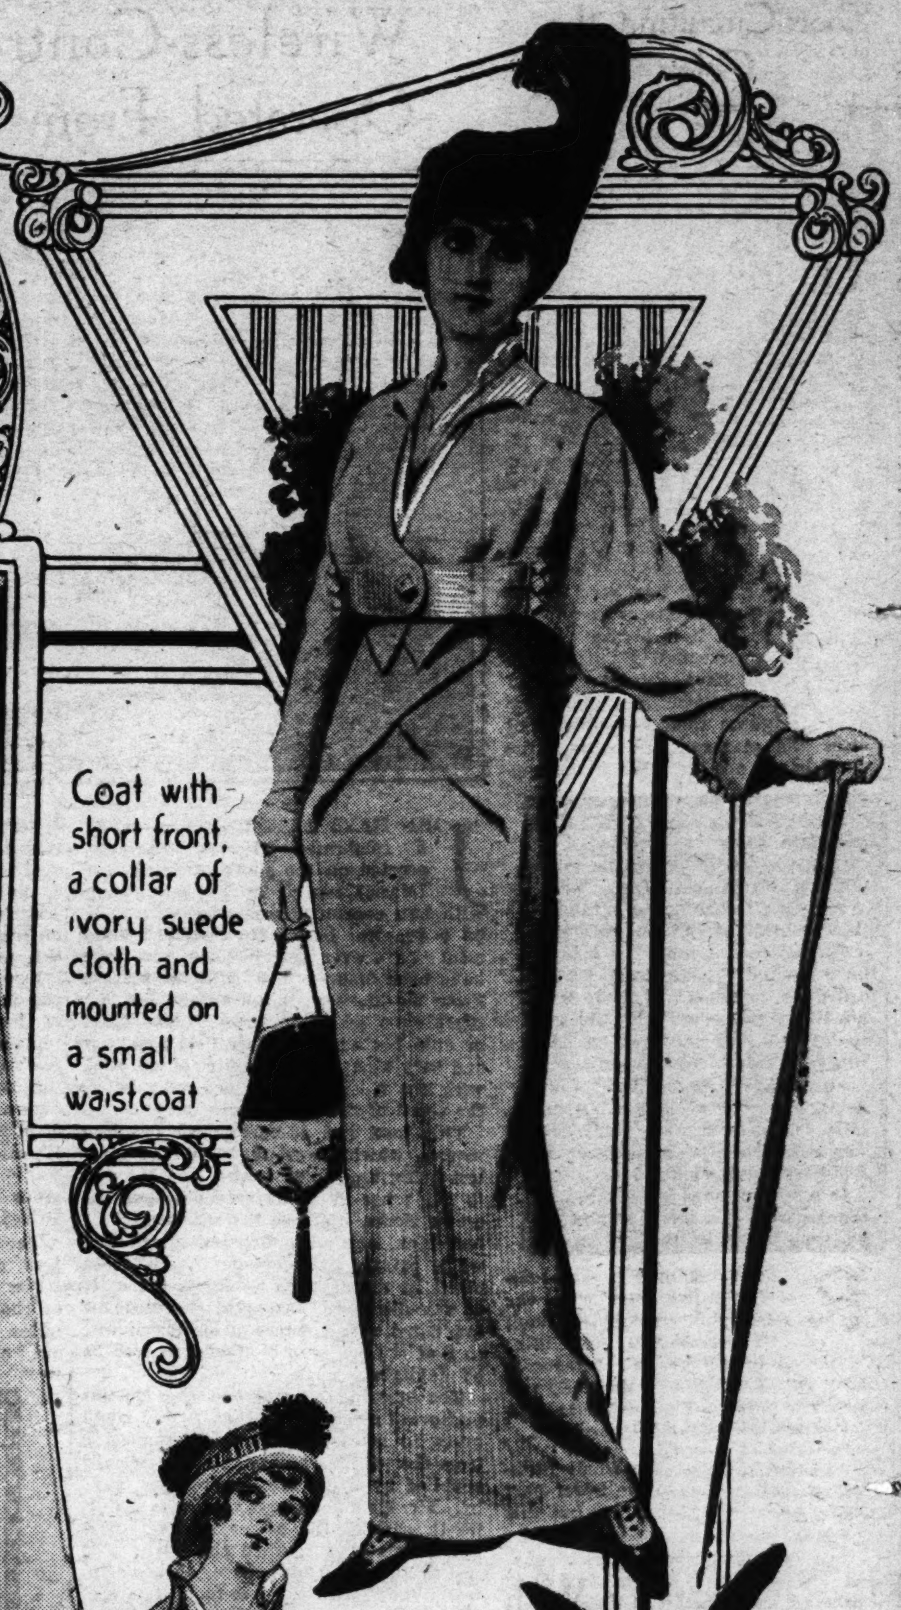
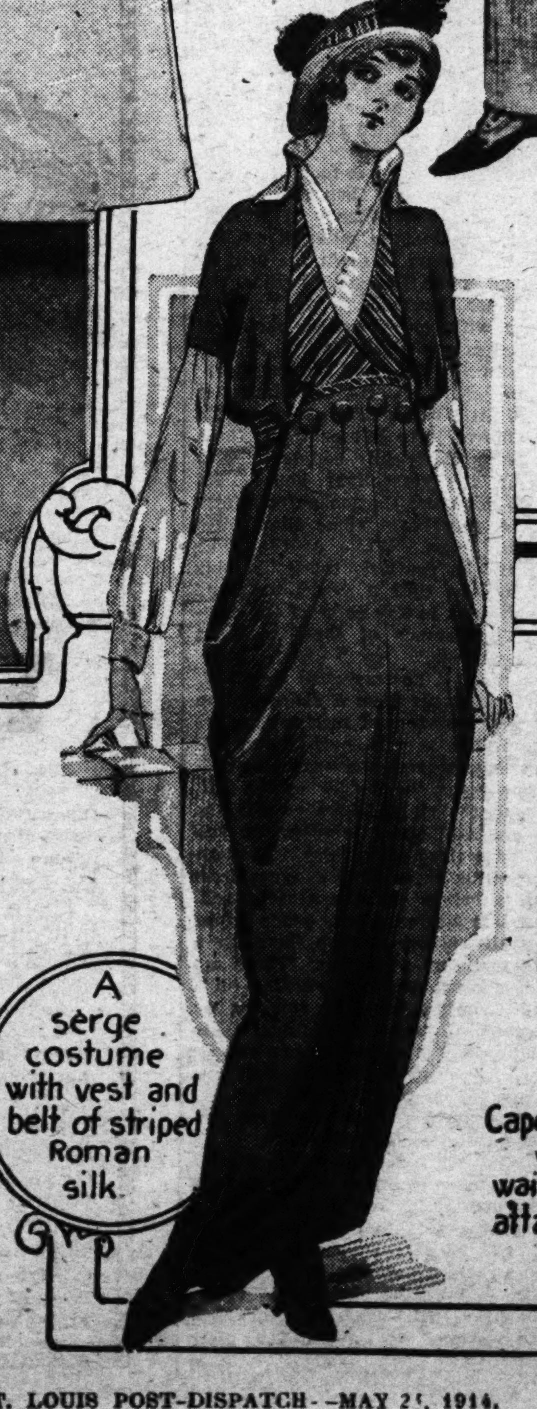
WAISTCOATS for Woman's Wear!



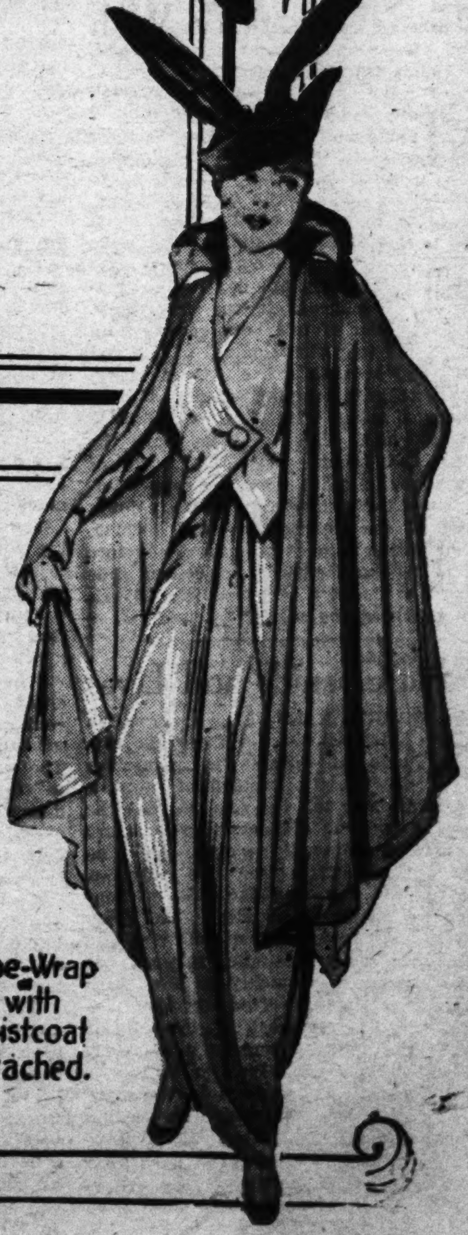
Wrap in almond green cloth with waistcoat of same material.



Coat with short front, a collar of ivory suede cloth and mounted on a small waistcoat



A serge costume with vest and belt of striped Roman silk.



Cape-Wrap with waistcoat attached.

WITH the flowing cape has come another feature of old fashion, modified according to modern ideas: the waistcoat. For several years some women have worn a surplice-like vest under their evening wraps. Gradually this idea has grown in popularity so that with the advent of the evening cape as a daylight garment the decorative vest has come to its own.

It is a very sensible idea for summer wear in the mountains and at the seashore where the evenings are cool and some days are cold and dreary. Slight additions to a costume such as the waistcoat are often needed and when they are so highly decorative are much appreciated by devotees of good style.

THE SHADOW OF THE ROPE

By
E. W. Hornung

"Why, to be sure," rejoined the other, taken aback. "He is only awaiting my permission for an interview."

"Then let him await mine!" exclaimed Rachel. "I owe you much," she added, "if only for your kindness and sympathy during these few minutes. But I owe him nothing that I cannot pay in cash. He came to me and he said what he liked; he may have forgotten, but I never shall."

"He would be the first to admit his error now."

"Perhaps; but he believed me guilty to the very end; and I utterly refuse to see him tonight."

"Then I shall tell him so."

So her solicitor was beaten off, with all the spirit which was one of Rachel's qualities, but also with the rashness which was that quality's defect. She had no plans, nor a single soul to help her to make any. And yet, she must pick and choose, and reject, in the hour when any friend would have been better than none!

Yet she also refused to see a gentleman whose card was brought to her by the chief warder himself. The chief warder, one of the kindliest mortals, displayed no little irritation under her repeated refusals; but it was the agent, and not the principal, who was so importunate; and the message was not repeated once the former could be induced to hear Mrs. Minchin's answer. The chief warder did indeed return, and now the good fellow was all smiles.

"Feeling more yourself?" said he; and, when Rachel said she was, he asked her to listen now; and there was nothing to listen to. "The coast's as clear as the Criminal Court," explained this pleasant official. "A closed cab did it, with an officer on the box."

Rachel rose at once.

"It was kind of you to let me stay so long," she said gratefully. "And I hope you will accept this trifle for yourself in return for your kindness."

Indeed, the man had been kind, and his kindness would have continued to the last had the trial ended differently.

Oh, but what a miracle to hear her feet on the now deserted pavement, to see her breath in the raw November night, and the lights of Ludgate Hill!

"Trial an' verdic'! Trial an' verdic'! Acquittal o' Mrs. Minchin!"

Everybody was buying the damp, pink sheets. Rachel actually bought one herself; and overheard the opinion of the man in the street without a pang. So she might think herself lucky! But she did, she did.

The policeman under the bridge was a joy in himself; he refreshed Rachel's memory as to the way, and he called her "madem" into the bargain! After all, it was not every policeman who had been on duty at the Old Bailey, nor one in many thousands of the population who had gained admission to it.

Yet if Rachel had relieved the tedium of her trial by using her eyes a little more she could scarcely have failed to recognize the good-looking elderly man who was at her heels when she took her ticket at Blackfriars Bridge. But Rachel did not recognize him.

In a few minutes she had a better chance, when, having entered an empty compartment in the first-class, she was joined by this very gentleman.

RACHEL hid herself behind the newspaper which she had bought, because at such close quarters she was terribly afraid that he might look once too often at her. But this fear passed from her in the matchless fascination of reading and re-reading five words in the stop-press column: "MINCHIN CASE—Verdict, Not guilty."

Not guilty! Not guilty! And to see it in print. Her eyes filled at the sight.

"And what do you think of it, madame?"

The voice came from the opposite corner of the compartment.

Rachel hesitated for a second.

"Of what?" she asked, with some presence of mind, for she had never an instant's doubt that the question referred to the topic of the hour.

"We were reading the same paper," replied the questioner, with perfect courtesy; "it only struck me that we might both be reading the same thing, and feeling equally amazed at the verdict."

"You mean in the Minchin case," said Rachel steadily. "Yes, I was reading it, as I suppose everybody is. But I disagree with you about the verdict."

The young widow's manner was as downright as her words.

"Pardon me," said the gentleman, breaking into a smile; "I was not aware that I had expressed an opinion on that point."

"I understood you were amazed," said Rachel dryly.

"And are not you?" cried the other point-blank. "Do you mean to tell me that you were prepared for an acquittal?"

"I was prepared for anything," replied Rachel, returning a peculiarly penetrating stare with one as steady.

"Madame, have you followed the case?"

"Indeed I have," sighed honest Rachel.

"And as a woman you believe this woman innocent?"

"I do."

It was hard enough to say no more than that; but Rachel was very fresh from her great lesson in self-control.

"It is easy to see that you do not," she merely permitted herself to add.

"On the contrary," said he, with great precision; "on the contrary, my dear madame, I believe this poor lady to be as innocent as yourself."

Again their eyes were locked.

"But I really have no right to an opinion," said he; "since, unlike you, I cannot claim to have read the case." The speaker looked out of the window. "The interesting thing, to me, is not what this poor lady has or has not done, but what is she going to do now!

"They say she has literally no friends in England," he went on, with unconcealed concern. "That is incredible; and yet, if there be any truth in it, what a terrible position! If one can judge thus early, by what one has heard and seen for one's self, this verdict is a personal disappointment to the always bloodthirsty man in the street. Then God help the poor lady if he spots her!"

And now Rachel not only knew that he knew, but that he wished to apprise her of his knowledge without confessing it openly. She began to wonder whether she had not seen him before; and while she wondered he came and sat opposite to her, and went on speaking in a lower voice.

"If Mrs. Minchin wants a friend—and tonight I think she must—if ever she did or will! Well, if she does, I for one would be her friend—if she would trust me!"

The last words were the lowest of all; and in the tone of them there was the timbre that thrilled her.

As Rachel hesitated the carriages began to groan beneath the brake; and her hesitation was at an end. So was her limited capacity for pretense.

"I seem to have seen you before," said she, cool of tongue, but not of heart.

"I think it very possible."

"Were you at the trial?"

"From first to last!"

"You know me," said Rachel hurriedly; "I have seen that for some time. May I ask if you are Mr. Steel?"

"I am."

"The Mr. Steel who sent me his card after the trial?"

Steel bowed.

"And because I would not see you, Mr. Steel, you have followed me, and forced yourself upon me!"

The train stopped, and Rachel rose.

"You will gather my motives when you recall our conversation," observed Steel, and he opened the door for her. But Rachel turned to him before alighting.

"Mr. Steel," she said, "I am quite sure that you mean kindly and well, and that I above all women should feel supremely grateful; but I cannot help thinking that you are unjust to the man in the street!"

"Better give him a trial," said Steel, coldly enough in his turn.

"I should prefer to," rejoined Rachel, and Mr. Steel was left smiling.

Rachel was not devoid of a proper vanity, albeit that night she had probably less than most women with a tithe of her personal attractions; and yet upon reflection she could conceive but one explanation of such conduct in an elderly man.

"There is no fool like an old fool," quoted Rachel to herself, as she walked the streets of Chelsea at a pace suggestive of a destination.

SHE had come to this particular district because it was the only portion of the town in which she had the semblance of a friend; for there did live in Tite street a young couple with whom the Minchins had at one time been on friendly terms. It was Mrs. Carrington who had found the Minchins their furnished house, while her husband certainly interested himself in Rachel's defense. But it was Mrs. Carrington whom she really hoped to see.

The little street was as quiet as ever; Rachel stole up to the house. The blinds were down, and it was in darkness; otherwise all was as she remembered it only too well. Her breath came quickly. It was a strange trick her feet had played her, bringing her here against her will! Yet she had thought of coming as a last resort. The furnished house should be hers for some months yet.

Rachel crept up the steps. If she should be seen!

She was not; but a footstep rang somewhere in the night, and on that the key was fitted and the door opened without another moment's hesitation. Rachel entered, the door shut noisily behind her, and then her own step rang in turn upon the floor. It was bare boards. This prepared her for what she found when the white light sprang out above her head.

The furniture had been removed while the use of it belonged legally to her! Had they made so sure of her conviction as all that? Rachel's blood came straight from zero to the boil. The house was hers for another two months; and there were things of hers in it. If they had been removed then this outrage was little short of felony, and she could invoke the law, from whose clutches she herself had escaped. But she was without a single friend. The Carringtons? Well, she would see.

THERE was still a light in the ground floor windows of the Tite street house, strong lights and voices; it was the dining room, for the Minchins had dined there once.

She rang the bell, and was shown at once into the study behind the dining room. Immediately the voices in the latter ceased. This was ominous, and the omen was instantly fulfilled. It was Mr. Carrington who came into the room, dark, dapper and formal.

"I congratulate you," he said, with a bow, but nothing more.

"I owe it very largely to you," faltered Rachel. "How can I thank you?"

Carrington said it was not necessary.

"Then I only hope," said Rachel, in one of her impulses, "that you don't disagree with the verdict?"

"I didn't read the case," replied Carrington, glibly, and with neither more nor less of the contemptuous superoirity with which he would have referred to any other Old Bailey trial; but the man himself was quick to see the brutality of such a statement. "It wasn't necessary," he added. "You see, I knew you."

The insincerity was so obvious that Rachel could hardly bring herself to confess that she had come to ask his advice. "What was the point?" he had said to that, so crisply that the only point which Rachel could think of was the raw grievance of the empty house.

"Didn't your solicitor tell you?" asked Carrington. "He came to me about it; but I suppose"——

Rachel knew well what he supposed.

"He should have told you tonight," added Carrington, "at any rate. The rent was only paid for half the term—quite right—the usual way. The permanent tenant wanted to be done with the house altogether, and that entitled her to take her things out."

"And pray," demanded Rachel, "where are my things?"

"Ah, your solicitor will tell you that—when you give him the chance! By the way, I hope you don't mind my cigar? We were smoking in the next room."

"I have taken you from your guests," said Rachel, miserably. "I ought not to have come at this hour."

Carrington did not contradict her.

"But there seemed so much to speak about," she went desperately on

"If you will come to my chambers," said Carrington, "I shall be delighted to go into things with you."

He wrote down the address and, handing it to Rachel, rang the bell. This drove her to despair; evidently it never occurred to him that she was faint with weariness and hunger.

"Oh!" she cried; "oh, may I not speak to your wife?"

"Not tonight, if you don't mind," replied Carrington, with his little bow and a decision so obviously irrevocable that Rachel said no more. But she would not see the hand that he could afford to hold out to her now.

"No, I wouldn't have kept her," she sobbed in the street; "but she would have kept me! I know her!"

AND now Rachel's case was really desperate. There was but one place for her now. She would perish there of cold and horror; but she might buy something to eat and take it with her; and at least she could rest.

She crept to the King's road and returned with a few sandwiches. Then she hurried, weary though she was. But in the little street itself she stood aghast. A crowd filled it; the crowd stood before the empty house of sorrow and of crime; and in a moment Rachel saw the cause.

It was her own fault. She had left the light burning.

Rachel joined the skirts of the crowd—drawn by an irresistible fascination—and listened to what was being said.

"She's up there, I tell yer!" said one.

"Let's 'ave 'er aht of it."

"Yuss, she ain't no right there."

"No; the condemned cell's the plice for 'er!"

"Give us a stone afore the copper comes!"

And Rachel saw the first stone flung, and heard the first glass break. Then a hand touched her lightly on the shoulder.

"Do you still pin your faith to the man in the street?" said a voice.

And, though she had heard it for the first time that very evening, it was a voice that Rachel seemed to have known all her life.

In the next Sunday Post-Dispatch Magazine Mrs. Minchin starts life under "The Shadow of the Rope" and under the bonds of a strange compact. The installment makes fascinating reading.

Blowing a Million to Defend the America's Cup

down. But to every man jack goes $40 a month, with $5 a month extra at the end of the season for conduct money. The quartermasters get $50 each. The second mate gets $1200 for the season, the first mate $1500 and the sailing master from $2000 up.

Now, out of this crew three special men are picked—one to shin the mast in case of trouble; one to climb out on the bowspirt and one to keep the lazarette, where the extra suits of sail are stored. These take down an extra $5 monthly. Whenever a boat starts everybody receives an extra $2.50. Any race won nets everybody $5 more. Oh yes, the crew of a winning cup defender can salt away a pretty little piece of money—if they save!

The three crews went on the payroll on April 1. There they stay for six months. All hands are helping with the boats as well, cleaning, fixing gear, tuning up. Some have looked over the sails, others have polished the underbody.

And all this time they have been living high. Each yacht has a tender and attendant launches. On the tender the crew eats and sleeps. The steamer City of Stamford, altered at a cost of $10,000, is a floating house for Vanitie. Defiance has the Irolita, Commodore Clark's schooner; the Cape Cod is Resolute's mother ship.

Every man jack has been sailing ships all his life. Their organization is all complete when they join. The first mate has his place forward, directing the crew and tending the head sails; the second mate is amidships, usually in charge of the hauling of backstays and runners. The quartermasters boss the different gangs, under the supervision of the master. On the quarterdeck is the force of sailing amateurs and the managing owner. The latter may or may not actually sail his craft. He has two or three amateur assistants, who are supposed to do the necessary chart work and keep the log of each race.

They pick out on the chart the position of the defender, practically on every tack. They must be prepared to give her location to the helmsman whenever it is necessary. Sometimes, not often, they are asked for advice.

Not all of the men who put up the money can sail in a race. They must be public spirited enough to stay away and watch their pride do her work from some more distant point of vantage than the quarterdeck. All that is asked of them is to put up their money regularly and unstintingly.

And not all the money goes for the boat, either. A pretty penny is needed for daily expenses. Yachting crews can eat a deal of provender. And they must be clothed. Every sailor man gets four white canvas working suits to begin with. He must have oilskins and rubber boots and tan leather, rubber-soled deck shoes. Likewise his kit must contain a blue jersey and a pair of blue trousers, also a man o' war shirt.

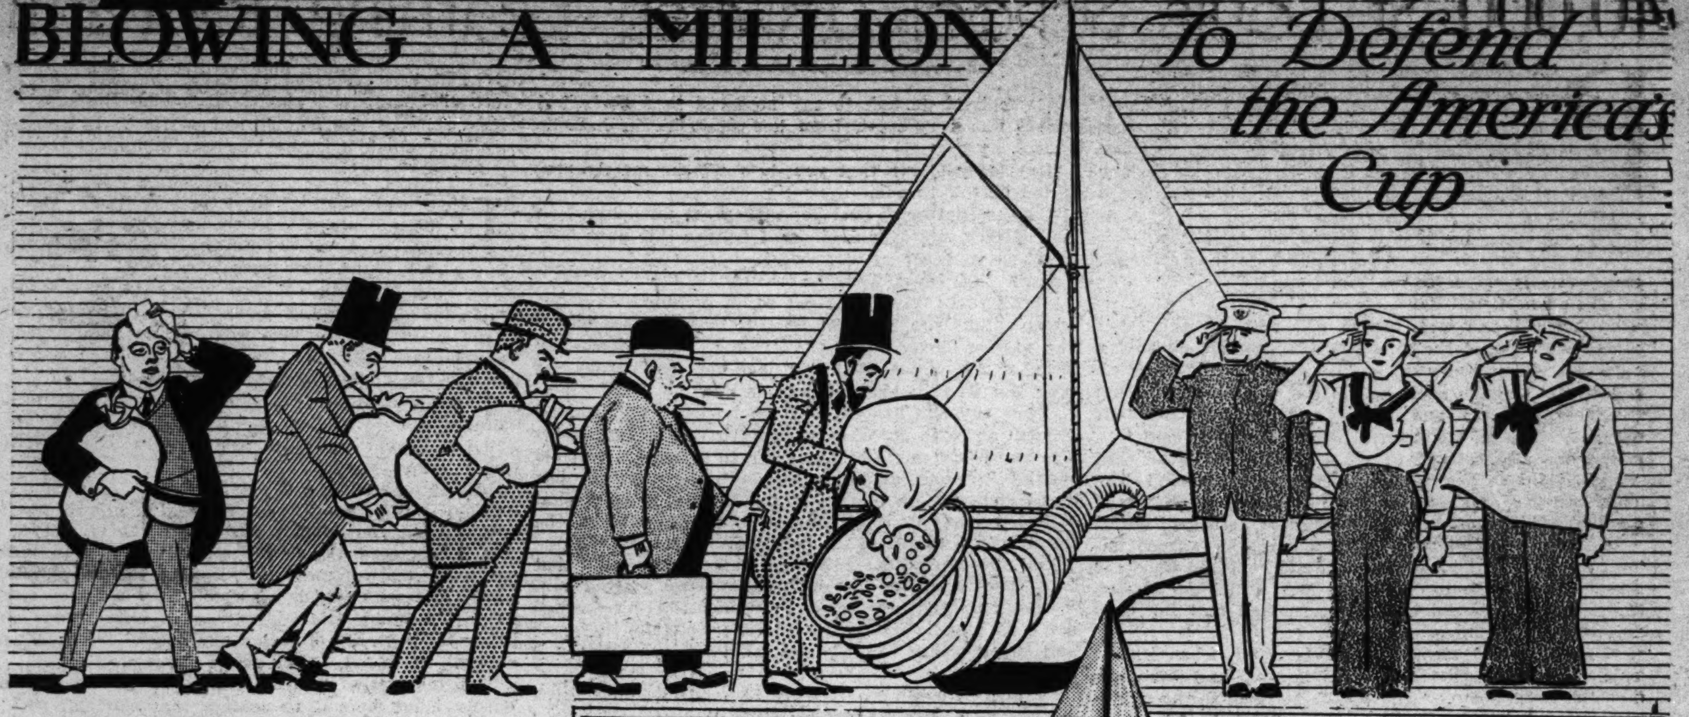
And now we have the boats safely launched and in the water, each in charge of her picked crew. What next? Ah, the tuning up. And that's the job that lasts until the morning of the race. Resolute and Defiance and Vanitie have each a tough, gruelling summer's work cut out for them.

First, all three will be taken to the New York end of the Sound. Then come 10 days of racing—mere trials, not at all decisive. On June 2 follows the regatta of the New York Yacht Club, under whose flag all three boats will sail. After that they race around the circuit, meaning that they take part in all the chief regattas of the principal yacht clubs, to get further tuning. On July 5 all three will be summoned to Newport, where the real work begins.

Day after day they will race each other there, pausing for breath, to make changes in rigging or gear as the owners see fit. Then in the latter part of August the real elimination races take place—as many as the committee appointed by the New York Yacht Club sees fit.

And then, on Sept. 10, off Sandy Hook, the first race with Shamrock IV, and the best three out of five.

BLOWING A MILLION To Defend the America's Cup



Next September's great yachting struggle means a year of labor and the expenditure of vast sums for racing machines that are of no value after the contest has been decided . . .

WHEN Sir Thomas Lipton blithely flung across the sea his fourth challenge for the America's yatching cup, he started something which it will take the sum of $1,000,000 to finish.

That's what it costs to make the race possible. Before the first starting gun booms these seven figures of real money have been written down to profit and loss—profit if we win and keep the cup; loss if the doughty Sir Thomas and his Shamrock IV succeed at last in lifting it, as he has tried thrice before.

Three cup defenders have been built to make one defender possible. They have eaten up from $500,000 to $600,000. The rest of the money will go for Sir Thomas' boat and the bringing of her here, and for the expenses of the whole thing, including the money spent by those who put to sea to see.

The race is practically a year's work. Some time before Sir Thomas sent his challenge to the New York Yacht Club yachting sharps knew it was in the air and they were ready for it. And who to defend?

"We will try," said a syndicate of flag officers of the New York club. When the list was made public it was found to consist of J. P. Morgan, George F. Baker Jr., Cornelius Vanderbilt, Henry Walters, Frederick G. Bourne and Arthur C. James.

"The more the merrier!" chirped another syndicate, called the "Tri-City," being from Boston, Philadelphia and New York, and made up of George M. Pynchon, J. B. Ford and E. Trowbridge Hall of New York; F. C. Fletcher, E. S. Webster, Elliott Wadsworth, Charles Hayden, F. E. Peabody, J. C. Cobb, Oliver Ames and Henry Taggart of Boston; E. W. Clark of Philadelphia, with George D. Barron of Rye, N. Y., and George Lauder Jr. of Greenwich, Conn.

"Me, too!" piped another voice, or in words to that effect, and lo! one single individual had essayed the building of a third defender all by his lonesomeness. He was Alexander Smith Cochran, the young carpet millionaire.

Now there are many rigid formalities coincident with building a cup defender. Just winning the race isn't enough—you've got to fulfill certain conditions. First of all, the would-be contenders must get the New York Yacht Club's consent, or they won't let them play. All three contenders got that—easy thing; all belong. Next, as Sir Thomas Lipton challenged with a boat 75 feet on the water line, it was decided to be real sports, and no boat should exceed that length, though it might be less. Over all the syndicate could make their yachts as long as they pleased. In depth 13 feet 9 inches is the limit and all will go that. In beam 21 feet or 22 feet is the proper thing, but there's no hard and fast rule. Sail area, the other great item, can be anything the defenders wish it, but 'ware one thing—the more area the greater time allowance given to the other boat.

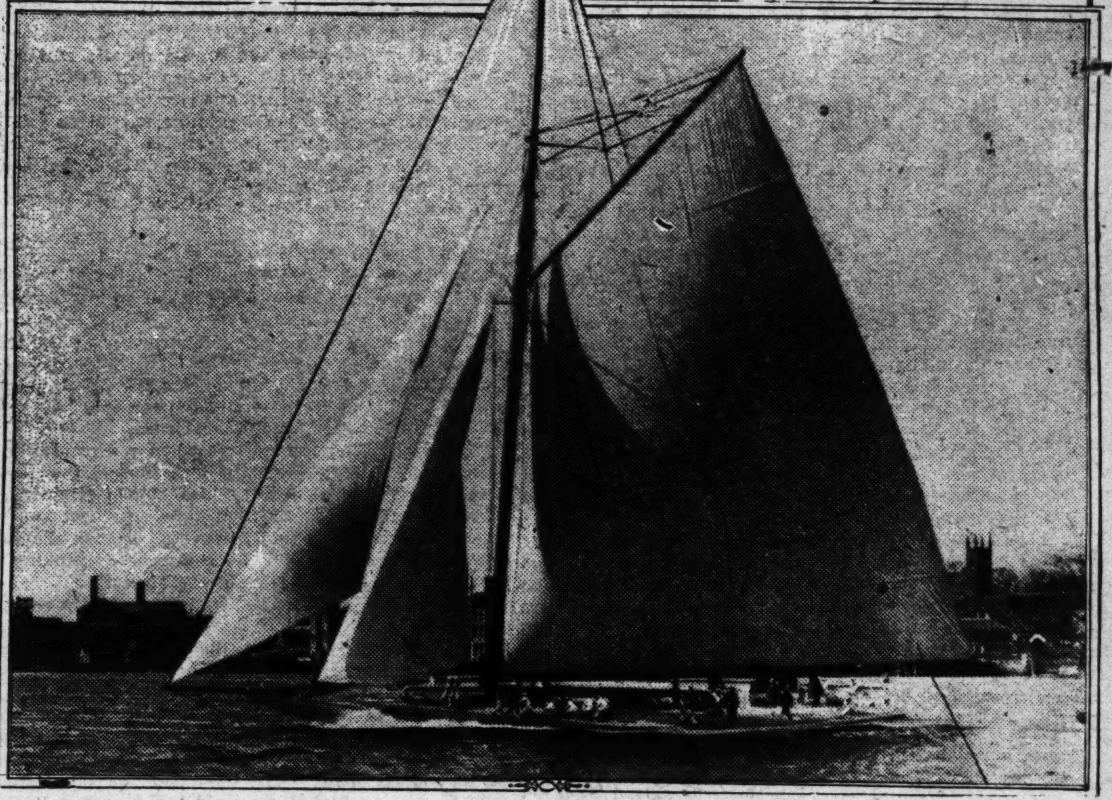
The boat builders require other little formalities when the contract is signed—25 per cent of the price in spot cash, 25 per cent when the yacht is in frame, 25 per cent when she is completely plated and 25 per cent when she is delivered.

"They built so fast," laughed one member of the flag officers' syndicate, "that it seemed I was being called upon for an assessment every day or so!"

Next the name! And that is a most important item. Names win or lose races—any yachting crank will tell you that. To hold the America's cup safe the yacht must have a name expressive of doughty seaworthiness—an adjective preferably.

And it must have eight letters—no more, no less. All winners had them—Vigilant, Defender, Columbia, Reliance; eight, count 'em. Poor Constitution! Built to be a world beater, she was a fizzle. But then she violated all tradition in the number of letters in her name and the Columbia, winner of the race of the year before, had to be raced a second time. But she pulled off the series, thanks to the eight letters.

So we have the Resolute, the flag officers' entry, and the Defiance, the Tri-City offering, each with eight letters. But Mr. Cockran has chosen Vanitie for his name. Old salts shake their heads and wish him luck, but they mumble dire predictions—only seven leltters and something to do with a woman.



The Resolute, first of the cup defenders to take the water.

Approximate Measurements of Cup-Defending Yachts

	Resolute.	Defiance	Vanitie.
Length over all	104 ft.	115 ft.	112 ft.
Length on water line	74 ft. 8½ in.	75 ft.	75 ft.
Extreme beam	23 ft. 10 in.	22 ft. 10 in.	21 ft. 6 in.
Draught	13 ft. 9 in.	13 ft. 6 in.	13 ft. 8 in.
Draught with centerboard,	21 ft. 10 in.	21 ft. 6 in.	21 ft. 8 in.
Sail area	8,000 sq. ft.	8,500 sq. ft.	9,000 sq. ft.

Now we've got the name and the money and permission; what next? Why, certainly: builders and designers next. The flag officers' syndicate selected the Herreshoffs, who design and build at Bristol, R. I.; the Tri-City people engaged George Owen of New York to design and the Bath (Me.) Iron Works to build. Mr. Cochran pinned his fath to William Gardner, the naval architect, and Vanitie came into being on the ways at the Lawley yards, Neponset, Mass.

"Bronze," ordered the Resolute people, and "bronze," echoed Mr. Cockran, when the material for the yachts was asked of them. "Ours will have mahogany skin," announced Mr. Pynchon for the Defiance.

So far, so good. And while the boats are on the ways being set up and finished, let us see what next is to be done by those interested. Each group selects a sailing manager—R. W. Emmons II is acting for the flag officers, Mr. Pynchon for the Tri-City crowd. Mr. Cochran is the whole works for himself. These managers are autocrats of everything—yacht, master, crew, money.

And now—and most important of all—the sailing master. No, he isn't the captain. The etiquette of the quarter deck demands that the sailing owner get this title. He picks the master. The Resolute's course will be set by Christ Christiansen, former master of Commodore Vanderbilt's crack Aurora; S. B. Howell will handle the Defiance—he was Mr. Pynchon's skipper on the sloop Istalena; Mr. Cochran has engaged William B. Dennis, who used to sail Morton B. Plan's dandy schooner Elena.

In turn the masters pick the mates, and the two mates selected the crews. This job has all been attended to and all three outfits are now with their respective yachts. And they are a jolly company, every one, mostly Scandinavian fellows, big and broad-backed, huskies who heard the call of the sea when they were boys. On the boats themselves are from twenty-eight to thirty of these racing salts. Enough more are needed for the tenders and lauches to bring the number of hands up to 50 for each defender.

Pay? That's nothing. What they want is a whack of the big prize money if they keep the cup nailed

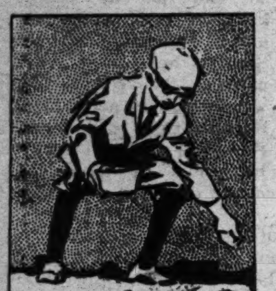
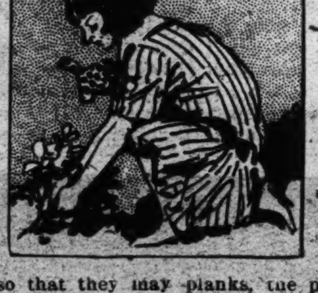
40,000 St. Louis School Children Learning to Farm

Under a supervisor from Shaw's Garden they are taught the mystery of plants and incidentally learn a great deal that is helpful in their school work

PRACTICAL gardening is now being done by over 40,000 public school children of St. Louis, in connection with their regular nature-study work. Lessons in the theory of agriculture and horticulture are given by teachers in the classroom, which are worked out in practice in the school gardens by the pupils during recess and after school hours. The entire plan is under the direction of H. C. Irish, recently appointed Supervisor of School Gardening, but formerly of the Missouri Botanical Garden, who consults with the principals of the various schools in regard the most advantageous methods to employ in tilling the soil, planting, sowing and everything pertaining to the care of gardens. Nearly all the city schools have suitable space for gardens and new sites are selected by the Board of Education with the available garden space in view.



W. J. Stevens, principal of the Eugene Field School, Olive street and Taylor avenue, is regarded as the father of the school gardening idea in St. Louis. It was under Mr. Stevens' direction that the first plot of ground was successfully cultivated by school children at the Hodgen School, California avenue and Henrietta street, in 1903.

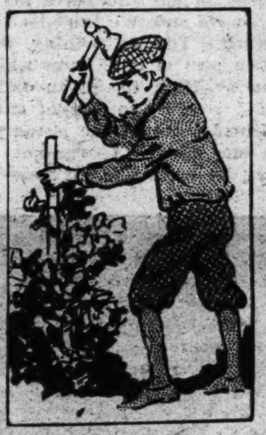


Since then the work has been systematically taken up by other schools, both for recreation and instruction. The object sought is twofold: it being desired to stimulate interest in gardening and a greater regard for school property by creating a sense of proprietorship; and also to beautify the school grounds, so that they may become an example for the neighborhood and impel the children to cultivate neglected bits of ground about their own homes.

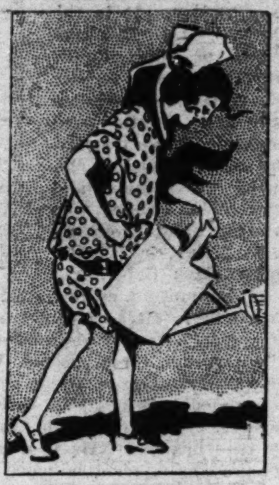
The large yards at the Shaw School, 5329 Columbia avenue, are unusually well adapted to this purpose, and a competent janitor is employed especially to take care of the lawn and teach the boys and girls how to prepare the ground, sow, plant and cultivate.

In some instances vacant lots adjacent to school property have been loaned for gardening exercises by the owners. Recently George L. Hawkins, principal of the Oak Hill School, Morganford road and Bingham avenue, secured the use of three lots—90x125 feet—near the school property, which the children quickly transformed into bright, attractive looking spots.

A close correlation to the graded studies of the curriculum is followed out in connection with gardening. For instance, the flowers serve as models for drawing lessons; geography is studied in the soil, the miniature plot of ground representing the larger areas of the world, in which fertility directly influences the occupations of the people, their resources and the wealth of the country in general; arithmetic is mastered as the children measure the beds and divide up the patches of ground, etc.



All sorts of vegetables and flowers in season are planted. Large quantities of seeds for both are donated to the school board by the United States Department of Agriculture, reducing the expense of that item to the minimum. Armed with small hoes, rakes, shovels and measuring planks, the pupils dig, plant and tend their crops and watch them mature with keenest interest. The greatest good nature and high spirits prevail during the intervals given to this occupation. Some of the boys in the upper grades haul manure to mulch and fertilize the beds; others spade, prune and busy themselves in pulling weeds, watering the beds, etc.



The easiest grown crops are mostly favored, such as radishes, lettuce, peas, turnips, beets, tomatoes, beans and corn. Tulips, hyacinths and narcissus are among the bulbous flowers which are popular with the youngsters.

A typical exercise under direction of the teacher is illustrated in the process employed in picking beans. One half of the class do the picking, while the others collect the pickings in standard half-bushel measures. The beans are then taken to the schoolroom, where the quart, peck, half-bushel and bushel are taught in regular course, and each child measures out and takes home a quart for himself.

The next day problems involving these measures, the market price of beans and the numbers taught in the current work of the class are given by the teacher.

Aside from the utilitarian principle that is inculcated by this healthful form of outdoor activity it has a distinct ethical value, in that it serves to keep the mind of children filled with useful and interesting thoughts and to make them constructive, rather than destructive, in their tendencies.

The school gardens will be cared for during the summer vacations by volunteer workers under the general supervision of Mr. Irish. A picket fence, four feet high, is used to inclose the spaces, to protect the products from the ravages of stray chickens, dogs, cats and willful juveniles. In the winter many of the plants are cared for in indoor window boxes.

A REMINISCENCE OF SHERLOCK HOLMES

BY SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE

should never be dissolved until the work was done. It was my part, after we had discovered in the transformed Henderson the fallen despot, to attach myself to his household and keep the others in touch with his movements. This I was able to do by securing the position of governess in his family. He little knew that the woman who faced him at every meal was the woman whose husband he had hurried at an hour's notice into eternity. I smiled on him, did my duty to his children, and bided my time. An attempt was made in Paris, and failed. We zigzagged swiftly here and there over Europe to throw off the pursuers, and finally returned to this house, which he had taken upon his first arrival in England.

"But here also the ministers of justice were waiting. Knowing that he would return there, Garcia, who is the son of the former highest dignitary in San Pedro, was waiting with two trusty companions of humble station, all three fired with the same reasons for revenge. He could do little during the day, for Murillo took every precaution, and never went out save with his satellite Lucas, or Lopez as he was known in the days of his greatness. At night, however, he slept alone, and the avenger might find him. On a certain evening, which had been prearranged, I sent my friend final instructions, for the man was forever on the alert, and continually changed his room. I was to see that the doors were open, and the signal of a green or white light in a window which faced the drive was to give notice if all were safe, or if the attempt had better be postponed.

"But everything went wrong with us. In some way I had excited the suspicion of Lopez, the secretary. He crept up behind me and sprang upon me just as I had finished the note. He and his master dragged me to my room, and held judgment upon me as a convicted traitoress. Then and there they would have plunged their knives into me could they have seen how to escape the consequences of the deed. Finally, with much debate, they concluded that my murder was too dangerous. But they determined to get rid forever of Garcia. They had gagged me, and Murillo twisted my arm round until I gave him the address. I swear that he might have twisted it off had I understood what it would mean to Garcia. Lopez addressed the note which I had written, sealed it with his sleeve link, and sent it by the hand of the servant Jose. How they murdered him I do not know, save that it was Murillo's hand who struck him down, for Lopez had remained to guard me. I believe he must have waited among the gorse bushes, through which the path winds, and struck him down as he passed. At first they were of a mind to let him enter the house and to kill him as a detected burglar; but they argued that if they were mixed up in an inquiry, their own identity would at once be publicly disclosed, and they would be open to further attacks. With the death of Garcia the pursuit might cease, since such a death might frighten others from the task.

"All would now have been well for them had it not been for my knowledge of what they had done. I have no doubt that there were times when my life hung in the balance. I was confined to my room, terrorized by the most horrible threats, cruelly ill-used to break my spirit—see this stab on my shoulder, and the bruises from end to end of my arms—and a gag was thrust into my mouth on the one occasion when I tried to call from the window. For five days this cruel imprisonment continued, with hardly enough food to hold body and soul together. This afternoon a good lunch was brought me, but the moment after I took it I knew that I had been drugged. In a sort of dream I remember being half-led, half-carried to the carriage; in the same state I was conveyed to the train. Only then, when the wheels were almost moving, did I suddenly realize that my liberty lay in my own hands. I sprang out; they tried to drag me back; and had it not been for the help of this good man, who led me to the cab, I should never have broken away. Now, thank God, I am beyond their power forever."

We had all listened intently to this remarkable statement. It was Holmes who broke the silence:

"Our difficulties are not over," he remarked, shaking his head. "Our police work ends, but our legal work begins."

"Exactly," said I. "A plausible lawyer could make it out as an act of self-defense, there may be a hundred crimes in the background, but it is only on this one that they can be tried."

"Come, come," said Baynes, cheerfully, "I think better of the law than that. Self-defense is one thing. To entice a man in cold blood with the object of murdering him is another, whatever danger you may fear from him. No, no, we shall all be justified when we see the tenants of High Gable at the next Guildford Assizes."

It is a matter of history, however, that a little time was still to elapse before the Tiger of San Pedro should meet with his deserts. Wily and bold, he and his companion threw their pursuer off the track by entering a lodging house in Edmonton street and leaving by the back gate into Curzon Square. From that day they were seen no more in England. Some six months afterward the Marquis of Montalva and Signor Rulli, his secretary, were both murdered in their rooms at the Hotel Escurial at Madrid. The crime was ascribed to nihilism, and the murderers were never arrested. Inspector Baynes visited us at Baker street with a printed description of the dark face of the secretary, and of the masterful features, the magnetic black eyes, and the tufted brows of his master. We could not doubt that justice, if belated, had come at last.

"A chaotic case, my dear Watson," said Holmes over an evening pipe. "It will not be possible for you to present it in that compact form which is dear to your heart. It covers two continents, concerns two groups of mysterious persons, and is further complicated by the highly respectable presence of our friend, Scott Eccles, whose inclusion shows me that the deceased Garcia had a scheming mind and a well-developed instinct of self-preservation. It is remarkable only for the fact that, amid a perfect jungle of possibilities, we, with our worthy collaborator, the Inspector, have kept our close hold on the essentials, and so been guided along the crooked and winding path. Is there any point which is not quite clear to you?"

"The object of the mulatto cook's return?"

"I think that the strange creature in the kitchen may account for it. The man was a primitive savage from the backwoods of San Pedro, and this was his fetish. When his companion and he had fled to some prearranged retreat—already occupied no doubt by a confederate—the companion had persuaded him to leave so compromising an article of furniture. But the mulatto's heart was with it, and he was driven back to it next day, when, on reconnoitering through the window, he found Policeman Walters in possession. He waited three days longer, and then his piety or his superstition drove him to try once more. Inspector Baynes, who, with his usual astuteness, had minimized the incident before me, had really recognized its importance, and had left a trap into which the creature walked. Any other point, Watson?"

"The torn bird, the pail of blood, the charred bones, all the mystery of that weird kitchen?"

Holmes smiled as he turned up an entry in his notebook.

"I spent a morning in the British Museum reading up that and other points. Here is a quotation from Eckermann's 'Voodooism and the Negroid Religions:'

"'The true Voodoo worshiper attempts nothing of importance without certain sacrifices which are intended to propitiate his unclean gods. In extreme cases these rites take the form of human sacrifices, followed by cannibalism. The more usual victims are a white cock, which is plucked in pieces alive, or a black goat, whose throat is cut and body burned.'

"So you see our savage friend was very orthodox in his ritual. It is grotesque, Watson," Holmes added as he slowly fastened his notebook, "but, as I have had occasion to remark, there is but one step from the grotesque to the horrible."

—THE END—

BLANCH, THE COW GIRL, THROWER OF STEERS

self several times so that I ached for days, but that's all. Once a horn caught my sleeve and tore through my corset, but I didn't get a scratch—only a scare. I just held on and wriggled between the steer's horns so that he couldn't gore me when we fell to the ground.

"I've seen lots of the boys hurt trying the game. One of them had his stomach torn open right in front of me; but he was careless, and if taking lots of care will save me frour injury I'll never be hurt."

The act, as performed by Miss McGaughey, is sufficiently thrilling. She dashes into the arena on horseback. A big brute of a steer, already in the arena, throws a shifty red eye upon her as she gallops in. Gathering some menace from her appearance, the animal turns and makes off at a lumbering trot. The lope changes to a gallop as the pounding broncho ranges alongside. Light as a feather, the girl leaps to the ground, and at the peril of being torn or tossed, springs to the side of the steer and seizes its horns.

The rearing beast tries to shake off its annoyer, but she hangs on for dear life. Up snaps the big head; she bounces from the ground like a rubber ball, but her grip never relaxes. Finally the big animal balks, hesitates and stops, tired with the effort of dragging 140 pounds of girlhood about.

Her feet are on solid ground again. Her left arm presses down on the steer's neck and her left hand seizes the offside horn. Suddenly her free arm slips down the animal's face and her fingers clutch the nostrils in a firm grasp. She pulls with her left hand and pushes with her right. Although it does not appear so, a vigorous leverage is thus exerted. The steer bellows with pain and fright, but the great head gives slowly towards the left; every inch yielded adds to the purchase of the girl's grasp.

The brute's left knee wavers. Then the right knee caves it. The steer shivers from head to foot, attempts to jerk his head free in one final struggle, and abruptly collapses to the ground. Usually the spectators cry out in horror, for the plucky girl goes down with him and appears to be pinioned by the deadly horns. But she has adroitly thrown herself between the horns and lies unhurt on her back until cowboys come and extricate her from the unenviable position.

Miss McGaughey, although not afraid to manhandle a steer single-handed, confesses that she dreads to ride a horse at a dead gallop. She is right to do so, for in this way she was injured twice. Once her leg was broken in a fall in a relay race, and last year she was thrown and broke her ankle in a race.

"WE can now see a reason for the disappearance of Garcia's household. They were all confederates in the same unknown crime. If it came off, then Garcia returned, and possible suspicion would be warded off by the Englishman's evidence, and all would be well. But the attempt was a dangerous one, and, if Garcia did not return by a certain hour, it was probable that his own life had been sacrificed. It had been arranged, therefore, that in such a case his two subordinates were to make for some prearranged spot, where they could escape investigation and be in the position afterward to renew their attempt. That would fully explain the facts, would it not?"

in the intervals of my botanical researches, I made reconnoissance of all the large houses and and examination of the family history of the occupants. One house, and only one, riveted my attention. It is the famous old Jacobean grange of High Gable, one mile on the farther side of Oxchott and less than half a mile from the scene of the tragedy. The other mansions belonged to prosaic and respectable people, who live far aloof from romance. But Mr. Henderson of High Gable, was by all accounts, a curious man, to whom curious adventures might befall. I concentrated my attention, therefore, upon him and his household.

"A singular set of people, Watson—the man himself the most singular of them all. I managed to see him on a plausible pretext, but I seemed to read in his dark, deep-set, brooding eyes that he was perfectly aware of my true business. He is a man of 50, strong, active, iron-gray hair, great bunched black eyebrows, the step of a deer and the air of an emperor—a fierce, masterful man, with a red-hot spirit behind his parchment face. He is either a foreigner or has lived long in the tropics, for he is yellow and sapless, but tough as whipcord. His friend and secretary, Mr. Lucas, is undoubtedly a foreigner, chocolate brown, wily, suave and catlike with a poisonous gentleness of speech. You see, Watson, we have come already upon two sets of foreigners—one at Wisteria Lodge and one at High Gable—so our gaps are beginning to close.

"These two men, close and confidential friends, are the center of the household; but there is one other person who for our immediate purpose may be even more important. Henderson has two children—girls of 11 and 13. Their governess is a Miss Burnet, an Englishwoman, of 40 or thereabouts. There is also one confidential man servant. This little group forms the real family, for they travel about together, and Henderson is a great traveler, always on the move. It is only within the last few weeks that he has returned after a year's absence to High Gable. I may add that he is enormously rich, and, whatever his whims may be, he can very easily satisfy them. For the rest, his house is full of butlers, footmen, maidservants and the usual overfed, underworked staff of a large English country house.

"So much I learned partly from village gossip and partly from my own observation. There is no better instruments than discharged servants with a grievance, and I was lucky enough to find one. I call it luck, but it would not have come my way had I not been looking out for it. As Baynes remarks, we all have our systems. It was my system which enabled me to find John Warner, late gardener of High Gable, sacked in a moment of temper by his employer. He, in turn, had friends among the indoor servants, who unite in their fear and dislike of their master. So I had the key to the secrets of the establishment.

"Curious people, Watson! I don't pretend to understand it all yet, but very curious people anyway. It's a double-winged house, and the servants live on one side, the family on the other. There's no link between the two save for Henderson's own servant, who serves the family's meals. Everything is carried to a certain door, which forms the one connection. Governess and children hardly go out at all, except into the garden. Henderson never by any chance walks alone. His dark secretary is like his shadow. The gossip among the servants is that their master is terribly afraid of something. 'Sold himself to the devil in exchange for money,' says Warner, 'and expects his creditor to come up and claim his own.' Where they come from, or who they are, nobody has an idea. They are very violent. Twice Henderson has lashed at folk with his dog whip, and only his long purse and heavy compensation have kept him out of the court.

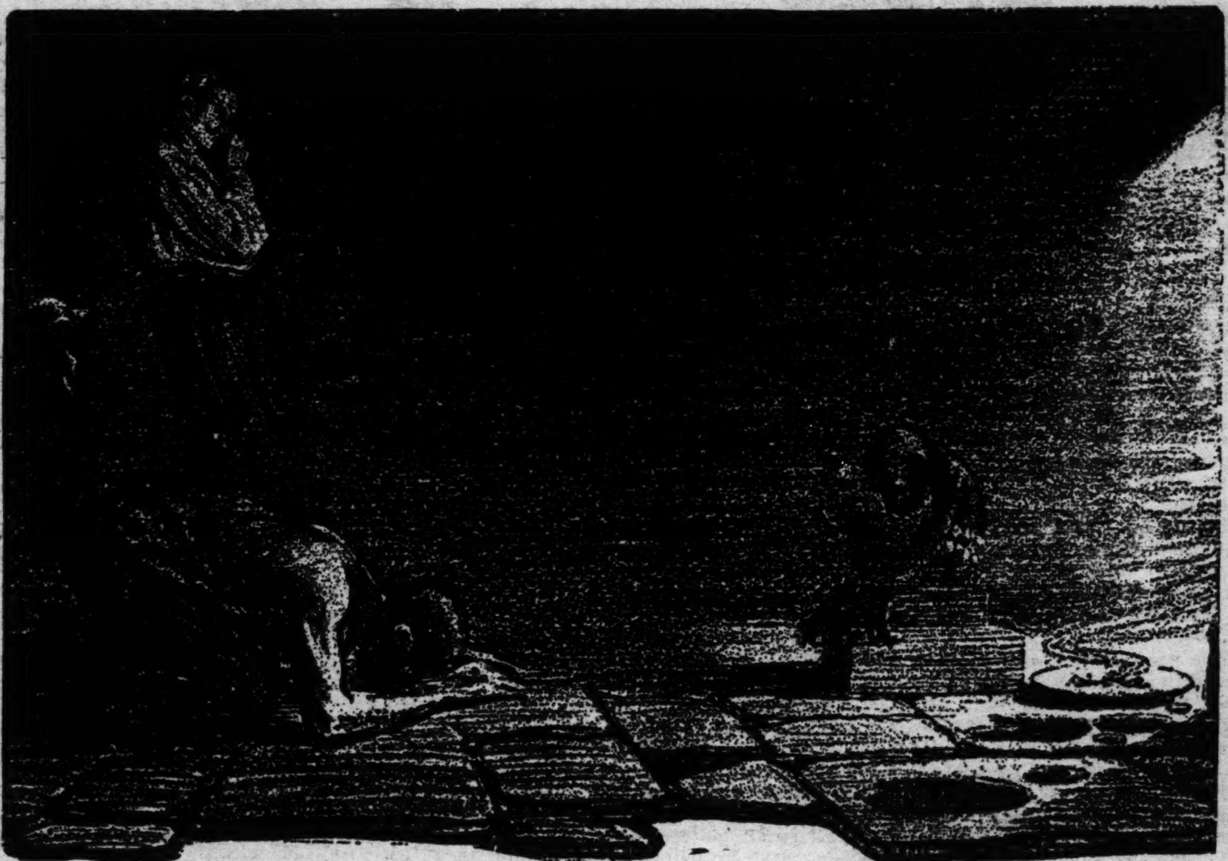
"Well, now, Watson, let us judge the situation by this new information. We may take it that the letter came out of this strange household, and was an invitation to Garcia to carry out some attempt which had already been planned. Who wrote the note? It was someone within the citadel, and it was a woman. Who, then, but Miss Burnet, the governess? All our reasoning seems to point that way. At any rate, we may take it as a hypothesis, and see what consequences it would entail. I may add that Miss Burnet's age and character make it certain that my first idea that there might be a love interest in our story is out of the question.

"If she wrote the note, she was presumably the friend and confederate of Garcia. What, then, might she be expected to do if she heard of his death? If he met it in some nefarious enterprise, her lips might be sealed. Still, in her heart, she must retain bitterness and hatred against those who had killed him, and would presumably help, so far as she could, to have revenge upon them. Could we see her, then, and try to use her? That was my first thought. But now we come to a sinister fact. Miss Burnet has not been seen by any human eye since the night of the murder. From that evening she has utterly vanished. Is she alive? Has she, perhaps, met her end on the same night as the friend whom she had summoned? Or is she merely a prisoner? There is the point which we still have to decide.

"You will appreciate the difficulty of the situation, Watson. There is nothing upon which we can apply for a warrant. Our whole scheme might seem fantastic if laid before a magistrate. The woman's disappearance counts for nothing, since in that extraordinary household any member of it might be invisible for a week. And yet she may at the present moment be in danger of her life. All I can do is to watch the house and leave my agent, Warner, on guard at the gates. We can't let such a situation continue. If the law can do nothing, we must take the risk ourselves.

"I know which is her room. It is accessible from the top of an outhouse. My suggestion is that you and I go tonight and see if we can strike at the very heart of the mystery."

It was not, I must confess, a very alluring prospect. The old house with its atmosphere of murder, the singular and formidable inhabitants, the unknown dangers of the approach, and the fact that we were putting ourselves legally in a false position, all combined to damp my ardor. But there was something in the ice-cold reasoning of Holmes which made it impossible to shrink from any adventure which he might recommend. One knew that thus, and only thus, could a solution be found. I clasped his hand in silence, and the die was cast.



"The strange creature was the mulatto's fetish. * * * The true Voodoo worshiper attempts nothing without certain sacrifices to his unclean gods."

But it was not destined that our investigation should have so adventurous an ending. It was about 5 o'clock, and the shadows of the March evening were beginning to fall, when an excited rustic rushed into our room.

"They've gone, Mr. Holmes. They went by the last train. The lady broke away, and I've got her in a cab downstairs."

"Excellent, Warner!" cried Holmes, springing to his feet. "Watson, the gaps are closing rapidly."

In the cab was a woman, half-collapsing from nervous exhaustion. She bore upon her aquiline and emaciated face the traces of some recent tragedy. Her head hung listlessly upon her breast, but, as she raised it and turned her dull eyes upon us, I saw that her pupils were dark dots in the center of the broad, gray iris. She was drugged with opium.

"I watched at the gate, same as you advised, Mr. Holmes," said our emissary, the discharged gardener. "When the carriage came out I followed it to the station. She was like one walkin' in her sleep; but when they tried to get her into the train she came to life and struggled. They pushed her into the carriage. She fought her way out again. I took her part, got her into a cab, and here we are. I shan't forget the face at the carriage window as I led her away. I'd have a short life if he had his way—the black eyed, scowling, yellow devil."

We carried her upstairs, laid her on the sofa, and a couple of cups of the strongest coffee soon cleared her brain from the mists of the drug. Baynes had been summoned by Holmes and the situation rapidly explained to him.

"Why, sir, you've got me the very evidence I want," said the Inspector warmly, shaking my friend by the hand. "I was on the same scent as you from the first."

"What! you were after Henderson?"

"Why, Mr. Holmes, when you were crawling in the shrubbery at High Gable I was up one of the trees in the plantation and saw you down below. It was just who would get his evidence first."

"Then why did you arrest the mulatto?"

Baynes chuckled.

"I was sure Henderson, as he calls himself, felt that he was suspected, and that he would lie low and make no move so long as he thought he was in any danger. I arrested the wrong man to make him believe that our eyes were off him. I knew he would be likely to clear off then and give us a chance of getting at Miss Burnet."

Holmes laid his hand on the Inspector's shoulder.

"You will rise high in your profession. You have instinct and intuition," said he.

Baynes flushed with pleasure.

"I've had a plain-clothes man waiting at the station all the week. Wherever the High Gable folk go, he will keep them in sight. But he must have been hard put to it when Miss Burnet broke away. However, your man picked her up, and it all ends well. We can't arrest without her evidence, that is clear, so the sooner we get a statement the better."

"Every minute she gets stronger," said Holmes, glancing at the governess. "But tell me, Baynes, who is this man Henderson?"

"Henderson," the Inspector answered, "is Don Murillo, once called the Tiger of San Pedro."

The Tiger of San Pedro! The whole history of the man came back to me in a flash. He had made his name as the most lewd and bloodthirsty tyrant that had ever governed any country with a pretense to civilization. Strong, fearless and energetic, he had sufficient virtue to enable him to impose his odious vices upon a cowering people for 10 or 12 years. His name was a terror through all Central America. At the end of that time there was a universal rising against him. But he was as cunning as he was cruel, and at the first whisper of coming trouble he had secretly conveyed his treasures aboard a ship which was manned by devoted adherents. It was an empty palace which was stormed by the insurgents next day. The dictator, his two children, his secretary and his wealth had all escaped them. From that moment he had vanished from the world, and his identity had been a frequent subject for comment in the European press.

"Yes, sir, Don Murillo, the Tiger of San Pedro," said Baynes. "If you look it up you will find that the San Pedro colors are green and white, same as in the note, Mr. Holmes. Henderson he called himself, but I traced him back. Paris and Rome and Madrid, to Barcelona, where his ship came in in '86. They've been looking for him all the time for their revenge, but it is only now that they have begun to find him out."

"They discovered him a year ago," said Miss Burnet, who had sat up and was now intently following the conversation. "Once already his life has been attempted, but some evil spirit shielded him. Now, again, it is the noble, chivalrous Garcia who has fallen, while the monster goes safe. But another will come, and yet another, until some day justice will be done; that is as certain as the rise of tomorrow's sun." Her thin hands clenched and her worn face blanched with the passion of her hatred.

"But how come you into this matter, Miss Burnet?" asked Holmes. "How can an English lady join in such a murderous affair?"

"I joined in it because there is no other way in the world by which justice can be gained. What does the law of England care for the rivers of blood shed years ago in San Pedro, or for the shipload of treasure which this man has stolen? To you they are like crimes committed in some other planet. But we know. We have learned the truth in sorrow and in suffering. To us there is no fiend in hell like Juan Murillo, and no peace in life while his victims still cry for vengeance."

"No doubt," said Holmes, "he was as you say. I have heard that he was atrocious. But how are you affected?"

"I will tell you it all. This villain's policy was to murder on one pretext or another every man who showed such promise that he might in time come to be a dangerous rival. My husband—yes, my real name is Signora Victor Durando—was the San Pedro minister in London. He met me and married me there. A nobler man never lived upon earth. Uuhappily, Murillo heard of his excellence, recalled him on some pretext, and had him shot. With a premonition of his fate, he had refused to take me with him. His estates were confiscated, and I was left with a pittance and a broken heart.

"Then came the downfall of the tyrant. He escaped, as you have just described. But the many whose lives he had ruined, whose nearest and dearest had suffered torture and death at his hands, would not let the matter rest. They banded themselves into a society, which case. It was obvious to all that his own witness had come forward from her own willful perversity and in direct defiance of his advice.

"THE first to appear on the Monday morning and the last to escape when the court adjourned was a white-headed gentleman of striking appearance. He had a well-preserved reddish face, with a small mouth of extraordinary strength, a canine jaw and singularly noble forehead; but his most obvious distinction was his full head of snowy hair. No one in court had ever seen this man before; but by the third day of the trial his identity was a subject of discussion among the various functionaries who had already found him as free with a sovereign as most gentlemen are with a piece of silver. So every day he was ushered with ceremony to the same seat, where he would watch the prisoner."

IT was a dismal afternoon, and the witness box at Old Bailey is so situated that evidence is given with the back to the light; thus, Rachel Minchin afforded no chance to the lightning artists of the half-penny press, or even to the students of physiognomy behind the man with the white hair. This listener did not lean forward an inch: the questions were answered in so clear a voice as to render it unnecessary. Yet it was one of these questions, put by her own counsel, which caused the white-headed man to clap a sudden hand to his ear. Rachel had told sadly but firmly of her final quarrel with her husband, incidentally revealing its cause. A neighbor was dangerously ill, whom she had been going to nurse that night, when her husband met her at the door and forbade her to do so.

"Was this neighbor a young man?"

"Hardly more than a boy," said Rachel.

"Was your husband jealous of him?"

"I had no idea of it until that night."

"Where had your husband been spending the evening?"

"I had no idea of that either—until he told me he had been watching the house—and why!"

Though the man was dead, she could not rid her voice of its scorn. A cold thrill ran through the court.

"And was that the last time you saw him alive?" inquired counsel.

But to this there was no immediate answer; for it was here that the white-haired man raised his hand to his ear.

"Was that the last time you saw your husband alive?" repeated Rachel's counsel, in winning accents and with reassuring face.

"It was," said Rachel.

It was then that the white-haired man dropped his eyes for once; and for once the thin, hard lines of his mouth relaxed in a smile that seemed to epitomize all the evil that was in his face.

It was late on the Saturday afternoon when the Judge summed up: but a pleasant surprise was in store for those who felt that His Lordship must speak at greater length than either of the warring counsel. The address from the bench was much the shortest of the three. Only the salient points were laid before the jury, with hardly a hint of the Judge's own opinion upon any one of them. The expression of that opinion was reserved for a point of even greater import than the value of any separate pieces of evidence. If, said the Judge, the inferences and theory of the prosecution were correct; if this unhappy woman, driven to desperation by her husband, and knowing where he kept his pistols, had taken his life with one of them, and afterwards manufactured the traces of a suppositious burglary; then there was no circumstances connected with the crime which could by any possibility reduce it from murder to manslaughter. The solemnity of this pronouncement was felt in the farthest corner of the crowded court. So they were to find her guilty of willful murder or not guilty at all.

DURING the Judge's address the short November day had turned from afternoon to night, and a great change had come over the aspect of the dim and dingy court. Opaque globes turned into flaring suns; incandescent burners revealed unsuspected brackets; the place was warmed and lighted for the first time during the week. And the effect of the light and warmth was on all the faces that rose as one while the Judge sidled from the bench, and the jury filed out of the box, and the prisoner disappeared down the dock stairs for the last time in ignorance of her fate. Next moment there was the buzz of talk that you expect in a theater between the acts rather than at a court of justice at the solemn crisis of a solemn trial. It was like a classroom with the master called away.

A hush had fallen, and someone had whispered, "They're coming!"

The jury had been absent but 40 minutes; and their expedition seemed as ill an omen as their nervous and responsible faces. The stillness was worthy of its subsequent description in every newspaper. The prisoner was standing in the front of the dock, a female warder upon either hand. The lightning pencil of the news journalist had its will of her at last. For Mrs. Minchin had dispensed with the heavy veil which she had but partially lifted during her brief sojourn in the witness box, and never once in the dock.

WAS that the face that had been hidden from them all these days? It was not what they had pictured beneath the proud, defiant carriage of its concealing veil. Was that the face of a determined murderess?

Beautiful it was not as they saw it then, but the elements of beauty lay unmistakably beneath a white mist of horror and of pain, as a lovely landscape is still lovely at its worst. The face was a thin but perfect oval. The mouth was at once bloodless, sweet and firm: the eyes of a warm and lustrous brown, brilliant, eloquent, brave—and hopeless!

Yes, she had no hope herself! It was plain enough, as, with sad, unflinching eyes, she watched and listened while, for the last time, the jurymen answered to their names.

Now they were done.

"Gentlemen, are you agreed upon your verdict?"

"We are."

"Do you find the prisoner guilty or not guilty?"

"Not guilty."

There was a simultaneous gasp from a hundred throats—a distinct cry from some. Dead silence then, while the clock ticked thrice.

"And that is the verdict of you all?"

"Of every one of us!"

The Judge leaned back in his place, his eyes upon the desk before him. It was several moments before they were lifted with his voice.

"Let her be discharged," was all he said even then.

So Rachel Minchin was supported from the court, before the round eyes of a hundred or two of her fellow-creatures, in the pitiable state of one who has been condemned to die and not set free to live.

In a few minutes the court was empty. But there was clamor in the corridors, and hooting already in the street. Only the white-haired gentleman had not left his place when an attendant returned to put out the lights. The attendant pointed him out to a constable at the door; both watched him a few moments. Then the attendant stepped down and touched him on the shoulder.

The gentleman turned slowly without a start. "Ah, you're the man I want to see," said he. "Was that the chief warder in the dock?"

"Him with the beard," said the attendant, nodding.

"Well, give him this, and give it him quick. I'll wait up there till he can see me."

And he pressed his card into the attendant's palm, with a couple of sovereigns underneath.

"Wants to see the chief warder," explained the attendant to the constable at the door.

"He's been here all the week," mused the constable aloud. "I wonder who he is?"

"Name of Steel," whispered the other, consulting the card.

"And not a bad name for him," said the constable at the door.

* * * * * * * *

RACHEL fought her weakness with closed eyes, and was complete mistress of herself when those about her thought consciousness alone was returning. The prison doctor stood over her with a medicine glass.

"Drink this," said he, kindly.

"But I have been conscious all the time."

"Never mind. You need it."

And Rachel took the restorative without more words. It did its work. The color came back to her face. The blood ran hot in her veins. In a minute she was standing up without assistance.

"And now," said Rachel, "I shall not trespass further on your kindness, and I am sure that you will not wish to detain me."

"We cannot," said the doctor. "At the same time, my dear madame, I think it would be advisable to—to wait a little while."

The doctor raised his eyes, and all at once Rachel heard. Overhead—outside—in the world—there was the brutal hooting of a thoughtless mob.

"So that is for me!"

Rachel set her teeth.

"On the contrary," said the kindly doctor, "it may be for the witnesses; but crowds are fickle things: and I should strongly urge you not to court a demonstration of one sort or the other. And meanwhile your solicitor is waiting to offer his congratulations."

"Is he, indeed!" cried Rachel, in a voice as hard as her eye.

THE MOST PICTURESQUE SPOT IN VERA CRUZ

Photographed During American Occupation

VERA CRUZ, or, as Cortes named it, Villa Rica de la Santa Vera Cruz (Rich City of the Holy True Cross), in its 395 years of existence has enjoyed anything but a happy history. It has been the abode of violence and death throughout its four centuries.

The first white man to land at Vera Cruz—then an Indian village—was Juan de Grijalva, who was sent upon a Mexican expedition by Gov. Velesquez of Cuba in 1518. The following year Cortes commanded a small expeditionary force. April 21, 1519, he landed on the island where now stands the fort of San Juan de Ulua. The next day he landed at the present site of Vera Cruz. Because it happened to be Good Friday and because from the natives he learned there was much gold in the interior, Cortes gave the place its high-sounding name. Incidentally he burned his ships in the harbor, partly to convince his followers there was no hope of turning back and partly to get them out of the way before a "norther" wrecked them.

In the following 80 years the site of Vera Cruz was moved no less than four times, by order of the Spanish Government. Its last removal was to the original site and the site which it occupies today.

From the very beginning its history has been a history of bloodshed. At the outset the Spaniards murdered the natives and the natives retaliated whenever they had a chance. Twice within the first half century of its existence it was ravaged by pirates. It was to protect the town against these freebooters that the gloomy old fort and prison of San Juan de Ulua was started in 1582. Construction of this fortress did not end until the middle of the last century.

In its comparatively modern history, Vera Cruz has changed masters through violence five times. It has seen the French, Spanish and English flags flying from its strong places, and twice have the Stars and Stripes been raised over its ancient fortress. It was captured by the French in 1838. In 1847 the victorious American fleet and army captured it by assault. In 1861 the French again seized the port, and in 1865 the intervening allied forces of France, England and Spain once more took charge.

Although small and unhealthy the city has always been fairly prosperous. In the last half century of Spanish rule it is estimated that $20,000,000 worth of commerce passed through it annually. This business has been greatly increased since the completion of railroad lines into the interior.

One of the striking things that impresses the newcomer to the city is the great number of buzzards to be found everywhere. These are the city's scavengers. They are protected by law. Anyone who kills or harms one of them is subject to a heavy fine. As a consequence, the ungainly birds wander about the streets of Vera Cruz without the slightest fear.

The city has a population of about 40,000. It is 263 miles by rail east of Mexico City. It has several beautiful churches, large docks, a big city hall, and has a good public library in an old Franciscan convent.

SOLUTION OF THE DARK MYSTERY IN THE

Singular Experience of Mr. J. Scott Eccles

A REMINISCENCE OF SHERLOCK HOLMES

By Sir Arthur Conan Doyle

Copyright, 1914, by the Post-Dispatch.

SYNOPSIS OF PART I.

JOHN SCOTT ECCLES of Popham House, Lee, England, applies to Sherlock Holmes for aid in solving a mystery. He is a typical British gentleman, retired. He met a Spaniard, Aloyisius Garcia, at the house of a friend. Garcia urges Eccles to visit him at Wisteria Lodge. He goes; they dine; his host is disturbed by a letter; Eccles retires and in the morning finds that he is the only person in the house. Garcia's body is found on Oxshott Common, his head smashed to pulp. The police, Holmes and Dr. Watson—who tells the story—go to Wisteria Lodge.

PART TWO.

A COLD and melancholy walk of a couple of miles brought us to a high wooden gate which opened into a gloomy avenue of chestnuts. The curved and shadowed drive led us to a low, dark house, pitch black against a slate-colored sky. From the front window upon the left of the door there peeped the glimmer of a feeble light.

"There's a constable in possession," said Baynes. "I'll knock at the window." He stepped across the grass plot and tapped with his hand on the pane. Through the fogged glass I dimly saw a man spring up from a chair beside the fire, and I heard a sharp cry from within the room. An instant later a white-face, hard-breathing policeman had opened the door, the candle wavering in his trembling hand.

"What's the matter, Walters?" asked Baynes sharply.

The man mopped his forehead with his handkerchief and gave a long sigh of relief.

"I am glad you have come, sir. It has been a long evening, and I don't think my nerve is as good as it was."

"Your nerve, Walters! I should not have thought you had a nerve in your body."

"Well, sir, it's this lonely, silent house and the queer thing in the kitchen. Then, when you tapped at the window I thought it had come again."

"That what had come again?"

"The devil, sir, for all I know. It was at the window."

"What was at the window, and when?"

"It was about two hours ago. The light was just fading. I was sitting reading in the chair. I don't know what made me look up, but there was a face looking in at me through the lower pane. Lord, sir, what a face it was! I'll see it in my dreams."

"Tut, tut, Walters! This is not talk for a police constable."

"I know, sir, I know; but it shook me, sir, and there is no use to deny it. It wasn't black sir, nor was it white, nor any color that I know but a kind of queer shade like clay with a splash of milk in it. Then there was the size of it—it was twice yours, sir. And the look of it, the great, staring goggle eyes, and the line of white teeth like a hungry beast. I tell you, sir, I couldn't move a finger, nor get my breath till it whisked away and was gone. Out I ran, and through the shrubbery, but thank God, there was no one there."

"If I didn't know you were a good man, Walters, I should put a black mark against you for this. If it were the devil himself, a constable on duty should never thank God that he could not lay his hands upon him. I suppose the whole thing is not a vision and a touch of nerves."

"That at least, is very easily settled," said Holmes, lighting his little pocket lantern. "Yes," he reported, after a short examination of the grassbed, "a number 12 shoe, I should say. If he was all on the same scale as his foot, he must certainly have been a giant."

"What became of him?" asked Baynes.

"He seems to have broken through the shrubbery and made for the road."

"Well," said the Inspector, with a grave and thoughtful face, "whoever he may have been, and whatever he may have wanted, he's gone for the present, and we have more immediate things to attend to. Now, Mr. Holmes, with your permission, I will show you round the house."

The various bedrooms and sitting rooms had yielded nothing to a careful search. Apparently the tenants had brought little or nothing with them, and all the furniture, down to the smallest details, had been taken over with the house. A good deal of clothing, with the stamp of Marx & Co., High Hollborn, had been left behind. Telegraphic inquiries had already been made, which showed that Marx knew nothing of his customer save that he was a good pay. Odds and ends, some pipes, a few novels, two of them in Spanish, an old-fashioned pinfire revolver and a guitar were among the personal property.

"Nothing in all this," said Baynes, stalking, candle in hand, from room to room. "But now, Mr. Holmes, I invite your attention to the kitchen."

It was a gloomy high-ceiling room at the back of the house, with a straw litter in one corner, which served apparently as a bed for the cook. The table was piled with half-eaten dishes and dirty plates, the debris of last night's dinner.

"Look at this," said Baynes. "What do you make of it?"

He held up his candle before an extraordinary object which stood at the back of the dresser. It was so wrinkled and shrunken and withered that it was difficult to say what it might have been. One could but say that it was black and leathery, and that it bore some resemblance to a dwarfish human figure. At first, as I examined it, I thought that it was a mummified negro baby, and then it seemed a very twisted and ancient monkey. Finally, I was left in doubt as to whether it was animal or human. A double band of white shells was strung round the center of it.

"Very interesting—very interesting, indeed," said Holmes, peering at this sinister relic. "Anything more?"

In silence Baynes led the way to the sink and held forward his candle. The limbs and body of some large white bird, torn savagely to pieces with the feathers still on, were littered all over it. Holmes pointed to the wattles on the severed head.

"A white cock," said he; "most interesting! It is really a very curious case."

But Mr. Baynes had kept his most sinister exhibit to the last. From under the sink he drew a zinc pail, which contained a quantity of blood. Then from the table he took a platter heaped with small pieces of charred bone.

"Something has been killed and something has been burned. We raked all these out of the fire. We had a doctor in this morning. He says that they are not human."

Holmes smiled and rubbed his hands.

"I must congratulate you, Inspector, on handling so distinctive and instructive a case. Your powers, if I may say so without offense, seem superior to your opportunities."

Inspector Baynes' small eyes twinkled with pleasure.

"You're right, Mr. Holmes. We stagnate in the provinces. A case of this sort gives a man a chance, and I hope that I will take it. What do you make of these bones?"

"A lamb, I should say, or a kid."

"And the white cock."

"Curious, Mr. Baynes, very curious. I should say almost unique."

"Yes, sir; there must have been some very strange people, with some very strange ways, in this house. One of them is dead. Did his companions follow him and kill him? If they did, we should have them, for every part is watched. But my own views are different. Yes, sir, my own views are very different."

"You have a theory, then?"

"And I'll work it myself, Mr. Holmes. It's only due to my own credit to do so. Your name is made, but I have still to make mine. I should be glad to be able to say afterward I had solved it without your help."

Holmes laughed good humoredly.

"Well, well, Inspector," said he. "Do you follow your path, and I will follow mine. My results are always very much at your service if you care to apply to me for them. I think that I have seen all that I wish in this house, and that my time may be more profitably employed elsewhere. Au revoir and good luck!"

I could tell by numerous subtle signs, which might have been lost upon anyone but myself, that Holmes was on a scent. As impassive as ever to the casual observer, there were, none the less, a subdued eagerness and suggestion of tension in his brightened eyes and brisker manner, which assured me that the game was afoot. After his habit he said nothing, and after mine I asked no questions. Sufficient for me to share the sport and lend by humble help to the capture without distracting that intent brain with needless interruption. All would come round to me in due time.

I waited therefore—but to my ever-deepening disappointment I waited in vain. Day succeeded day, and my friend took no step forward. One morning he spent in town, and I learned from a casual reference that he had visited the British Museum. Save for this one excursion, he spent his days in long, and often solitary, walks, or in chatting with a number of village gossips, whose acquaintance he had cultivated.

"I'm sure, Watson, a week in the country will be invaluable to you," he remarked. "It is very pleasant to see the first green shoots upon the hedges and the catkins on the hazels once again. With a spud, a tin box and an elementary work on botany there are happy days to be spent." He prowled about with this equipment himself, and yet it was a poor show of plants which he would bring home of an evening.

Occasionally, in our rambles, we came across Inspector Baynes. His fat, red face wreathed itself in smiles and his small eyes glittered as he greeted my companion. He said little about the case, but from that little we gathered that he also was not dissatisfied with the course of events. I must admit, however, that I was somewhat surprised when, some five days after the crime, I opened my morning paper to find in large letters

THE OXSHOTT MYSTERY

A SOLUTION

ARREST OF SUPPOSED ASSASSIN.

Holmes sprang in his chair as if he had been stung when I read the headlines.

"By Jove!" he cried. "You don't mean that Baynes has got him?"

"Apparently," said I, as I read the following report:

"Great excitement was caused in Esher and the neighboring district when it was learned late last night that an arrest had been effected in connection with the Oxshott murder. It will be remembered that Mr. Garcia of Wisteria Lodge, was found dead upon Oxshott Common, his body showing signs of extreme violence, and that on the same night his servant and his cook fled, which appeared to show their participation in the crime. It was suggested, but never proved, that the deceased gentleman may have had valuables in the house, and that their abstraction was the motive of the crime. Every effort was made by Inspector Baynes, who has the case in hand, to ascertain the hiding place of the fugitives, and he had good reason to believe that they had not gone far, but were lurking in some retreat which had been already prepared. It was certain from the first, however, that they would eventually be detected, as the cook, from the evidence of one or two tradespeople, who have caught a glimpse of him through the window, was a man of most remarkable appearance—being a huge and hideous mulatto, with yellowish features of a pronounced negroid type. This man had been seen since the crime, for he was detected and pursued by Constable Walters on the same evening, when he had the audacity to revisit Wisteria Lodge. Inspector Baynes, considering that such a visit must have some purpose in view, and was likely, therefore, to be repeated, abandoned the house, but left an ambuscade in the shrubbery. The man walked into the trap and was captured last night after a struggle in which Constable Downing was badly bitten by the savage. We understand that when the prisoner is brought before the Magistrate a remand will be applied for by the police, and that great developments are hoped from his capture."

"Really we must see Baynes at once," cried Holmes, picking up his hat. "We will just catch him before he starts." We hurried down the village street and found, as we had expected, that the Inspector was just leaving his lodgings.

"You've seen the paper, Mr. Holmes?" he asked holding one out to us.

"Yes, Baynes, I've seen it. Pray, don't think it a liberty if I give you a word of friendly warning."

"Of warning, Mr. Holmes?"

"I have looked into this case with some care, and I am not convinced that you are on the right lines. I don't want you to commit yourself too far, unless you are sure."

"You're very kind, Mr. Holmes."

"I assure you I speak for your good."

It seemed to me that something like a wink quivered for an instant over one of Mr. Baynes' tiny eyes.

"We agreed to work on our own lines, Mr. Holmes. That's what I am doing."

"Oh, very good," said Holmes. "Don't blame me."

"No, sir, I believe you mean well by me. But we all have our own systems, Mr. Holmes. You have yours and maybe I have mine."

"Let us say no more about it."

"You're welcome always to my news. This fellow is a perfect savage, as strong as a cart horse and as fierce as the devil. He chewed Downing's thumb nearly off before they could master him. He hardly speaks a word of English, and we can get nothing out of him but grunts."

"And you think you have evidence that he murdered his late master?"

"I didn't say so, Mr. Holmes. I didn't say so. We all have our little ways. You try yours and I will try mine. That's the agreement."

Holmes shrugged his shoulders as we walked away together. "I can't make the man out. He seems to be riding for a fall. Well, as he says, we must each try our own way, and see what comes of it. But there's something in Inspector Baynes which I can't quite understand."

"Just sit down in that chair, Watson," said Sherlock Holmes when we had returned to our apartment at the Bull. "I want to put you in touch with the situation, as I may need your help tonight. Let me show you the evolution of this case so far as I have been able to follow it. Simple as it has been in its leading features, it has none the less presented surprising difficulties in the way of an arrest. There are gaps in that direction which we have still to fill.

"We will go back to the note which was handed in to Garcia upon the evening of his death. We may put aside this idea of Baynes that Garcia's servants were concerned in the matter. The proof of this lies in the fact that it was he who had arranged for the presence of Scott Eccles, which could only have been done for the purpose of an alibi. It was Garcia, then, who had an enterprise, and apparently a criminal enterprise, in hand that night, in the course of which he met his death. I say criminal, because only a man with a criminal enterprise desires to establish an alibi. Who, then, is most likely to have taken his life? Surely the person against whom the criminal enterprise was directed. So far it seems to me that we are on safe ground.

"We can now see a reason for the disappearance of Garcia's household. They were all confederates in the same unknown crime. If it came off, then Garcia returned, and possible suspicion would be warded off by the Englishman's evidence, and all would be well. But the attempt was a dangerous one, and, if Garcia did not return by a certain hour, it was probable that his own life had been sacrificed. It had been arranged, therefore, that in such a case his two subordinates were to make for some prearranged spot, where they could escape investigation and be in the position afterward to renew their attempt. That would fully explain the facts, would it not?"

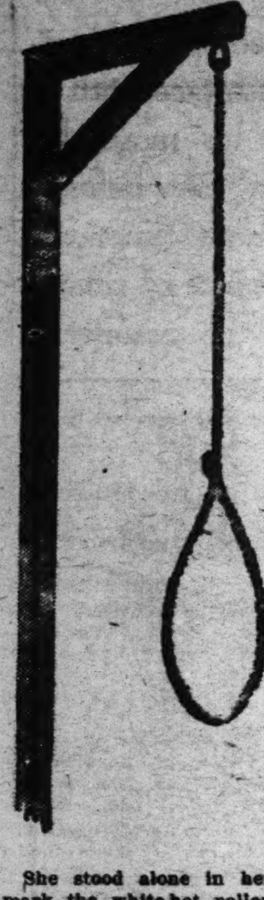
The whole inexplicable tangle seemed to straighten out before me. I wondered, as I always did, how it had not been obvious to me before.

"But why should one servant return?"

"We can imagine that, in the confusion of flight, something precious, something which he could not bear to part with, had been left behind. That would explain his persistence, would it not?"

"Well, what is the next step?"

"The next step is the note received by Garcia at the dinner. It indicates a confederate at the other end. Now, where was the other end? I have already shown you that it could only lie in some large house, and that the number of large houses is limited. My first days in this village were devoted to a series of walks, in which,



The Shadow of the Rope

by E. W. Hornung

THIS remarkable novel is an extraordinarily interesting mystery story, full of drama, suspense and strange complications. In its literary art and in its presentment of strange and baffling characters it is far beyond "RAFFLES," by the same author. Our readers have a rare treat in following the ill-starred Mrs. Minchin through her life in "The Shadow of the Rope."

"IT is finished," said the woman, speaking very quietly to herself. "Not another day nor a night if I can be ready before morning!"

She stood alone in her own room, with none to mark the white-hot pallor of the oval face, the dry luster of flashing eyes. But while she stood a heavy step went blustering down the stairs and double doors slammed upon the ground floor.

It was a little London house, like most little houses in London; but this one had latterly been the scene of an equally undistinguished drama of real life, upon which the curtain was now descending.

Rachel Minchin, before the disastrous step which gave her that surname, was a young Australian lady whose apparent attractions were only equalled by her absolute poverty. She had been born at Heidelberg, near Melbourne, of English parents more gentle than practical, who soon left her to fight the world with no other armory than a good face, a fine nature and the pride of any heiress. At 20 she was a governess in the wilds. A few years later she earned a berth to England as companion to a lady; and her fate awaited her on board.

Mr. Minchin had reached his prime in the underworld, of which he also was a native, without touching affluence until his fortieth year. He was a traveled man. As a mining expert he had seen much life in South Africa as well as in Western Australia, but at last he was to see more in Europe as a gentleman of means. A wife had no place in his European scheme; a husband was the last thing Rachel wanted. Yet they were married on the very day that they arrived in England, when they had not an actual friend between them.

In the beginning this mattered nothing; they had to see Europe and enjoy themselves; that they could do unaided; and the bride did it only the more thoroughly, in a sort of desperation, as she realized that the benefits of her marriage were to be wholly material after all.

IN the larger life of cities Alexander Minchin was no longer the good-humored cavalier to whom Rachel had learned to look for unfailing consideration at sea. Here he gambled and drank; and in his cups every virtue dissolved. Rachel's pride did not mend matters, and quarrels of infinite bitterness were the result.

In the meantime, tired of traveling, and impoverished by the husband's follies, the hapless couple returned to London, where a pure fluke with some mining shares introduced Michin to finer gambling than he had found abroad. They settled for the nonce in a furnished house in a modest neighborhood. And here it was that the quarreling continued to its culmination in the scene just ended.

"Not another day," said Rachel, "nor a night—if I can be ready before morning!"

It was no light task to which she had set her hand; she was going back to Australia by the first boat, and her packing must be done that night. Her resolve only hardened as her spirit cooled. The sooner her departure, the less his opposition; let her delay, and the callousness of the passing brute might give place to the tyranny of the normal man. But she was going, whether or no. And she was not going to fly empty-handed, nor fly at all; she was going deliberately away, with a trunk containing all that she should want upon the voyage.

The selection was not too easily made. In his better moods the creature had been lavish enough. It might hurt her to take his personal gifts, but that was all she had ever had from him. It would be no fault of hers if she had to strip her fingers for passage money. Yet the exigency troubled her; and after an unforeseen fit of irresolution Rachel suddenly determined to tell her husband of her difficulty, making direct appeal to his capricious generosity.

She looked at her watch—and the final day was already an hour old. But Alexander Minchin was a late sitter, as his young wife knew to her cost, and tonight he had told her where he meant to sleep, but she had not heard him come up.

SHE crept down, but he did not hear her, though the stairs creaked. This discouraged Rachel as she stole down the lower flight. But though the door made an alarming noise as Rachel pulled it open, no sound came from within, nor was Minchin disturbed by the final entry of his wife, whose first glance convinced her of the cause. In an armchair sat her husband, chin on waistcoat, an empty decanter at one elbow. Something remained in the glass beside the bottle; he had tumbled off to sleep before the end.

Rachel had a touch of pity at seeing him in a chair for the night; but the testimony of the decanter forbade remorse. No, indeed; not another minute that she could help!

She had recoiled into the narrow hall, driven by an uncontrollable revulsion; and there she stood, quivering with a disgust that only deepened as she looked her last upon the inanimate frame in the chair. There was a light still glowing in the hall, and, from habit, Rachel put it out before setting foot upon the stairs. A moment later she was standing terror-stricken in the dark.

It was no sound from the study, but the tiniest of metallic rattles from the flap of the letter box in the front door. The wind might have done it, for the flap had lost its spring, and, though the noise was not repeated, to the wind Rachel put it down, as she mounted the stairs at last in a flutter that caused her both shame and apprehension.

In time the trunk was packed, and incontinently carried downstairs by an effort which left Rachel racked in every muscle. But she scarcely paused to breathe. A latchkey closed the door behind her very softly; she was in the crisp, clean air at last. But it was no hour for finding cabs; and Rachel walked into broad sunlight before she spied a solitary hansom. Then she did a strange thing; instead of driving straight back for her trunk, when near the house she gave the cabman other directions, subsequently stopping him at one with a card in the window.

A woman answered the bell with surprising celerity.

"So you never came!" she cried, bitterly.

"I was prevented," Rachel replied, coldly. "Well?" And the monosyllable was a whisper.

"He is still alive," said the woman at the door.

"Is that all?" asked Rachel, a catch in her voice.

"It is all I'll say till the doctor has been."

"But he has got through the night," sighed Rachel, thankfully. "I could see the light in his room from hour to hour, even though I could not come," she continued. "I really could not. We—I am going abroad—very suddenly. Poor Mr. Severino! When he does recover—for something assures me that he will—you can tell him"——

Rachel hesitated, the red eyes reading hers.

"TELL him I hope he will recover altogether," she said at length; "mind, altogether! I have gone away for good, tell Mr. Severino."

And that was her farewell to the very young man with whom a hole-and-corner scandal had coupled Rachel's name. Within a minute or two of its delivery Rachel was on her own doorstep for the last time. Another moment and the door had been flung wide open by a police officer, with a comrade behind him and both servants on the stairs. And with little further warning Mrs. Michin was shown her husband, seated much as she had left him in a chair, but with his feet raised stiffly upon another and the hand of death over every inch of him.

The young widow stood gazing upon him, and four pairs of eyes gazed yet more closely at her. But there was no swaying of the lissome figure, no question spoken or unspoken. A sudden and complete detachment seemed to have taken possession of her. So God had sundered whom God had joined together! And this was the man whom she had married for love.

Her mind leaped to a minor consideration, that still made her shudder, as tight eyes noted from the door; he must have been dead when she came down and found him seated in shadow.

Her eyes had risen to the slice of sky in the upper half of the window, and at last the tears were rising in her eyes, when they filled instead with sudden horror and enlightenment.

There was a jagged hole in the pane above the hasp; an upset of ink on the desk beneath the window; and the ink was drying with the dead man's blood, in which she now perceived him to be soaked.

"Murdered!" whispered Rachel, breaking her long silence with a gasp. "The work of thieves!"

The policemen exchanged a rapid glance.

"Looks like it," said the one who had opened the door, "I admit."

There was a superfluous dryness in his tone; but Rachel did not notice this.

"But can you doubt it?" she cried, pointing from the broken window to the spilled ink. "Did you think he had shot himself?"

And her horror heightened at a thought more terrible to her than all the rest. But the constable shook his head.

"We should have found the pistol—which we can't," said he. "But shot he is, and through the heart."

"Then who could it be but thieves?"

"That's what we all want to know," said the officer; and still Rachel had no time to think about his tone; for now she was bending over the body.

"Look! look!" she cried, beckoning to them all. "He was wearing his watch last night; that I can swear; and it has gone!"

"You are sure he was wearing it?" asked the same constable, approaching.

"Absolutely certain."

"Well, if that's so," said he, "and it can't be found, it will be a point in your favor."

Rachel sprang upright, her wet eyes wide with astonishment.

"In my favor?" she cried. "Will you have the goodness to explain yourself?"

The constables were standing on either side of her now.

"Well," replied the spokesman of the pair, "I don't like the way that window's broken, for one thing, and if you look at it you'll see what I mean. The broken glass is all outside on the sill. But that's not all, ma'am; and, as you have a cab, we might do worse than drive to the station before more people are about."

IT was years since there had been a promise of such a sensation at the Old Bailey, nor, indeed, could the most enterprising of modern stage managers have done more to spread the lady's fame than was done for Rachel Minchin by her official enemies of the Metropolitan Police.

Whether these gentry had their case even more complete than they pretended, when the prisoner was committed for trial, or whether the last discoveries were really made in the ensuing fortnight, is now of small account. It is certain, however, that shortly after the committal it became known that much new evidence was to be forthcoming at the trial; that the case against the prisoner would be found even blacker than before; and the testimony so entirely circumstantial that the proceedings were expected to occupy a week.

Sure enough, the case was accorded first place in the November sessions, with a fair start on a Monday morning. In the purlieus of the mean, historic court, it was a morning not to be forgotten. The prisoner's sex, her youth, her high bearing and the peculiar isolation of her position, without a friend to stand by her in her need, all appealed to the popular imagination and produced a fascination which was only intensified by the equally general feeling that no one else could have committed the crime. Consequently even successful applicants for seats had to fight through a mob to gain admission.

The first to appear on the Monday morning, and the last to escape when the court adjourned was a white-headed gentleman of striking appearance. He had a well-preserved reddish face, with a small mouth of extraordinary strength, a canine jaw and singularly noble forehead; but his most obvious distinction was his full head of snowy hair.

No one in court had ever seen this man before; but by the third day of the trial his identity was a subject of discussion, both by the profesional students of the human countenance, who sat behind him, and among the various functionaries who had already found him as free with a sovereign as most gentlemen are with a piece of silver. So every day he was ushered with ceremony to the same place; there he would sit watching the prisoner, and only once was his attentive serenity broken by a change of expression due to a development of the case.

It was not when the prisoner pleaded clearly through her veil, in the first breathless minutes of all; it was not a little later, when the urbane counsel for the prosecution thrilled every hearer with a mellifluous forecast of the new evidence to be laid before them. The missing watch and chain had been found; they would presently be produced, and the jury would have an opportunity of examining them, together with a plan of the chimney of the room in which the murder had been committed; for it was there that they had been discovered. This announcement was the sensation of the opening day.

The whole case of the prosecution rested on the assumption that there had been, on the part of some inmate of the house, a deliberate attempt to give the murder the appearance of the work of thieves. Thus far this theory rested on the bare facts that the glass of the broken window had been found outside instead of within; that no other mark of foot or hand had been made or left by the supposititious burglars; whereas a brace of revolvers had been discovered in the dead man's bureau, both loaded with such bullets as the one which had caused his death, while one of them had clearly been discharged since the last cleaning. The discovery of the missing watch and chain, in the very chimney of the same room, was a piece of ideal evidence of the confirmatory kind. But it was not the point that made an impression on the man with the white hair.

Thrilling also was the earlier evidence furnished by maid servants and police constables in pairs; but here there was no surprise. The maids were examined not only as to what they had seen and heard on the night of the murder—and they seemed to have heard everything except the fatal shot—but upon the previous relations of their master and mistress—of which they showed an equally extensive knowledge. The constables were perforce confined to their own discoveries and observations when the maids had called them in. But all four witnesses spoke to the prisoner's behavior when shown the dead body of her husband, and there was the utmost unanimity in their several tales. The prisoner had exhibited little or no surprise; it was several minutes before she had uttered a syllable; and then her first words had been to point out that burglars alone could have committed the murder.

This was the line followed by the senior counsel for the prosecution. And the case was fought for Mrs. Minchin, tooth and nail indeed, and at times upon points which were hardly worth the fighting. Yet, on the Friday afternoon, when her counsel at last played its masterstroke, and, taking advantage of the then new act, put the prisoner herself in the witness box, it was done with the air of a man who is throwing up his by Leslie J. Blackmore of 325 North Taylor avenue. He usually keeps it during the summer at Clifton Terrace, above Alton, where the Country Yacht Club, composed of St. Louisans, also has quarters in a houseboat. Blackmore's boat is named "Lesedmeral," the word being formed from the first syllables of the names of his four children.

The "Lesedmeral" actually has sleeping and living quarters for 18 persons. It is 75 feet long. It has its own system of gas lighting and heating, and has, its owner says, all the conveniences of a modern apartment. In the paneled saloon are a phonograph and piano-player. Every week-end in summer is spent on the boat by Blackmore, his family and a party of guests. The craft cost $6500. When it is desired to cruise, the "Lesedmeral," like the "Elsa," is propelled by a launch.

In a different class are the so-called power houseboats, of which the "Peggy," a $30,000 boat belonging to William S. Thompson, is the most palatial example on the river. The "Peggy" is a compromise between a launch and a houseboat. She has her own engines and has something of the cut of a launch in her lines. But in breadth of beam, in spaciousness and furnishing she resembles a genuine houseboat.

In lavishness of equipment, the "Peggy," which, when at home, is moored at the foot of Bremen avenue, is the last word in nautical luxury in this vicinity. She has a crew of four men—pilot, engineer, sailor and cook—and accommodations besides for eight guests. There are three staterooms, besides the owner's cabin, and each is supplied with running hot and cold water. A dynamo furnishes current for lighting and heating. Adjoining the owner's cabin is a bathroom equipped as completely as if it were in an expensive apartment house.

The saloon, which is forward on the lower deck, has a beautiful beamed ceiling of mahogany and furnishings of the same wood. There are a piano player and a phonograph, a china closet, an electrical fireplace and a door of stained glass leading to the upper deck. On either side are divans, laden with cushions, and in one corner is a small library.

Looking astern from the saloon there is a hall from which the staterooms open. Behind the sleeping quarters is the engine room, with its gasoline motors, operating twin screws, and its dynamo. Then, in the stern are the sleeping quarters of the crew and the cook's galley, containing a gas stove.

The "Peggy" is 70 feet long and has a beam of 16 feet. Her engines are 40 horsepower. During the summer she is almost constantly cruising and has traveled from St. Paul to New Orleans, and has voyaged upon Georgian Bay. Thompson is the wealthy president of the W. H. Thompson Trust Co.

"I am convinced," says Dr. Starkloff, "that there are 75,000 St. Louisans who have never even seen the Mississippi. And there are thousands of others who are unaware that it is one of the most beautiful and majestic spectacles in the world. There are ever fresh delights to be found in its tributaries, too. The Illinois, for instance, is another Rhine."

Mrs. Starkloff is quite as enthusiastic as her husband over houseboating, and welcomes the day when their land home is closed and they go down to the water for half the year.

"We were the first in St. Louis to take up houseboating," she says. "We got the idea from English magazines, which tell how there are thousands of wealthy houseboaters living along the Thames. I still read the English papers, and get lots of new ideas as to how to make our river home more comfortable and attractive. There are lots of houseboaters in the East, especially on the Hudson."

Boat Life Lures Many St. Louisans;

In the houseboat "Elsa," Dr Starkloff and his family live from May until November of each year.

Cozy houseboats equipped with telephones, electric lights and bathrooms, tended by launches for motive power, provide refuge from summer heat and enable owners to live at the heart of Mississippi's romance and beauty . . .

ST. LOUISANS who flee away to Northern resorts at the first onset of summer heat would no doubt exclaim skeptically if told that here at home they could find a spot in which, on the sultriest nights, when even the West End lies scorching and spent, one must sleep under blankets, where cool and refreshing breezes continually blow and where one may live at the very heart of romance and beauty. But such is the fact. A little colony of men and women has discovered the secret, which is—houseboating on the Mississippi.

Time was when "houseboater" was a name of reproach. It connoted shiftless and impoverished vagabonds, throngs of curs, squalid and repulsive quarters. But the word has obtained a new meaning from wealthy owners of floating residences which are equipped with every comfort and luxury.

For instance, there is Dr. Max C. Starkloff's houseboat, the "Elsa," whose moorage is at the foot of Kraus street. In the first part of May each year the doctor, who is Health Commissioner of St. Louis, his wife and his two grandchildren shut up their big house at 7619 South Broadway and betake themselves to the "Elsa," where they live through the summer, leaving reluctantly at the latest possible date, sometimes about Nov. 1.

This houseboat has telephones, it has electric lights, it has gas for cooking. It has a luxurious bathroom and a spotlessly clean cook's galley. It has two bedrooms which become sitting rooms by day, the beds folding into divans, and a commodious dining room. Above is a spacious deck on which guests are entertained, and from which a majestic view of the wide-sweeping river is visible. It is served by two garages—one on land and the other on water. In the one is the physician's automobile. In the other is the launch, "Irma," which is used to propel the "Elsa" on her many cruises on the Mississippi and Illinois rivers.

The advantage of having a separate power boat, according to Dr. Starkloff, is that the living and sleeping quarters are not cluttered with machinery and filled with the smell of gasoline and oil. But on the deck of the houseboat is a steering wheel, with speaking tubes running to the engine room of the launch. Cables running from the houseboat to the rear of the launch manipulate the rudder. Mrs. Starkloff usually acts as pilot when the "Elsa" is cruising.

On the opposite side of the river is a fine, sandy beach, from which one can wade out for a distance. Often in the morning the houseboat is propelled across the river and the family, donning bathing suits, go in for a swim, having as much fun as if they were at any beach on the Great Lakes.

Or, in the evening, the "Elsa" is taken up the river as far as Eads Bridge, and then permitted to float back with the current. There is nothing more delightful, says Dr. Starkloff, than to dine on deck as night is falling, while the boat is almost imperceptibly drifting downstream, and while a phonograph is discoursing a concert of fine music. And at night, after one goes to bed, the boat is softly cradled upon the waves, whose gentle lapping against the sides of the craft is the most soothing of lullabies. And when, in the city, the nights are at their hottest, the physician and his family are compelled to use blankets on their beds for comfort.

The telephone and electric wires are so arranged that when the boat leaves her wharf they are unplugged from the craft, which then gets lights from a dynamo on the launch. There is an icebox which holds 300 pounds of ice. Dr. Starkloff says that he considers the boat, with its out-of-doors life, to be a healthier and saner place to rear children than a house in the city.

The deck of the craft, with its hanging pots of flowers and its running plants, is almost like a conservatory. On the wainscoting of the dining room stand half a dozen silver cups which have been given to Dr. Starkloff for his exploits as a boatman and for his services as a citizen. One of these cups he won with his speedboat, the "Tormentor," one of the fastest boats on the river. He is vice-admiral of the Century Boat Club. The "Elsa" has traveled hundreds of miles, including one cruise of 700 miles to below Memphis and return.

In the vicinity are several other houseboats owned by St. Louisans. Nearest to the "Elsa" is the houseboat in which live Hans C. Toensfeldt, former Commissioner of School Buildings, and his family. Then comes a combination houseboat and launch-garage owned by Dr. Philip P. Heuer Jr. Farther down the river is moored Edmond Koeln's big houseboat, the "Anna K. Koeln." Up the river, in North St. Louis, lies a houseboat which is the residence of Dr. George M. Phillips.

Probably the largest houseboat on the river is owned

BLANCHE the Cow Girl, Thrower of Steers

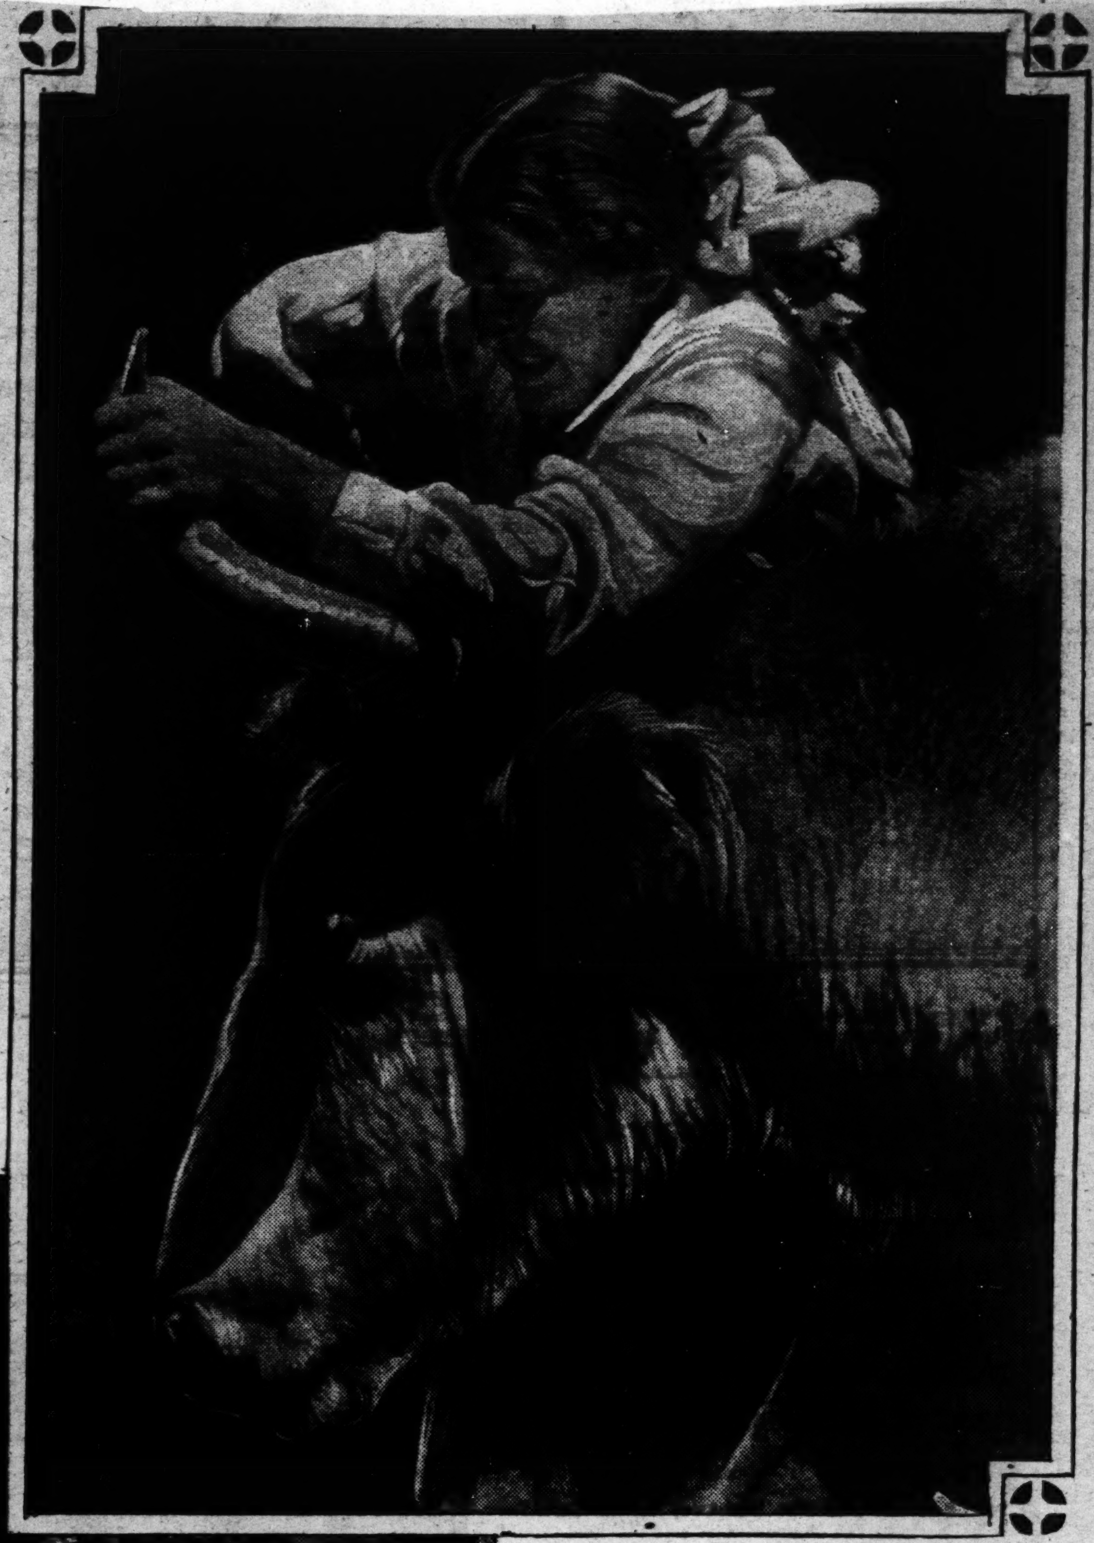
Miss McGauhey of Tulsa, Ok., Could Have Given Ursus Pointers on Mastering the Wild Bull in "Quo Vadis"—With Her Bare Hands She Hurls Big Animals to the Ground, Dexterously Falling Between the Horns to Escape Being Gored ∴ ∴



The first step of the feat is to grasp the left horn with the left hand. Unless this is adroitly done, the girl athlete is in danger of being gored.

THE feat of Ursus in overpowering a bull with his hands is made the climax of the novel, "Quo Vadis," and the author describes with theatrical display the desperate struggle in which straining human muscles are pitted against the strength of the brute. But Ursus could have done the job with a mere flip of the wrist, as it were, if he had been able to take a few lessons from Miss Blanche McGaughey, a pretty girl of Tulsa, Ok. With her bare hands and her puny strength, Miss Gaughey is ready at any moment to duplicate Ursus' exploit, except that she does not attempt to crack the animal's neck. She can, through a clever kind of jiu-jitsu, conquer a steer and make it tumble helpless in its tracks.

The second step—Girl "Ursus" straining steer's head sideways. In a moment she will seize the animal's muzzle with her right hand.

As she has frequently performed the trick in public, she steps lightly to the beast's right side, throws her left arm over his neck, grasps the left horn with the left hand in such a way as to get the horn under the left arm, slips her right arm down around the neck, seizes the steer's nose with her right hand, and then gradually twists the big head back towards the left shoulder.

Under the pressure the animal trembles, weakens and then, with a crash, drops to the ground. Miss McGaughey falls, too, on her back between the animal's wide-spreading horns. This is the dangerous part of the feat—making sure that one falls in such a position as to escape being gored by the horns.

The trick is called "bulldogging a steer," and is well known to cowboys in the Southwest. Miss McGaughey is said to be the first and only woman to master the perilous achievement. She says that any woman can learn to do the trick, and that Ursus was certainly wasting his energy when he put forth all his strength and nearly wrenched himself in two—just to subdue a bull which the girl tied to his horns could have done alone, if her bonds had been unfastened, and if she had known how!

Miss McGaughey is a fresh-face, bright-eye girl whose kindergarten was a horse's saddle, and who can throw a lasso and ride a bucking broncho as well as most cowboys. Until last October she was content to leave to them their most dangerous-appearing trick, that of "bulldogging a steer." Then, however, she determined that if she could do all the other things performed by the cowboys, she could do this, too. She tried—and succeeded.

"You must be sure," she explains, "that the steer's left horn is under your left arm before you fall with the brute. There isn't any danger, if you are sure to get a horn on each side of you. That's the chief part of the stunt. Don't get nervous; remember that there's plenty of room between the wide-spreading horns.

"Was I ever hurt? Well, not yet. I've wrenched my-

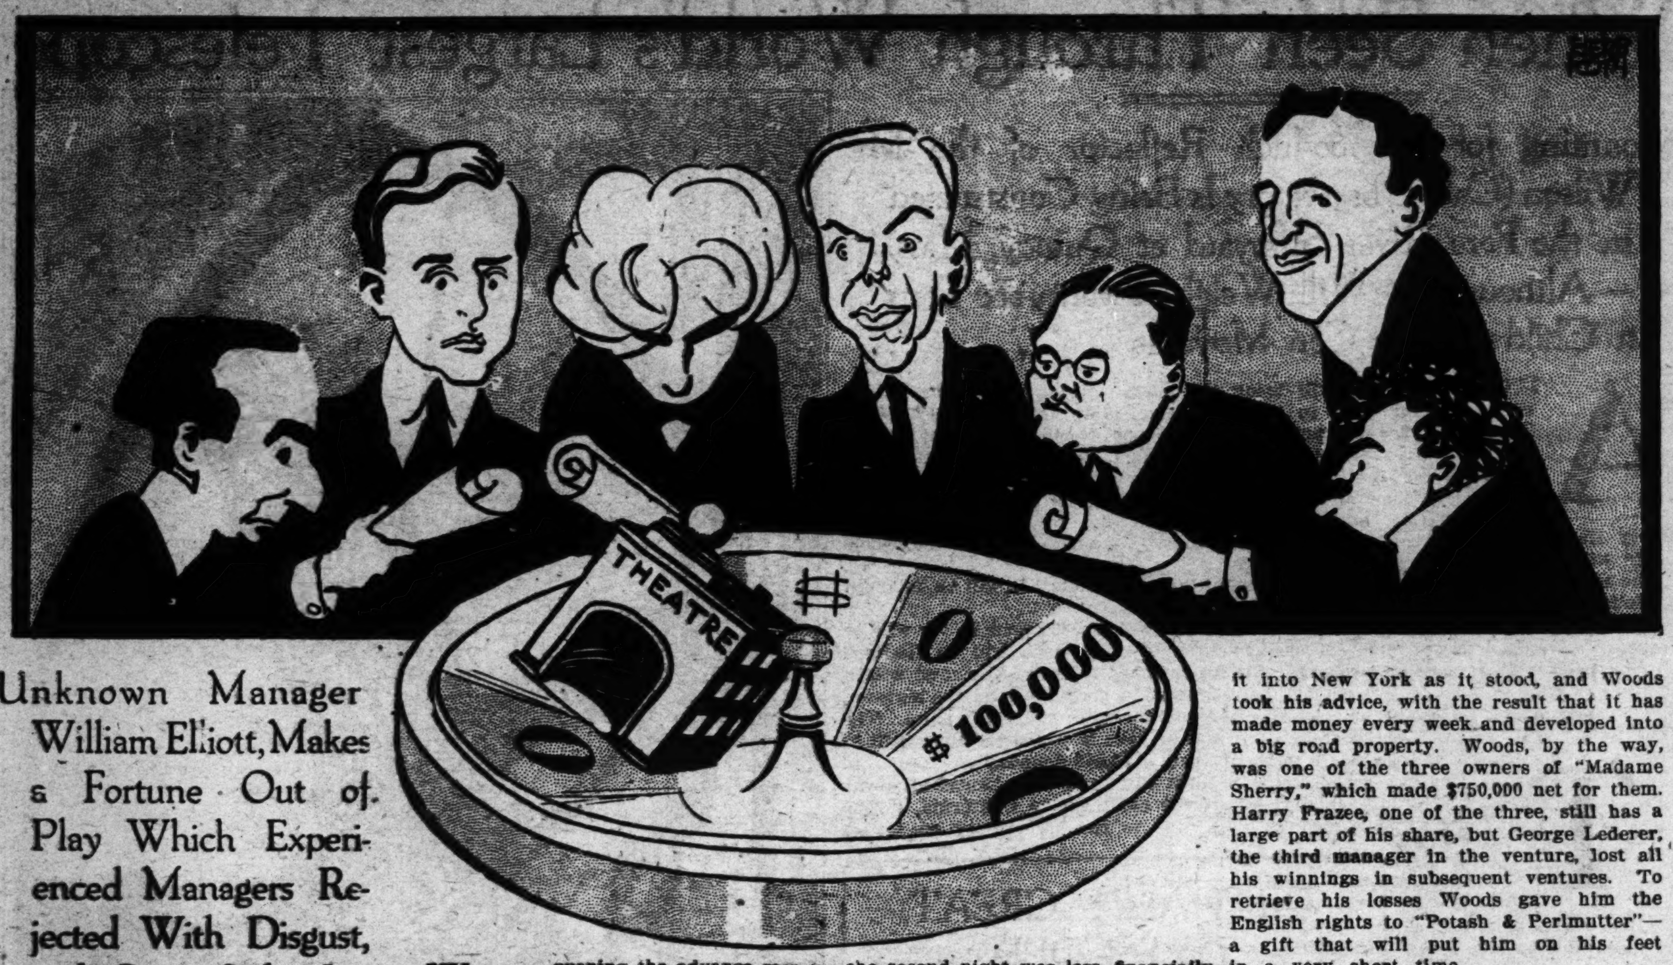
Third step—"The big brute" collapses with a crash to the ground and bears the girl down with him. She falls upon her back between the deadly horns.

GAMBLING in the SHOW BUSINESS



Unknown Manager William Elliott, Makes a Fortune Out of Play Which Experienced Managers Rejected With Disgust, and One of the Latter Won a Fortune on a Play in Which the Author Had No Faith—Long Shots Which Have Won Big Money Recently.

By KARL K. KITCHEN.

WHEN Lee Shubert remarked the other day that play producing was not a business, but a gamble, he said what every theatrical manager knows to be true, but which few have the courage to say in print. Theatrical managers, like other humans, like to attribute good business to brains—their brains, of course. They pride themselves on their ability to feel the public's pulse—when they discuss things theatrical with interviewers; but deep down in their hearts they know they are "taking a gamble" on each and every production they make.

The season now drawing to a close is perhaps more remarkable for the big sums which have been won and lost on "gambles" than anything else. It has been a bad season—the worst in 17 years, according to A. L. Erlanger. A few individuals have made small fortunes because they gambled successfully.

Take William Elliott, for instance. As a theatrical manager, Mr. Elliott, who married a daughter of David Belasco, is almost unknown. Until last fall he was simply a good leading man who had saved a little money. His father-in-law had made it appear that Elliott was one of the producers of "The Governor's Lady," but he had actually very little to do with that play. However, he obtained the manuscript of a little Scotch comedy from Mrs. Catherine Chisholm Cushing. "Bunty Pulls the Strings" had been tremendously successful and as "Kitty MacKay," Mrs. Cushing's comedy, had many of the features which made "Bunty" successful, Mr. Elliott decided to "take a chance" and produce it. He did so, "investing" $2500 in the gamble. The first few performances were out of town and Mr. Elliott persuaded Al Woods and William A. Brady to have a look at it, in the hope that one of them would want it for one of their Broadway theaters. Al Wood sat through its first act and left the theater in disgust. Brady, less impulsive, remained for the entire performance, but he informed Elliott that it didn't have a chance in the world and he flatly refused to give it house room. It was only after several hours' pleading with Lee Shubert that Elliott managed to get the poorest Shubert house—the Comedy Theater—for it.

What happened after its Broadway opening is well known. Despite its tawdry production and cheap cast of practically unknown players, it received the unanimous approval of the critics. The Saturday before the opening the advance sale for the second night was less than $[illegible]; but after the critics had hailed it as a success the Tuesday night house was a "sell out." For weeks the little play—its expenses behind the curtain are considerably less than a thousand a week—played to between $8000 and $9000. It is now nearing its one hundred and fiftieth performance and is still playing to paying business. Next season there will be three or four "Kitty MacKay" companies. And young Mr. Elliott will probably make $200,000 from his original investment of $2500.

One of the luckiest—perhaps the luckiest—manager this season has been Al Woods. Take his production of "Potash & Perlmutter," for instance. It has been playing to big business since early last September. When Woods asked Charles Klein, the playwright, to dramatize the Potash & Perlmutter stories, Klein refused to do so on a royalty basis, for the reason that he did not believe they would make a successful play. In fact, he refused to touch them for less than $5000. Woods was willing to take a chance and he paid Klein $5000 outright for the dramatization. That ended Klein's connection with the play. Hugh Ford, a well-known stage director, and Al Woods whipped the production into shape during the long series of rehearsals, and "Potash & Perlmutter" became one of the season's successes in New York, a feat it has duplicated in London. Had Klein made the dramatization on the usual royalty basis he eventually would have made ten times as much from the play, but Woods was willing to gamble $5000, with the result that he is making all the money from the play, except for the small royalty paid to Montague Glass, who wrote the stories.

Woods gambled "The Yellow Ticket" and won. It has proved a big moneymaker. When it was produced out of town he was on the point of closing it, so sure of failure did it appear to him. He sent for Eugene Walter to rewrite the last act, but Walter advised him to bring it into New York as it stood, and Woods took his advice, with the result that it has made money every week and developed into a big road property. Woods, by the way, was one of the three owners of "Madame Sherry," which made $750,000 net for them. Harry Frazee, one of the three, still has a large part of his share, but George Lederer, the third manager in the venture, lost all his winnings in subsequent ventures. To retrieve his losses Woods gave him the English rights to "Potash & Perlmutter"—a gift that will put him on his feet financially in a very short time.

No theatrical property has been so much discussed in recent times as "Within the Law." It is generally supposed to be owned by the firm of Selwyn & Co., but as a matter of fact they own only half of it. Lee Shubert owns a quarter interest in it, as does Al Woods. The quarter interest of Lee Shubert was part of the original gamble with William A. Brady. When Selwyns bought out Brady they offered to buy out Shubert, but he said he was willing to continue the gamble—a matter of only a few thousand dollars. Under Selwyn management "Within the Law" became a world-wide success. Mr. Shubert's "investment" of a few thousand dollars has already netted him $70,000 and before all the world has seen the play it will bring him twice as much more.

Bayard Veiller, the author of the play, would have made a small fortune had he not sold his rights to the Selwyns for $10,000. All he receives from the play is a weekly stipend of $100. He took a gamble and lost.

Frank Craven is one of the few actors who has made a tidy sum this season. He wrote a play called "Too Many Cooks" and got William A. Brady to produce it. However, he took a gamble in retaining a big interest in it. The play made a big hit and has played to large audiences for several weeks. And Craven is receiving a good salary for acting its leading role, as well as a royalty and a goodly proportion of the profits.

One of the most successful gambles of the season was the production of "Grumpy," with Cyril Maude, the English actor, in the stellar role. Maude revived three or four of his London successes at Wallack's with indifferent success, under the management of Liebler & Co., of which George Tyler is the directing head. Then he took a chance on "Grumpy," a new play by two obscure actors. The production did not cost $2000, but its success was instantaneous, and for 25 weeks it played to between $11,000 and $12,000.

Another gamble even more surprising was the revival of "Lady Windermere's Fan." No one, except the financial backers of Margaret Anglin, thought it had a chance. Yet it broke the box office record for big business at the Hudson Theater.

"The Beauty Shop" is an example of a play which managers were not able to value. For months Raymond Hitchcock has been touring the country in it because Cohan & Harris were afraid to bring it into New York. When they were finally forced to bring it in they did so with fear and trembling. Hitchcock said he might just as well act the telephone book as this piece. He begged to be allowed to appear in "Forward March," which Cohan & Harris gave to Willie Collier. But "The Beauty Shop" made the musical comedy hit of the season and "Forward March" was a failure on the road.

The old-time gamblers have been very unlucky this year. Most of David Belasco's shows closed on the road early in the season. Charles Frohman's gambles have been disastrous on the whole. And the most successful Klaw & Erlanger attraction this season has been "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine."

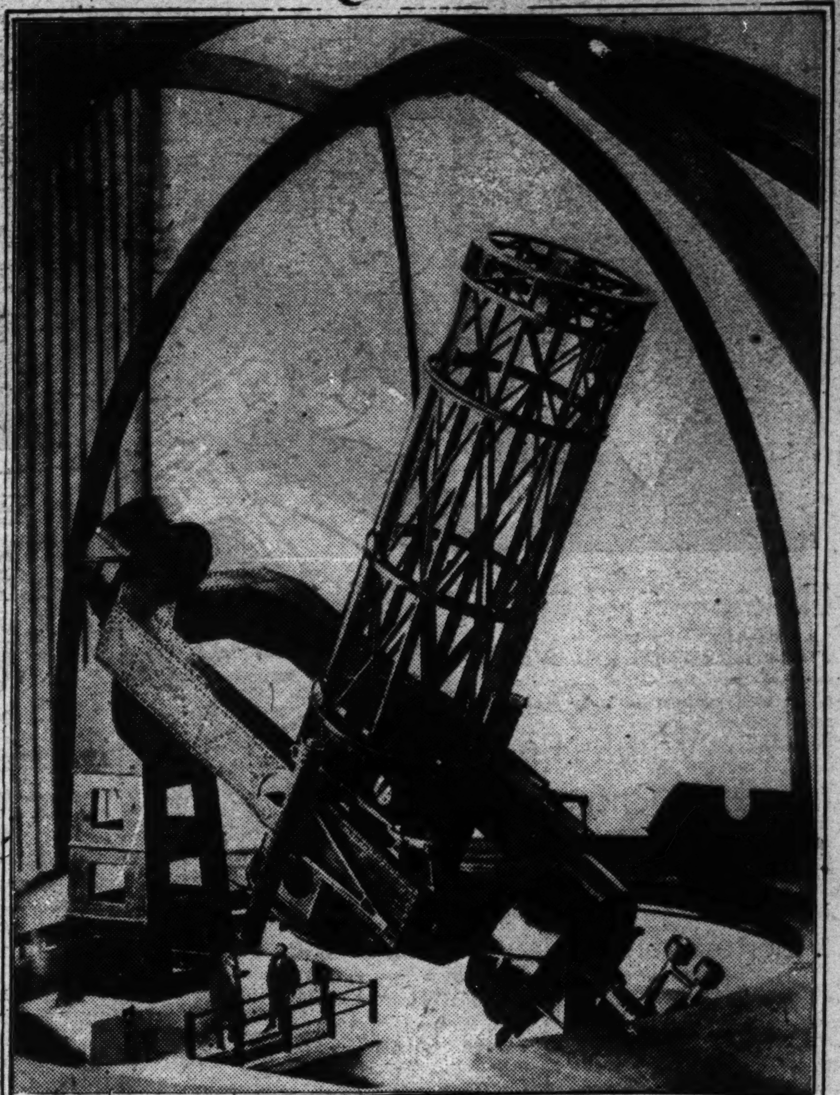
Moon Is Only Forty Miles Away When Seen Through World's Largest Telescope

Mounting for the 100-Inch Reflector of the Mt. Wilson (Cal.) Observatory Is Being Constructed in the Fore River Shipyard at Quincy, Mass. —Although It Will Weigh Twenty-six Tons a Child's Finger Can Move It



Frame of the 26-ton tube for the Mount Wilson telescope.—Notice comparative size of men on platform.

A TELESCOPE that will bring the moon within forty miles of the earth is being built in the Fore River Shipyard at Quincy, Mass. This is the yard that built the dreadnaughts North Dakota and Nevada for the United States and the Rivadavia for Argentina. Only the mounting for this, the greatest telescope in the world, is being built in the birthplace of ships. It will be set up on Mount Wilson, near Pasadena, Cal., to hold a 100-inch reflector, for the use of George Ellery Hale, the "young genius," to whom Andrew Carnegie declares the whole world will listen in a few years.

The telescope tube will be big enough to admit an automobile. It will be balanced so delicately that a child's finger will move it.

The weight of the lens for which the tube is designed is 9000 pounds. It will be tested so carefully that an error of one-two-millionth of an inch will be disclosed so completely that it may be measured with an ordinary footrule. The total weight of the mounting will be 260,000 pounds, not counting in such items as the elevator, the mercury which the tanks will contain, the counter-rails and a lot more. The tube proper will weigh 52,000 pounds, the frame or yoke in which the tubes will be balanced 65,000 pounds and the north pedestal another 52,000 pounds.

And once the mounting has been manufactured, it will have to be "knocked down' into approximately five-ton lots, shipped across the continent to California, loaded upon trucks and wagons and hauled up the trails to the observatory on top of Mount Wilson. These trails in places are narrow and perilous, where a misstep will mean accident and possibly injury both to man and to the delicate mechanism for which Hale is waiting eagerly.

DR. HALE'S GREAT TELESCOPE.

WEIGHT of tube to hold 100-inch reflector will be 52,000 pounds. Total weight of mounting will be 260,000 pounds.

When set up the tube will be so perfectly balanced a child can move it with one finger.

Being built on the Atlantic for use on the Pacific and will be knocked down for shipment in five-ton lots.

Toronto has a 72-inch reflector, which is the second largest in the world.

Five years required in the designing and building of the Mount Wilson reflector telescope.

Not very long ago newspapers in Ohio were announcing with pride that the greatest telescope in the world was being manufactured by a Cleveland concern, to which the contract had been awarded by the Canadian Government.

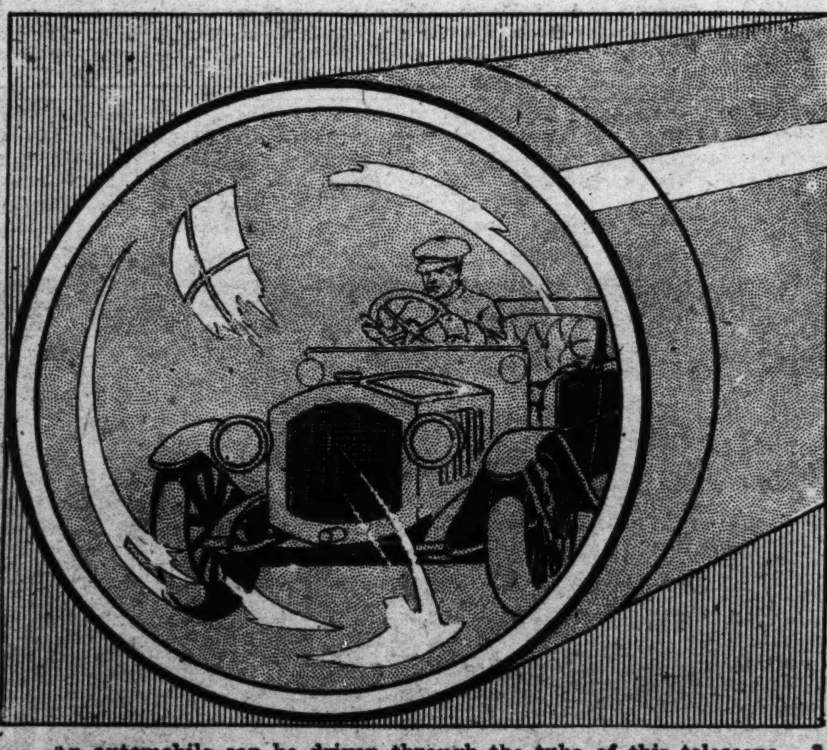
To indicate how great an advance such a reflector will mark in the astronomical world, one may recall that the same Cleveland concern built in 1887 the Lick telescope which carries a 36-inch lens, and in 1893 the Yerkes, the reflector of which is 40 inches in diameter. The instrument now used upon Mount Wilson by Dr. Hale is 60-inch; its mounting was prepared by the Union Iron Works of San Francisco, the concern that built the battleship Oregon. The instrument to be placed in Toronto for the mounting of which the Cleveland firm has contracted, will have a 72-inch speculum or reflecting mirror. The new instrument for the California observatory will carry a mirror of the unheard-of size of 100 inches. This is hailed as an epoch-making stride in the creation of apparatus for the study of the sun and stars.

Several years have been expended in preliminary operations for making this telescope. The order was placed by the Carnegie Institute for the Advancement of Science at Washington, and the director of the observatory, Dr. Hale, his assistant Dr. Walter S. Adams, and the other members of the staff designed the instrument.

The proposition at first was to mount a 75-inch reflector; but Mr. Carnegie came forward with the enthusiastic suggestion that the speculum measure an even 100 inches. The preparation of drawings was begun almost five years ago. Then the designers looked for a builder. They heard that at Fore River the largest precision testing machine of the world had been built for the Bureau of Standards of Washington, under a subcontract. Just as the machine had been installed at the national capital the Mount Wilson people saw it and examined it out of scientific interest in its delicate operations. They submitted their drawings to the shipbuilders and learned that the work was well within the possibilities of the Quincy plant. Yet, so elaborate was the task of preparing the designs that the first drawings for the mounting did not reach Fore River until April, 1913.

Peter Schwamb was appointed local consulting engineer and resident inspector to supervise the construction of the mounting. He was formerly professor of machine design at Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Because of various minor changes which do not affect the design as a whole the work has been delayed a bit, but it is hoped that the mounting will be set up complete in from six to nine months.



An automobile can be driven through the tube of this telescope.

The troubles of a scientist who is trying to get a perfect mirror of great size, are like those of a specialist who is trying to fathom the mysteries of some obscure and baffling disease. To get this huge speculum the French Plate Glass Co. at St. Gobain cast four, and one after another was rejected. At length, in view of all the difficulties of securing a thick disk of such size which should be free from bubbles or flaws, it seemed advisable to begin work on the first of the four which had been laid aside temporarily. The grinding of the spherical surface proceeded and the polishing and testing for different temperatures. It was determined that the errors were due largely to some imperfection in the support of the glass. Another method was tried, and now the lens is practically ready for its tube; but because of the very great care with which such lenses have to be handled, it is not deemed wise to bring the mirror to Fore River to try out its mounting. Instead the mirror receptacle will be machined to a gauge taken from the lens, and at the test the mirror cage will carry a lens equivalent.

The great tube—43 feet long—is made much on the plan of a city steel skyscraper, story rising above story, and all made of structural steel; instead of filling the tube with solid materials, as is done when the tall building climbs skyward, it is left open, so that the telescope tube is a basket-work cylinder, looking somewhat like the basket masts of the battleships at the navy yard.

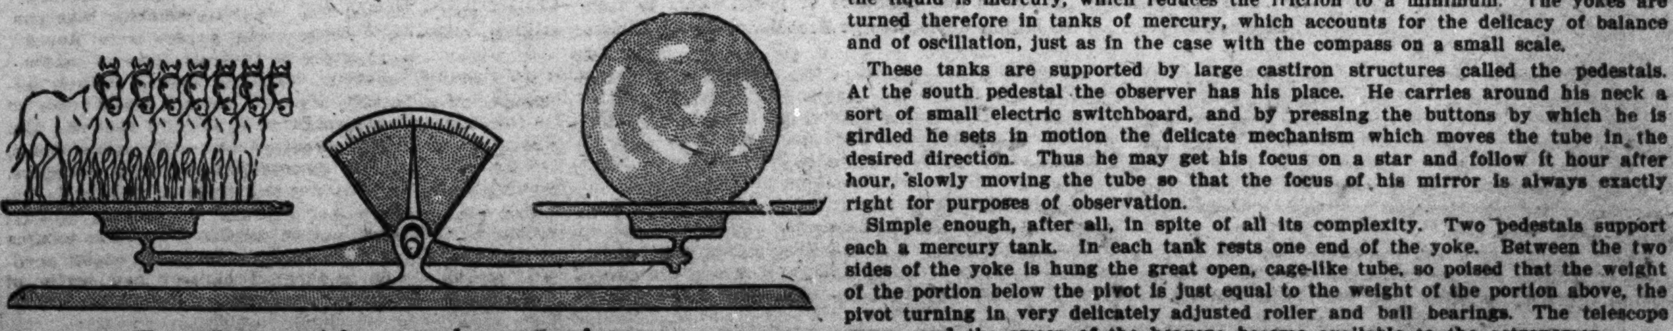
At the bottom of the tube the speculum is placed. Near the top is a small mirror tilted at any desired angle, and so placed that every ray of light caught by the great lens below is thrown back in perfect focus upon its surface and in turn reflected to a camera, which is fastened to the side of the tube at the proper point to catch the reflection. By means of the resulting protographs the study of the sun will be carried on. Thus it appears that the designers are dealing with a problem of focus when they make the plans for a mounting like this one, which indicates how delicate a task it is and how minutely accurate their every line and angle must be. This would be shown far more impressively if other methods of making use of the camera were described.

That the observer may follow a star and move his point of observation at any time and to any desired place, it must be possible to sway and tilt and oscillate the tube in any direction, up and down, sidewise, from east to west and from north to south. It must sway easily and in as many directions as a bird upon the wing.

The tube is mounted, therefore, between the two sides of a great yoke made of steel plates and angles. The sides of the yoke come together at each end and by axles or trunnions these ends are supported in short cylinders made of steel. In these cylinders or cisterns the ends rest like corks floating upon a liquid. Here the liquid is mercury, which reduces the friction to a minimum. The yokes are turned therefore in tanks of mercury, which accounts for the delicacy of balance and of oscillation, just as in the case with the compass on a small scale.

These tanks are supported by large castiron structures called the pedestals. At the south pedestal the observer has his place. He carries around his neck a sort of small electric switchboard, and by pressing the buttons by which he is girdled he sets in motion the delicate mechanism which moves the tube in the desired direction. Thus he may get his focus on a star and follow it hour after hour, slowly moving the tube so that the focus of his mirror is always exactly right for purposes of observation.

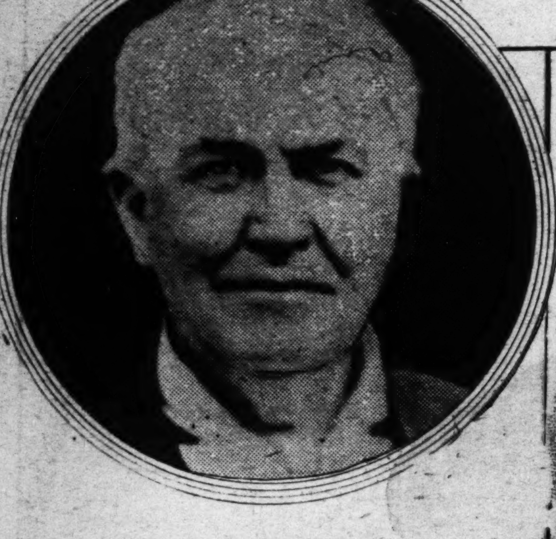
Simple enough, after all, in spite of all its complexity. Two pedestals support each a mercury tank. In each tank rests one end of the yoke. Between the two sides of the yoke is hung the great open, cage-like tube, so poised that the weight of the portion below the pivot is just equal to the weight of the portion above, the pivot turning in very delicately adjusted roller and ball bearings. The telescope sways, and the sweep of the heavens become available to the astronomer.



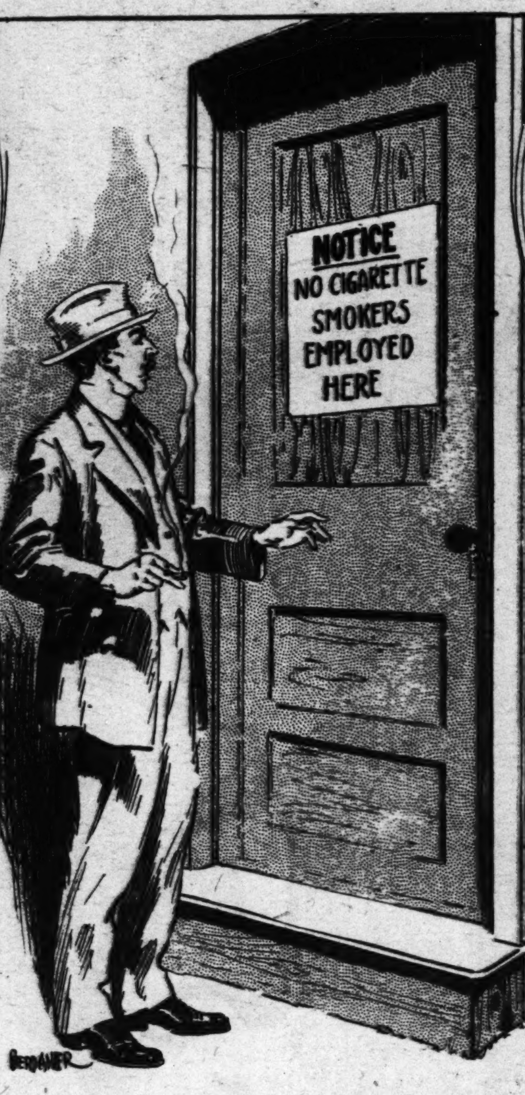
The reflector weighs as much as seven horses.

EDISON CONDEMNS THE CIGARETTE

World's greatest inventor tells automobile manufacturer Ford that the little smokes contain acrolein, which destroys the brain power of workers



THOMAS A. EDISON.



HENRY FORD.

ACROLEIN: A colorless, limpid liquid, CH_2CHCOH, having a disagreeable and intensely irritating odor, such as that noticeable after the flame of a candle has been extinguished and while the wick still glows. It is the aldehyde of the allyl series and is obtained by distilling glycerin to which acid potassium has been added; also by the dry distillation of fatty bodies. It burns with a clear, luminous flame.—Century Dictionary.

THE naughty little cigarette is once more on the defensive. Nay, more. It is hanging on the ropes, to borrow the jargon of the prize ring, gasping for breath and trying to stick the round out. The London Lancet recently declared that scientific investigation had given the cigarette a clean bill of health; but as the world's greatest practical inventor, writing to the head of one of America's foremost manufacturing concerns, declares that cigarette smoking poisons the brain and that cigarette smokers are not efficient employes. No one need be surprised if the cigarette is bawling for help.

It has long been known that Thomas A. Edison has been a foe to the cigarette. This is not because he is personally hostile to tobacco. Nobody can get more pleasure than he out of an after-dinner cigar, and, it is said, the wizard is not averse to sustaining himself under fatigue with a generous mouthful of plug. He is not on speaking terms with the cigarette, because he thinks it harmful.

Just the other day a man went around nailing up placards in Edison's great factories at West Orange, N. J. These placards, with the characteristic Edisonian terseness, said:

Cigarettes NOT TOLERATED.
They Dull the Brain.

Brains is the most valued asset in Edison's plants. Brains made Edison what he is. Brains has given him as splendid a corps of assistants as any manufacturing inventor could desire. So it is not surprising that he should try to conserve the supply and interdict anything he considers a menace to it.

Now the pronouncement of Edison on almost any matter receives respectful attention from the rest of the world. He is known as a man who doesn't say things merely for the pleasure of hearing his own voice. He usually has a reason. Henry Ford, the millionaire automobile manufacturer, sought Edison's reasons for his condemnation of the cigarette—and got it.

"Friend Ford," the inventor wrote in reply to his letter of inquiry, "the injurious agent in cigarettes comes principally from the burning paper wrapper. The substance thereby formed is called acrolein. It has a violent action on the nerve centers, producing degeneration of the cells of the brain, which is quite rapid among boys. Unlike most narcotics, this degeneration is permanent and uncontrollable. I employ no person who smokes cigarettes."

Mr. Edison came to this conclusion after a long and characteristically painstaking series of experiments, undertaken with a view of determining (1) if cigarettes were harmful and (2) what was the element in the cigarette that caused the harm. His experiments demonstrated the presence of acrolein in such quantity that the smoke from one cigarette was enough to kill a guinea pig confined in a box.

The importance of this kind of attack upon cigarettes cannot be overestimated. It has a closer appeal to the average, carefree young man than any generalities of moral or medical argument. If this average young man can be convinced that his chance to get a good job is wholly dependent upon whether he abstains from cigarettes or not, the cigarette will have a harder time getting along than ever.

Inquiry in St. Louis and elsewhere over the country seems to indicate that Mr. Edison is only one of several leading practical business men who have tabooed the cigarette. In view of statistics showing that the cigarette business is increasing enormously from year to year, it is rather bewildering to learn that each year more and more business houses are forbidding their employes to smoke the little "pills."

By way of experiment, the other day, a Sunday Post-Dispatch Magazine reporter asked the superintendents of several factories whether their employes were permitted to smoke cigarettes in working hours. In a great majority of the instances, he was informed that smoking of all kinds was prohibited. In each instance where the superintendent was asked his personal theories, he declared he believed excessive cigarette smoking was the most harmful form of indulgence in tobacco smoking.

George W. Simmons of the Simmons Hardware Co. went much farther. He declared that his firm takes the trouble occasionally to point out to its employes the specific evils of the practice. He declared that E. C. Simmons has frequently sent out circular letters, advising the young men that 50 years of business experience has convinced him that the man who doesn't use cigarettes is preferable to the man who does.

"The acrolein in the smoke from one cigarette killed a guinea-pig."

"We will not employ a man if he is what we call a 'fiend,'" said Mr. Simmons. "We do not consider the employment of a man who uses cigarettes excessively a good business investment. We do not want him around."

J. N. Rainey, superintendent of the President plant of the Brown Shoe Co., said that his company prohibited all forms of smoking in work hours, because, principally, it cost the concern too much time. While he did not consider a cigarette now and then as essentially harmful, his observation is that the practice is soon indulged in to excess and that excesses are invariably harmful.

A superintendent of one of the plants of the International Shoe Co. said in substance the same thing, although he admitted that the principal reason for forbidding all smoking at his place is to lessen fire danger.

In a recent anti-cigarette pamphlet sent from St. Louis by Mrs. Eliza B. Ingalls of 5042 Westminster place, appear the following quotations:

"We discourage the use of cigarettes."—Western Electric Co. of Chicago.

"We prefer to have boys who do not smoke, and discourage the habit wherever possible."—Shepard Department Store, Providence, R. I.

"We could not entertain the thought of keeping a cigarette smoker in our employ."—Shepard Norwell Co., Boston.

"It is perfectly evident that cigarettes warp the brain power and efficiency of young men, besides injuring their health."—Gilchrist Co., Boston.

"The habitual use of cigarettes on or off duty is sufficient cause for dismissal."—New Orleans, Mobile & Chicago Railroad Co., Mobile, Ala.

"We do not employ any boy or young man under 21 years of age who smokes cigarettes."—J. C. Ayers Co., manufacturing chemists, Lowell, Mass.

"We do not employ boys who smoke cigarettes."—Larkin Soap Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

"The smoking of cigarettes by employes under 18 years of age is prohibited."—U. S. Department of Agriculture, Weather Bureau, Washington.

"We will not employ anyone who smokes cigarettes."—J. B. Blood Co., Lynn, Mass.

"We do not employ boys and young men addicted to the use of cigarettes."—Marshall Field & Co., Chicago.

"We prohibit the use of cigarettes by boys under 17 years of age."—Montgomery Ward & Co., Chicago.

In another booklet compiled by Mrs. Ingalls many St. Louis physicians are quoted as opposing the use of cigarettes, particularly by boys. Some of them are: Drs. E. F. Brady, C. H. Goodman, W. B. Morgan, G. N. Seidlitz, T. Griswold Comstock, D. M. Gibson, J. E. Buchanan, William G. Moore, Otto Sutter, James N. Campbell and L. Bremer.

A list of individuals who concur with the opinions of these physicians is rather impressing, containing as it does the names of business men, educators, statesmen, scientists, jurists, attorneys, writers. Among those who have condemned phases of the cigarette habit are to be found:

William J. Bryan, Secretary State; David Starr Jordan, Stanford University; Benjamin Ide Wheeler, University of California; Frederick S. Dennis, professor of clinical surgery at Cornell University; Stratton S. Brooks, Superintendent of Public Schools, Boston; Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, formerly pure food expert with the United States Department of Agriculture; Ben Lindsey, Judge of the Juvenile Court of Denver; William H. De Larcy, Judge of the Juvenile Court of Washington, D. C.; Elbert Hubbard, editor and lecturer; Dr. J. H. Kellogg of the Battle Creek Sanitarium, Battle Creek, Mich.; Dr. A. Leight Monroe, dean of the Southwestern Homoepathic College; W. G. Anderson, director of Yale University gynamium.

Most of these believed tobacco in any form rather injurious, but agreed that its most dangerous form is in the cigarette, especially when smoked by growing boys.

Edison's explanation that the chief danger is in the formation of acrolein throws light upon one subject which never before had been cleared up satisfactorily. It was long supposed that cigarette smoking was particularly dangerous because the papers were 'doped." The "dope" was supposed to be some form of opium.

This theory, however, has been proved entirely erroneous. Mrs. Ingalls, who has devoted many years to an anti-cigarette campaign, said recently that she had employed chemists to analyze cigarettes many times, but not once did they discover opium in the wrappers. So firmly convinced is she that there is nothing to the doped paper theory that she has long ceased investigation on that score and is convinced that the tobacco is the injurious thing. Edison's statement about acrolein probably will lead to an entirely new series of experiments.

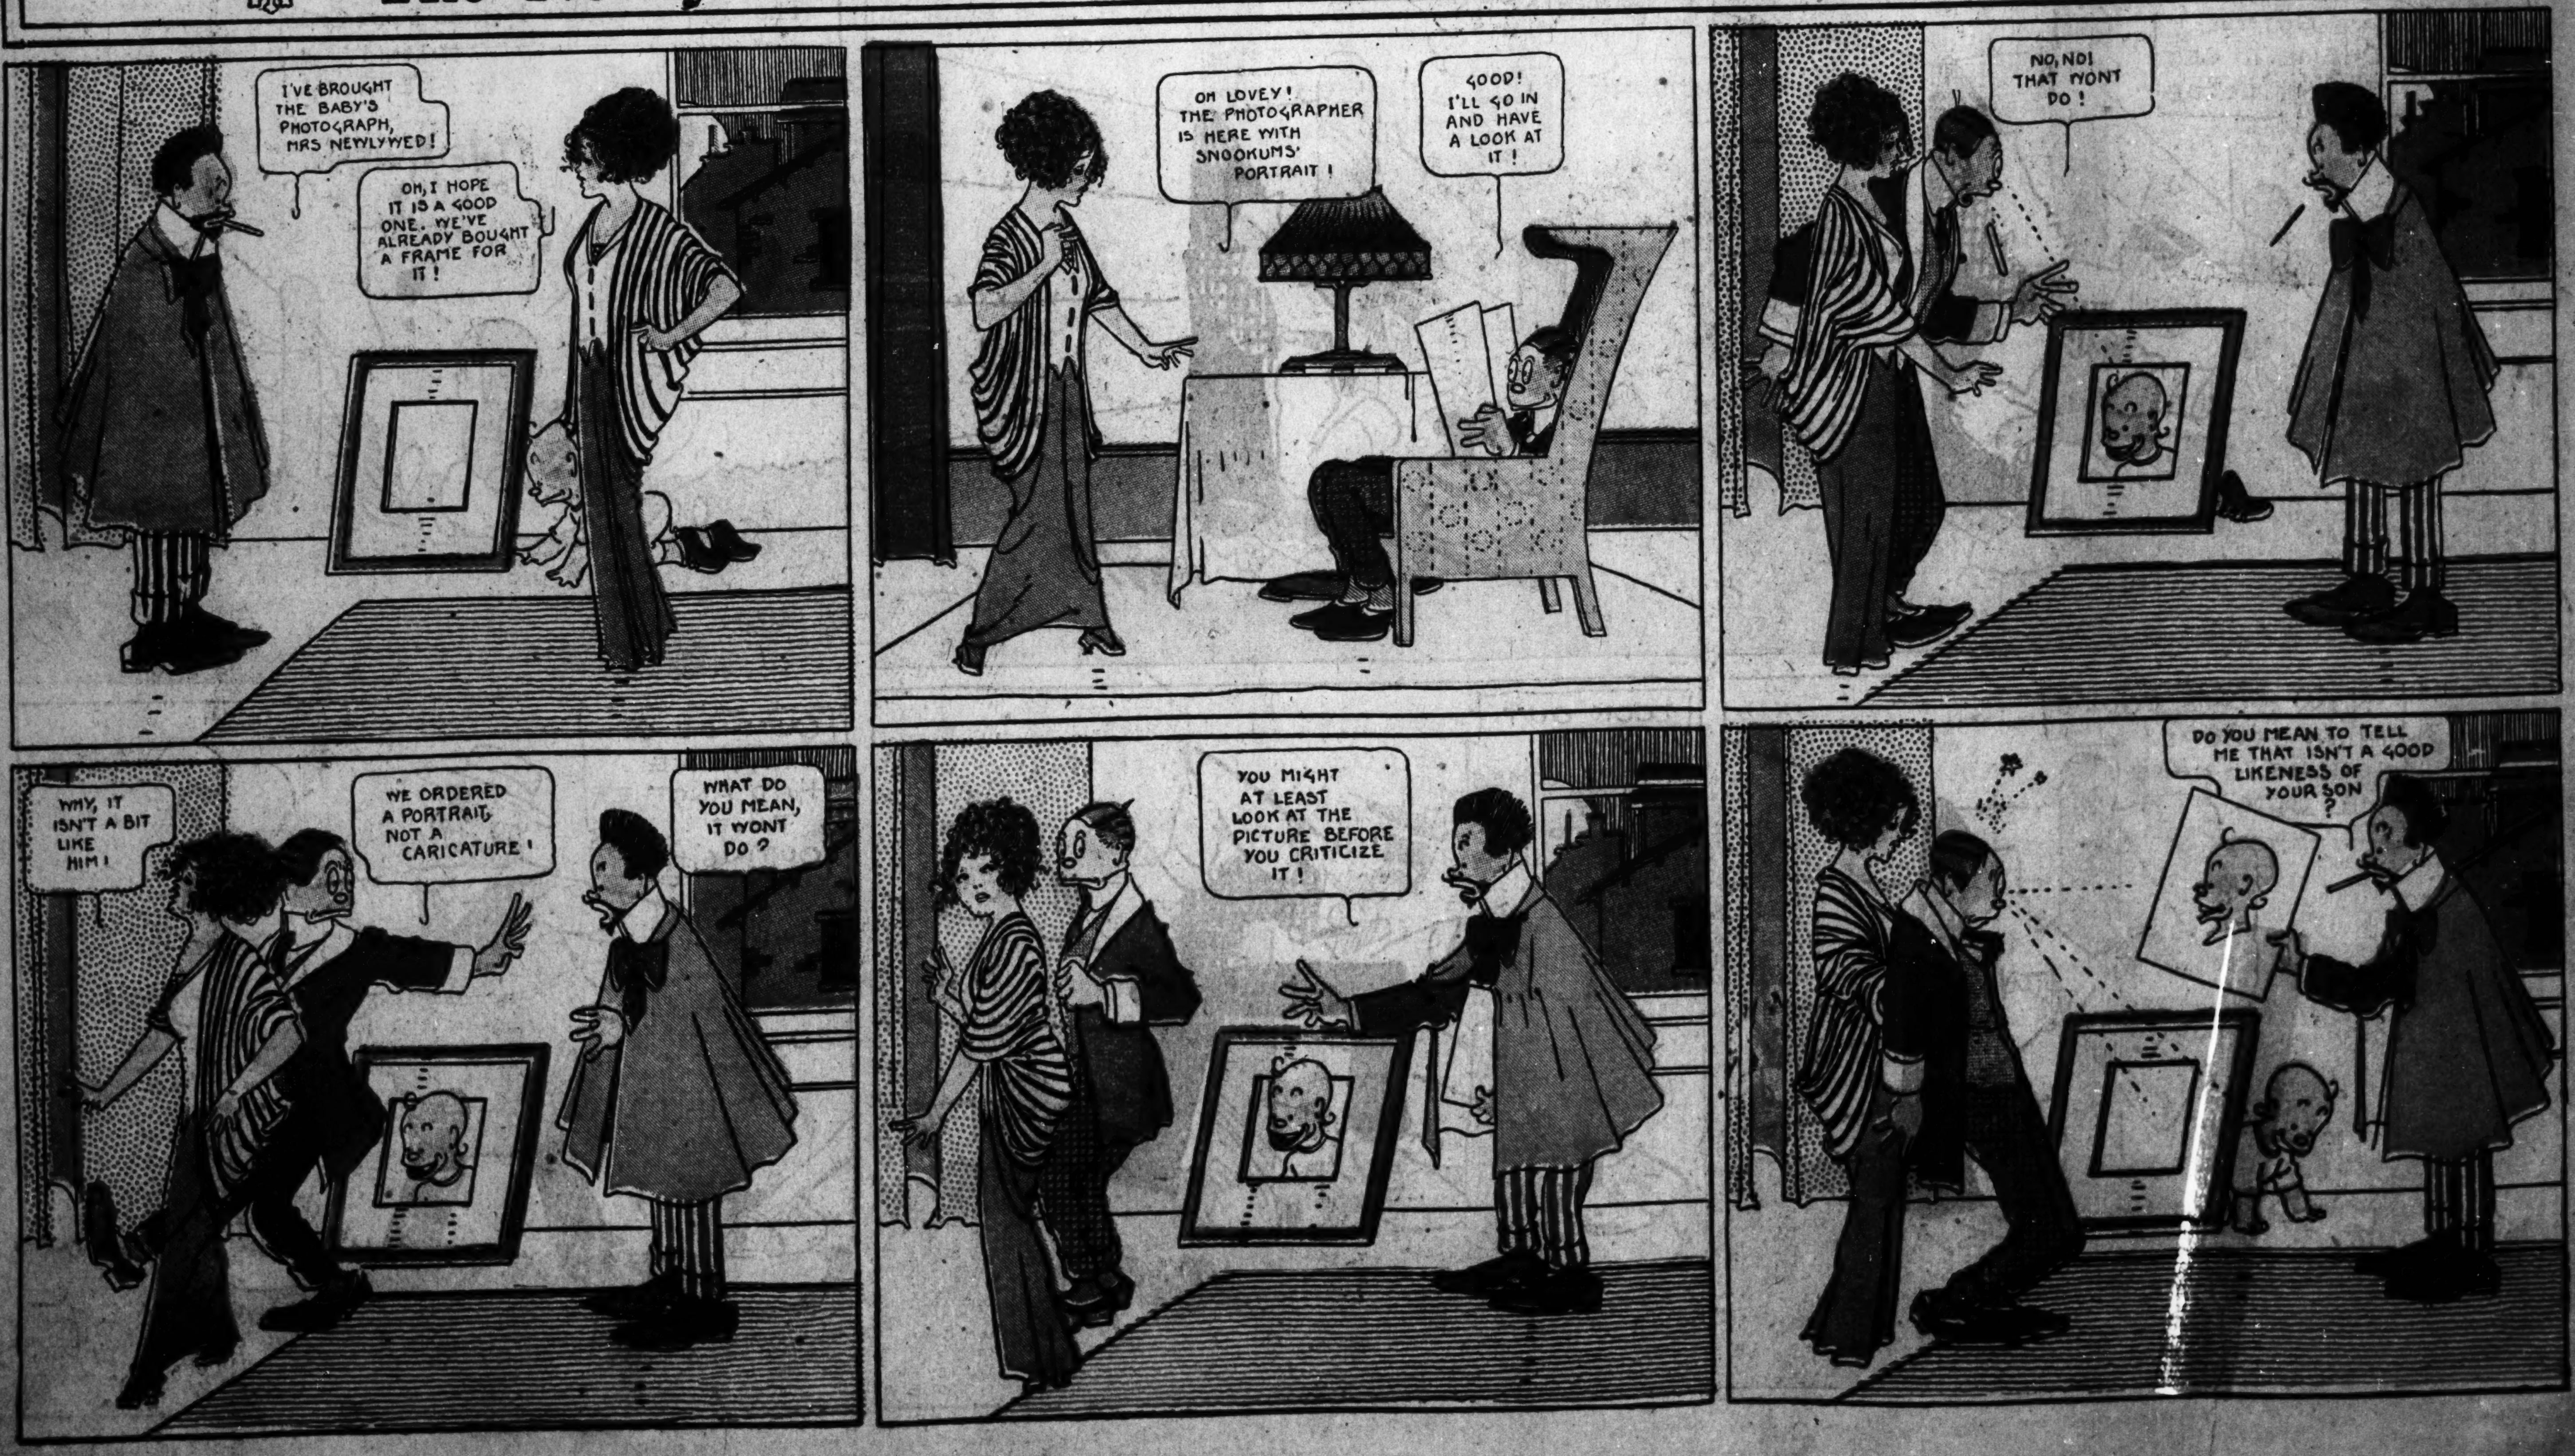
The Newlyweds---No Picture Could Do Snookums Justice



I'VE BROUGHT THE BABY'S PHOTOGRAPH, MRS NEWLYWED!
OH, I HOPE IT IS A GOOD ONE. WE'VE ALREADY BOUGHT A FRAME FOR IT!
OH LOVEY! THE PHOTOGRAPHER IS HERE WITH SNOOKUMS' PORTRAIT!
GOOD! I'LL GO IN AND HAVE A LOOK AT IT!
NO, NO! THAT WONT DO!
WHY, IT ISN'T A BIT LIKE HIM!
WE ORDERED A PORTRAIT, NOT A CARICATURE!
WHAT DO YOU MEAN, IT WONT DO?
YOU MIGHT AT LEAST LOOK AT THE PICTURE BEFORE YOU CRITICIZE IT!
DO YOU MEAN TO TELL ME THAT ISN'T A GOOD LIKENESS OF YOUR SON?
